Health board wants landfill fee raised to $52

By Bill Leitch
Mariner staff

The Board of Health voted Tuesday to increase the landfill permit fee by more than 700 percent.

What now costs residents $7 will be increased to a $52 charge for use of the transfer station.

Although the board has the authority to establish a fee for the transfer station operation, there is a hitch in that policy. It will require a change in the bylaw.

At the October 10 special town meeting voters will be asked to change the town bylaw and delete the landfill fee from the remainder of the town facilities sticker permit. That permit currently allows residents access to the parking lots at Sandy Beach and Government Island and Young's parking lot, as well as the landfill.

The board said the fee, although representing a sharp increase, is reasonable considering that it will cost the town nearly $100 per year per household to dispose of trash once the new transfer station goes into operation.

Member Bill Baird noted the increase totals $1 a week, an amount board members felt would be acceptable to the town.

Selectmen requested that the health board consider increasing residential user fees for the transfer station as one way of obtaining needed revenue for the town. Selectmen have also recommended a hike in the harbor mooring fees, and this week they approved an increase in the ambulance fee.

Health board member Michael Sullivan said he did not agree with the concept of establishing the fee.

"It's just another tax, is what it boils down to," Sullivan said. "The townspeople don't like the Prop. 2 1/2 overrides and they're not going to like this [fee]. If you don't raise taxes, you have to hit them with fees."

Member William Baird said that $52 a year is substantially less expensive than paying a commercial trash hauler an average of about $300 a year.

"You get the services you pay for," said Baird.

The board agreed that residents could drop off materials for recycling without a landfill permit. Member Sharon Becker said that residents should not have to pay $52 to recycle goods.

Joseph Laugelle, landfill superintendent, said that without a gatekeeper at the transfer station it would be difficult to monitor the vehicles.

The board also voted unanimously to establish a $50 per ton user fee for commercial trash haulers. The current fee is $20 per ton. Baird said that since the transfer station will not have scales, the town will use their established average load weights for the three haulers currently using the landfill.

Russell Field, one of the town's three commercial trash haulers, brings about three truck loads of residents' trash to the landfill per week. He said if the town strictly enforces its mandatory recycling bylaw, he will be forced to use another station.

"I can urge my customers to recycle, but I can't force them," Field said.

The board also voted to establish a user fee of $20 for pick-up trucks and trailers, except those with loads of "typical weekly household refuse". A fee of $30 would be charged trucks with a payload of more than 1/2 ton carrying materials other than household trash. The fees will all go into effect simultaneously. The pick-up truck fees will be required to be paid by checks made out to the Town of Cohasset and given to the landfill operator. Cash will not be accepted, the board said.

The board also voted 2-1, with Becker opposed,

Drowning despite heroic efforts

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Despite the efforts of many people who were hoping for a miracle last Thursday evening, a three year-old girl died after she was found unconscious under the water off Bassings Beach in Scituate.

Heroic efforts by relatives, friends and passersby could not save Samantha Lee Hutt, the young Scituate girl who wandered off from a group of relatives and friends during a day of swimming.

There were several children and their parents gathered along the beach that day in Cohasset Harbor. There are no lifeguards on the property which is owned by the Cohasset Conservation Trust and is separated from Cohasset's mainland by about 20 feet of water.

The children separated into groups, each thinking that Samantha had remained with the other group.

According to police, at about 4:30 p.m. an uncle contacted the Cohasset harbormaster to report the missing girl. The harbormaster immediately notified Cohasset police. At that point, according to Officer Maureen Healey, the girl had been

He's denied again, Staszko to fight

Once again, the town has denied local developer Donald Staszko. And once again, he's coming back fighting.

Fearing an influx of traffic attracted by a large discount liquor store, selectmen took only a few seconds Monday night to deny the local developer a liquor license for a store he plans to manage at Cohasset Plaza.

But Staszko, who is an American Airline captain and was unable to attend the meeting, firmly denies it will be a discount store. He will appeal selectmen's decision to the state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission.

"What I'm planning at Cohasset Plaza is about half the size of a discount liquor store," he said Tuesday. "If you include the space needed for storage, bathrooms and equipment, this will be a normal-sized store. If you looked at a discount store, you'd see that mine would be about half the size."

Selectmen voted unanimously to deny a transfer of the license held by Cohasset Central Market to Staszko. Although selectmen voted last February to get rid of the town's third all-alcoholic license owned by the defunct Cohasset Village business, that decision was overturned last May by the state Alcohol Beverages Control Commission.

Staszko applied for a transfer of the license for a 3,500 square-foot store which is now under construction at the Rte. 3A plaza adjacent to the Super Stop and Shop.

Although Staszko's attorney, Charles Humphreys, never said the store would sell discount liquor, selectmen feared that would be the consequence of owning a store with such a large inventory.

Several months ago, Staszko offered to buy Cohasset Central Market business with the liquor

Town celebrates Minot's relighting

At 1:45 last Sunday, Minot's Ledge Lighthouse resumed flashing its famous 1-4-3 signal, while about 200 onlookers at Government Island applauded the moment.

The relighting marked the completion of the Coast Guard's two-year project to renovate the uppermost section of the historic light.

To signal that the lantern had been lighted, as it could not be seen from the shore in daylight, a flare was sent up from the lighthouse and the Coast Guard cutter sounded its siren.

Speaking at the dedication ceremonies, Selectman Chairman Burtram J. Pratt voiced the affection that Cohasset residents have long felt for their lighthouse.

"Ladies and gentlemen, behold, Minot's Ledge Lighthouse — an American treasure, an important aid to navigation, and an equally important aid to romance. We will always love her." Pratt added, "Newly refurbished, she is standing tall once again, just as she has for 130 years, and as she will for centuries to come."

Noel Ripley, Historical Society chairman, was master of ceremonies. Ripley is overseeing a project to construct a replica of the lighthouse's Watch Room on Government Island, using the original granite blocks salvaged from the lighthouse.

Also speaking at the ceremonies were State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Coast Guard Capt. Joseph Bernard, and Herb Jason, long-time Cohasset lobsterman.

Rep. Murray talked about her successful efforts while on the Board of Selectmen to retain the lighthouse's bell for the town of Cohasset which a salvage

Police arrest suspects

Police arrested two suspects last week in connection with a break-in at Noble's Camera Shop on Rte. 3A in which 24 camera and lenses were stolen.

Patrick J. Foley, 23, of 4 Lander's Drive in Quincy, and his wife, Theresa Foley, 24, were arrested by Cohasset police and charged with receiving stolen property. Police confiscated 13 assorted cameras which belonged to the Cohasset store.

Sgt. Brian Noonan and Det. Brian Cogill made the investigation which resulted in a search warrant obtained August 16 for the Lander's Drive address.

According to Sgt. Noonan, an alarm at Noble's was sounded at 10:32 p.m. August 14. When police arrived, they found a large hole cut into the rear wall of the Tedeschi Plaza store. The owners reported missing at least 24 cameras and lenses.

Several other Rte. 3A businesses reported break-ins last week, although police do not believe they are related to the incident at Noble's. Those break-ins are still under investigation, according to police, who said charges may be forthcoming.

Selectmen join lawsuit

Cohasset selectmen will join Brookline's court fight to force the governor to return $210 million to cities and towns throughout the state.

While they agree in principal with Brookline's argument, the Cohasset board members previously stated their belief that the state legislature is as much to blame as the governor for the current fiscal crisis.

Selectman Ned Tebbetts argued there should be a clear cut formula for the state to follow when doling out local aid monies. "We had an oral understanding, but that was broken down and now we have this misunderstanding," he said.

Brookline initiated court action against Gov. Michael Dukakis after he revised the formula for state aid so that money is distributed according to population, not need. As a result of that change, many communities, including Cohasset, received far less aid than they originally anticipated. Since that time, communities have experienced grave problems trying to balance their operating budgets.

In its lawsuit against the governor, Brookline has challenged his authority to take such actions. Other communities, such as Hingham, have joined the lawsuit which is being paid by the town of Brookline.

"Let's not get into this. I think it's ridiculous," Selectman Rocco Laugelle said. He was the lone board member to vote against the effort.

"I don't think it's disrepectful to challenge his decision. And if a judge rules in our favor, it could help us out of this morass," Selectman Burt Pratt explained.

Slower pace in Little Harbor

King Street resident Daniel Cotton has called for selectmen's help in spreading the word about safety in Little Harbor.

In a letter to selectmen, Cotton noted that a few boaters in Little Harbor seem to be unsure about handling a motor boat.

"It would help if word could be gotten out to the young folk, perhaps via the parents who buy the boats, that manuevering a motorboat in Little Harbor is a little like driving a car through Amish country with its horse and wagons," he wrote.

Cotton noted that he and his wife enjoy viewing the sailing and boating in Little Harbor, but he worried that the increased water activity may lead to an accident.

"Please be kind to us slow-moving types," he concluded.

Beach is a different entity

The secretary of the Sandy Beach Assn. wants to make sure that town officials and taxpayers understand that the town facilities fee does not go toward the operation of Sandy Beach.

There has been some discussion by town officials about increasing the sticker fee for parking at the beach.

David Chittim, secretary of the beach association, told the advisory committee chairman in a letter that the beach operation itself is not funded by the town budget. The association operates the beach - including guards, beach cleaner wages, utilities, insurance, supplies, and safety equipment.

Money from the sticker fee for parking, he explained, goes directly to the town's operation of the Sandy Beach parking lot.

"The trustees hope that the advisors and the selectmen will make it clear that parking fees are not beach fees and that any increase in fees would not benefit the beach operations and likely might compete with fund-raising efforts and possibly reduce funds needed for beach safety and maintenance," Chittim stated in the letter.

Ambulance fee raised by selectmen

Over the vociferous objections of Selectmen Burt Pratt and Rocco Laugelle, the board voted Monday night to raise the ambulance fee from $90 to $125.

This was the suggestion of Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon, based on a recommendation by Fire Chief Daniel Brock. Chief Brock completed a survey of area towns in which he found that Cohasset's current ambulance fee is the second-lowest. He recommended a $60 increase.

The board decided on a $125 fee, with additional increments, including $5 per loaded mile and a $5 equipment charge.

"Two hundred and ten dollars to get to the nearest hospital is excessive and not correct," Selectman Pratt said.

Selectman Laugelle agreed, saying that with the extra mileage costs, the firefighters who provide the ambulance service might be tempted not to use the nearest medical facility. "With these new fees, now with this mileage, you'll go all the way to New York," he predicted.

Fire Capt. Robert Silvia disagreed, saying that the EMT's must drive to the nearest hospital unless they are specifically requested by a doctor to travel to another facility.

Selectman Ned Tebbetts reminded the board that the town still must deal with a $104,000 budget deficit. Even if the fire department overtime account is cut further, a deficit will remain unless the town can find additional revenue.

Pratt explained that the fire department overtime account is closer to $50,000 than the $85,000 included in the budget. That automatically drops the town's budget deficit to $115,000.

"Well, I'd be willing to vote a lower (ambulance) fee if the two selectmen (Pratt and Laugelle) can give us specific suggestions where we can find $115,000," Tebbetts said. Both selectmen said they had no suggestions at this time.

"I think $115,000 will be hard to find without some difficult decisions," Tebbetts said. But Laugelle remained adamant, saying other departments, specifically the school department, cut their budgets as required. He opposed an ambulance fee increase, saying it provides a necessary service to many people, particularly older residents.

Pratt also noted that residents he has talked with expressed their opposition to an ambulance fee hike.

The board voted 3-2 to adopt the higher fee schedule which will become effective immediately.

Tickets available for concert

The Friends of Cohasset School Sports is selling tickets to the Crosby and Nash concert at the South Shore Music Circus.

The concert will be held Thursday, Aug. 31 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $40 and $32.50 and will benefit the Cohasset school sports program.

Pompeo earned the gold

Brian Pompeo recently earned a gold medal in the 1989 Bay State Summer Games as a member of the Southeast Boy's Ice Hockey team.

His contribution (five goals, two assists for seven points in four games) enabled Southeast to capture their first gold ever in the eight years of the games (hockey was recognized as a sport three years ago). Southeast beat their archrivals, Coastal, 5-2, in the championship game at Quincy Youth Arena July 16.

Although Pompeo did not collect a point in the finals, his style of play was instrumental throughout, particularly in Southeast's first two victories.

On July 13, he scored two goals, helping Southeast to pull out a 5-4 squeaker over Northeast. On the following day, Pompeo again added two goals, along with two assists for a 6-3 victory over West. In fact, Pompeo and his linemates, Hull's Mike Richardson (hat trick) and Hingham's Tim Griffin (one), accounted for all of Southeast's goals.

In the 7-4 rout over Metropolitan July 15, he notched a goal that allowed Southeast to waltz into the finals.

"It was a hard fought tournament," said Pompeo, who is transferring from Cohasset High to Belmont Hill Prep this fall. "Overall, I'm real happy for the coaches because they deserve it."

"All we heard throughout the series is that Southeast finally won one."

Selectmen's briefs . . .

A vote for concrete

It was not unanimous, but selectmen decided the sidewalk surrounding the renovated common pond should be made of longer-lasting concrete, and not bituminus asphalt as originally planned.

Only Selectman Burt Pratt objected to the proposal, saying it was "ridiculous" to spend about $5,000 more on the concrete. The asphalt would cost about $2,000 to $3,000 which will cover the entire four and a-half foot wide perimeter of the pond.

Although there is enough money available to use the more expensive material, Pratt said he's worried that the gunite work being done on the pond walls will exceed the original cost estimates. And if there is money left after the renovation is completed, Pratt said there are other projects that need attention on the town common.

Although the remaining four selectmen favored the concrete proposal, they suggested that residents could donate money to offset the extra costs.

"Here we go again with more fees for the residents," Selectman Pratt moaned. "You're making a serious mistake."

But Selectman Ned Tebbetts said he would be the first to make a modest donation to the fundraising - about 1/20 of what the entire board of selectmen should donate, he joked.

Anyone who would like to contribute to the common pond project is encouraged to contact the selectmen's office at town hall.

Tickets for Aug. 31 concert

Selectman Rocco Laugelle claims he is the first selectman to purchase tickets to the August 31 South Shore Music Circus concert to benefit the Cohasset school sports program.

Laugelle attended Monday night's meeting directly after purchasing a pair of tickets to the David Crosby and Graham Nash concert. Proceeds from the sale of 500 tickets for seats in the first eight rows will be used to offset the cost of the school's athletic budget which was slashed by $50,000 this year.

Athletic Director Clark Chatterton told selectmen there are some tickets remaining for the August 31 show which begins at 8 p.m. They are available by calling Chatterton at the Music Circus, or by calling the high school at 383-6111.

"Who is this Crosby and Nash?" Selectman Burt Pratt inquired Monday night. He was told by board members that the performers are part of a music group that originated back in the "Woodstock" era.

"That's not my kind of jazz," said Pratt, a prolific collector of big band records and memorabilia.

Committee vacancies

There are four vacancies on the Cohasset Advisory Committee. Anyone who is interested in applying for a position on that board should contact the selectmen's office at town hall.

There is also one vacancy on the Housing Partnership Committee. Anyone who would like to serve on that board should contact the selectmen's office at town hall.

Gjesteby named to board

Martha Gjesteby, Cohasset selectmen's liaison to the Massachusetts Municipal Association, has been named to the association's public works, utilities and transportation board.

Gjesteby is a member of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen.

Proposed bylaw changes

Animal Control and Shelter Site Committee member Ed Bilecki talked to selectmen Monday night about the proposed revision of the animal control laws.

The bylaw will be included in the October 10 special town meeting.

Bilecki reviewed many of the proposed changes, which included specific increases in fees for licenses, boarding an impounded dog, reclaiming an impounded dog, and violation of the animal control law.

Selectmen Burt Pratt and Diana Kornet said they were opposed to including specific fees in the bylaw. Those fees, Selectman Pratt noted, are set at the discretion of selectmen which does not require approval by town meeting.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon noted that fines are set according to town bylaw, although fees are established by selectmen.

Bilecki explained that the committee is trying to make the animal control department self-supporting. That can be done, he said, by bringing fees in line with surrounding communities.

Selectmen will continue to review the proposed bylaw changes at their September 5 meeting.

Application is extended

Selectmen voted Monday night to extend the deadline for applications for the position of building inspector/zoning officer.

Donald Robbins resigned from the office after he was appointed building inspector for the town of Hingham. He is filling in on an emergency basis in Cohasset until a replacement is found.

Thirty-one applications arrived before the original August 17 deadline, and four arrived late, according to Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson told selectmen they had the discretion to extend the deadline, or they could accept late applications.

Selectmen decided to extend the application deadline to August 31, and they will advertise the position one more time in the Sunday edition of The Boston Globe.

Relighting event praised

Selectman Burt Pratt, who participated in Sunday's relighting of Minot's Light, publicly thanked the Cohasset Historical Society for the excellent program they sponsored.

"It was an excellent effort," Pratt said, noting the cooperation of the Scituate Coast Guard, Harbormaster Irving Gadow, and the Cohasset Tree and Park Dept.

Selectman Pratt also mentioned U.S. Congressional seal was sent by Congressman Gerry Studds, but the message was not read during the ceremony. The letter contained Studds' personal memories of sailing off Minot's Light as a youngster, Pratt said.

Mt. Blue reopened this week after one year

By Margie Kelley
Mariner staff

The Mount Blue Spring at Wompatuck State Park was officially re-opened to the public Monday, one year after routine water tests showed a high count of coliform bacteria in the water, according to Department of Environmental Management(DEM) spokesman Peter O'Neil.

The spring was closed last July when the bacteria was first discovered. O'Neil said the source of the problem was ground run-off which had been leaching into the well.

"The rain would cause water to run into the spring, dragging with it everything that was on the ground," O'Neil said.

DEM engineer Mark Cullinan and his staff designed improvements to the spring area to protect the water supply, which included the installation of a waterproof material around the foundation so that ground water can't infiltrate the well.

The land around the spring was re-graded to cause any run-off to travel away from the well and fences were installed around the spring house and collection area, O'Neil said.

In addition, a section of nearby campgrounds, which may have contributed to the bacteria-laden run-off, has been closed. The spring, collection area, and the distribution lines were also cleaned with a chlorinated solution.

"We did $15,000 worth of repair work," O'Neil said. "We finished the work over a month ago and were waiting for the sign-off from the Department of Environmental Protection."

After testing the water quality a dozen times in the last few weeks, the Department of Environmental Protection(DEP) gave officials at Wompatuck the go-ahead to open the spring on Monday afternoon.

"After a dozen consecutive tests with no bacteria readings, we got the sign-off Monday afternoon," said DEM spokesman Cynthia Barakatt.

Officials said they were encouraged by the good results, especially because the tests were taken after heavy rains. The tests revealing the high bacteria levels last year were taken under the same conditions, which means the problem with run-off has been fixed.

In the past, O'Neil said as many as 400 people have visited the park each day for spring water. Wompatuck is open from 7:30 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. through the end of the camping season.

INPUT ON BATES HALL REMODELLING NEEDED - Under the direction of the Board of Trustees, Architect's drawings of the existing building and a space utilization study have been completed. They are now seeking input on the next step: that of collecting ideas, visions, suggested alterations, etc. from as many of the members as interested. Please feel free to jot down your ideas, sketches, etc. and forward them to the Trustees via Hubert Vanderlugt or the church office.

THANK YOU FOR YOUR RECENT CONTRIBUTIONS TO WELLSPRING (Hull) - Your support is important for several reasons. Your financial support enables us to continue our work, to expand our programs, and to begin new endeavors. Equally important is your personal interest and involvement in our community through the activities of Wellspring. One of our goals is to be a place where neighbors meet, either physically or by desire, supporting each other in building a stronger community, based on respect and good quality of life for all. Thank you for being a part of the "Heartbeat of Hull."

Town denies Staszko a license, but he'll fight it license, although selectmen later revoked that license. When he offered to lease the business from Cohasset Savings Bank, the property owners refused his request.

According to Humphreys, Staszko, a 23-year resident of Cohasset, would be managing the liquor store and would be on the premises at least 20 hours a week. Staszko is a pilot for American Airlines and is a local developer. Humphreys detailed Staszko's experience in the liquor business, although Selectman Ned Tebbetts pointed out that Staszko was only a teenager when he worked for an uncle's liquor store in Westfield.

Humphreys noted there is a public need for a liquor store in that area which currently attracts about 3,000 cars a day. A liquor store at the plaza, combined with with several other planned stores, including the Bank of Boston, a jewelry store and a dry goods store, will bring in about 700 additional cars each day.

He pointed out that since the lights have been installed at the entrance to the plaza, there have been no accidents in that area of Rte. 3A.

Staszko, he said, is the town's single largest taxpayer, paying more than $100,000 in taxes for the supermarket and $35,000 for the new plaza. He is a recreation commissioner, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and has generously donated to various town projects, including underwater gear for the fire department.

"Mr. Staszko always delivers more than he promises,' Humphreys said, noting that despite many legal hurdles, the developer has replaced the once-blighted lot with an attractively-landscaped commercial property.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle told Humphreys at the outset of the hearing that he was against transferring the license. "I voted to do away with the license - I tried to lose it," he said. Humphreys argued that the ABCC ordered selectmen to transfer the license within 90 days of their May decision. But selectmen said the ABCC ruling did not mention a transfer, but ordered them to make some decision about license within 90 days.

Selectman Burt Pratt wondered how the American Airline pilot would find 20 hours a week to manage the liquor store. But Humphreys said his flying schedule would not interfere with Staszko's commitment to the business.

Charles Kane, a resident of Fair Oaks Lane, voiced his support for the transfer, saying as a businessman he felt selectmen voted money out of the town when they decided to let the Central Market license expire. "This man (Staszko) has done a beautiful job for this town," he said.

Marie Higgins of North Main Street also defended Staszko's application, noting he does not make statements he doesn't keep.

Atty. Loretta McCabe, representing Cohasset Liquors owner Peter Logan, voiced his objections to the license transfer.

Citing a court decision involving the town of Sudbury, McCabe said a judge ruled that a license can only be transferred from an exisiting business. Since Cohasset Central Market is not an existing business, the license can not be transferred.

She also noted that the decision to transfer the license rests solely with the board, and not the ABCC. McCabe also questioned whether three all-alcoholic licenses are necessary within a mile radius of each other.

"The board was correct last February to revoke the license. The ABCC superceded its authority by coming back to this board," she said. "The authority for this license is with the board, not the ABCC. So I suggest this board base its decision on the Sudbury decision, and deny the application."

She suggested that if the license is not transferred, Staszko could come back and apply for a new license. McKay presented selectmen with a petition against the new liquor store which was signed by about 275 Cohasset residents.

Also speaking in opposition to the license transfer was Ray Riddle, former owner of Riddle's convenience store now known as Robert's located at the Livingston Plaza. With 30 years of business experience, Riddle said he believes the new Cohasset Plaza store will be selling discount liquors.

"This is not a normal liquor store," he said. "And I'd like to challenge the need for this store. I have tremendous questions whether it could survive. You'd have to do one to two million dollars (in sales) a year to survive." Selectmen also received a letter from Joanne Chittick of South Main Street, outlining her opposition to the transfer.

Humphreys countered their arguments, saying, "Compare Staszko's facility with his (Logan's) facility. Look at the building. The applicant has proven what he can do. If he (Staszko) can build a better store, then he has a right to benefit the consuming public. I'm not saying he's going to have a discount store, but by volume he can present better prices."

Selectman Diana Kornet noted the significant difference between the license once used by the small Cohasset Village store as an accessory to its business, and the proposed 3,500 square-foot liquor store. "I perceive this as a discount store - something vastly different. I think selectmen have the right to decide if they want to attract that kind of traffic and that kind of service. I do not want a 3,500 square-foot liquor store in the town of Cohasset."

Without further discussion, the board voted 5-0 to deny the transfer of the license.

LDS Church services

Bro. Larry Hills of Cape Cod, a member of the Stake High Council, will speak this Sunday, Aug. 27 at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 379 Gardner St., Hingham.

Bro. Hills' sermon will be the Lord's 9th Commandment: Thou Shalt not Bear False Witness, etc. He will emphasize the quality of "perfect" honesty in a world where lying, cheating, stealing have become so commonplace. As the Book of Mormon teaches, Honesty is the companion of truth, dishonesty of falsehood; honesty is of God, dishonesty of the devil.

Visitors young and old are welcome to attend the 9 a.m. sacrament meeting and remain for Sunday school classes for all age groups that follows. Bishop Bradley K. Johnson is spiritual leader of the congregation.

Board wants landfill fee hike

to go to bid for a commercial hauler to transfer trash from Cohasset to SEMASS in Rochester. The board has already gone to bid twice. Most recently, the four bidders were Browning Ferris Industries, Michael Del Prete, Michael Gratta, and All Cape Disposal Inc. BFI was the low-bidder at $374 per load roundtrip to SEMASS, with the cost to increase by about five percent per year over the five years of the contract. But BFI did not submit bids on every item that the board requested. Board members said that they wanted complete bids on services and trailers, on the per mile cost for tractors to pull trailers to a site other than SEMASS in the event that SEMASS shuts down, and on the rental of trailers to use on site.

Becker was in favor of awarding the bid to BFI. She said that going to bid again would force the town to continue to use the landfill after the transfer station was completed. The station is expected to be completed around the third week in September, according to board members. Joseph Laugelle said that the landfill is already filled to capacity, although some board members disagreed.

Since there would be little difference in cost whether the town purchased trailers and contracted for services only, or contracted for both services and trailers, board members agreed that the town should not get involved in hauling its own trash at this time. Also, if the town contracts for trailers as well as for services, it will not have to deal with possible tractor-trailer breakdowns, or with fines incurred by the transporters.

missing for about 20 minutes.

Ed Thompson of the Cohasset Sailing Club, which is located on Government island across from the beach, was towing a sailboat with Rev. Gary Ritts of Cohasset when they joined the search.

Police said Rev. Edward Atkinson of Cohasset, who was in a rowboat at the time, also assisted as the group looked for the lost child. They found her body several minutes later, floating beneath the surface of the water near the shore.

By the time police arrived, several people were administering CPR, including James Sheerin, a former Cohasset firefighter and EMT, Cohasset harbor businessman Richard Figueiredo, and Rev. Atkinson. She was carried onto a pier at Government Island where CPR was continued, and was then transported by Scituate ambulance to South Shore Hospital.

Several hours later, the girl was pronounced dead.

Samantha was the daughter of Nancy and Peter Hutt of 296 Clapp Road in Scituate. Peter Hutt is a lobsterman in Cohasset Harbor.

She leaves her parents, and a six year-old sister, Katherine. Her maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Libby of Cohasset, and her paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Ted Hutt of Beverly.

A private funeral service was held this past weekend at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset.

□ Zachary Hochkeppel was awarded the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institutes Rensselaer Medal for outstanding achievements in the study of mathematics and science.

□ How about Lillian Murray, she certainly proved that she was ready to go back to school... which she did at the age of twenty something. She graduated Cum Laude from UMass Boston Harbor campus, having majored in public planning and political science. Congratulations to you Lillian, glad to see that all of your hard work paid off!

□ While on the subject of the Murray family, we are happy to report that Phil is home from his recent stay in the hospital and feeling great! As the old saying goes, "it's hard to keep a good man down," and Phil is no exception!

□ Beth and Ed Goff were in town recently. As you know, they live in Sarasota (Florida) now, so there were a lot of happy people when they were here. Janet Figuierdo was surely delighted to see them, and Beth and Ed had a fine time with all of their grandchildren. They were here with their grandson, Jason Michael, Rhonda and Mike Daunghey. Rhonda recently gave birth to a daughter, Meagan Elizabeth, she and her family live in St. Augustine. This year is a big one for Beth and Ed; they will be celebrating their 20th anniversary in November!

□ Be sure to be part of the Cohasset School Sports fundraising efforts, and have fun at the same time. There will be a concert at the South Shore Music Circus on August 31st, and producer Ed Kasses has been kind enough to give the committee the first eight rows. The tickets are $40 or $32.50 each, and the tickets are moving right along. Call Clark at 383-6100, 383-9850 or 383-0560. Help Cohasset Sports!

□ Charles Higginson has been selected to receive the Coast Guard Meritorious Public Service Award, one of the highest civilian awards granted by the Coast Guard. He was recognized for his service as Foreign Policy Advisor to the Commandant of the Coast Guard.

Cohasset Little League ace Joey Magner, as he looked on the mound during tournament play held earlier this month in Hingham.

□ Cohasset High School won't be the same without Bill Fallon teaching and coaching! Bill has been appointed as the Girls Basketball Coach at University of Mass Boston. Our loss is certainly their gain! Congratulations, Bill, and good luck. You can be sure that tons of loyal Cohasset fans will be rooting for you and watching your record!

□ Happy birthday to Norman Swain...

□ Congratulations to Kevin and Margaret Lewis, who had a son on July 17th at Quincy City Hospital.

□ Maura Dunn has been prompted to supervisory consultant in the Management Consulting Services group in the Boston office of Coopers and Lybrand, the international accounting and consulting firm. Ms. Dunn specializes in serving clients in systems development, and is a member of the Society Management.

□ Fred M. Dellorfano III is now with the Cohasset Office of the Jack Conway Company as a sales associate.

□ And, we salute Claire Watts, who was honored for outstanding first quarter sales. She is currently in the top 20 percent of the firm's 450 brokers.

□ Ed Kasses, producer at the South Shore Music Circus, did a nice deed last week! He gave five tickets to the kids that were here from England teaching our locals the finer points of soccer. It is certain that those guys will return with high praise for Massachusetts and most especially Cohasset!!

□ Congratulations to Jeffrey Waal, who was elected Chairman of the conservation commission. It is a tough job, with a lot of work involved (as are all town committees), one wonders where people get the time and energy!

□ The next time you go to Government Island, take a look at the harbormaster's "shack." It looks wonderful! He even put a deck on the back, and has painted it. Cohasset got more than we bargained for when he was appointed!!

□ Phil Mahoney is off to Cornell, and back to the football field. There are some Cornell games to be aired this fall, we will have to watch for our "conquering hero" to make some fine plays! Best of luck to you Phil!

□ This is the last week that you can register your pets if you haven't already done so, don't forget! Otherwise you will have to pay a $25 fine!

□ Finally, isn't it great to have Minots Light flashing again! 1-4-3 everyone!

□ Don't forget to call with your latest piece of news, we know there is plenty out there!

Recreation program schedule

The Cohasset Recreation Department's Band Concert, scheduled for Aug. 15, has been postponed until Tuesday, Aug. 29, at 7:30 p.m. at the town common.

The 30-piece South Shore Concert Band will perform under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh.

Concerts are free of charge, open to the public, and this year supported from grants of the South Shore Play House Associates, Inc. Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, and the Mass Arts Lottery.

Provide your own lawn chairs or blankets and insect repellent.

The Cohasset Soccer Club and Recreation Department will conduct registrations for fall, 1989, recreation soccer clinics and leagues on the following days, times and locations:

Saturday, Aug. 26, Deer Hill School, 10 a.m. to noon; Saturday, Sept. 9, Milliken Field, noon to 2 p.m.; Sunday, Sept. 10, Deer Hill, 9 a.m. to noon.

The Sunday registration is in conjunction with the Soccer Club's annual Pancake Breakfast. Tickets are $3, and everyone is cordially invited.

The 1989 soccer program has been restructured to meet changing community needs. Children of any ability groups are encouraged to participate in clinics and leagues which are scheduled for Saturday mornings during the fall.

The fee for either the clinics or leagues is $25 for the first child in a family, and $20 for the second and subsequent family members. The program is for boys and girls in grades K through grade 8. This year, no late registration, after noon, Sunday, Sept. 10, will be accepted.

Grades K through 2 will meet Saturday mornings for one hour, for a seven-week instructional soccer program. A tee-shirt will be provided as part of the program fee for clinics only. Clinics will begin Saturday, Sept. 16 at your assigned time, based upon age.

League play, for boys and girls in grades 3 through 8, will begin Saturday, Sept. 16. A separate fee of $5 must be charged for team shirts and the shirt check must be separate. Discounts of fees are available between the clinics and leagues.

Eighth grader's will not be a part of the in-house league, but will play in a separate regional league. All other grades, (3-7), will play in-house games only.

Jimmy Fund softball benefit

Many thanks to the town employees and officials from Scituate and Cohasset who participated in the Jimmy Fund Softball Benefit Game, held Saturday, Aug. 5.

Each year the proceeds from this event are donated to the Sidney Farber Cancer Institute on behalf of the participating towns and individual sponsors. Scituate Selectman, Jerry Dwight, has been the organizer of the Softball Benefit for a number of years.

Thanks to the Marshfield Angelo's Store, Joseph Amorelli, manager; Spensely Chevrolet, A.J. Antoine, representative; Reynold's Package Store of Scituate, and Cohasset selectman, Burtrum J. Pratt.

Special thanks to Scituate selectman Jerry Dwight for his continued efforts and support of this program, Jean Gilbert, Scituate recreation director, for her time and effort coordinating this event, and Paul Scott for operating the concessions.

Farm Day celebrated Sept. 23

Plans for the annual Daniel Webster Farm Day, sponsored by the Massachusetts Audubon's South Shore Sanctuaries, are underway.

It's all happening at 11 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 23, with a rain date scheduled Sept. 24.

Volunteers are needed to help with the various chores such as supervising children's activities, helping with ticket sales and admissions, manning the white elephant table or cider press, collecting dried plants, donating baked goods or preparing and selling food.

And, of course, there is a need for a cleanup crew.

There will be hayrides, face painting, children's games and other activities.

Janet's Country Kitchen bake sale and craft displays will be featured.

A beekeeper, a carver, a papermaker and a ciderpresser will be on hand for demonstrations.

Participants will have a chance to observe farm animals, learn how to make attractive wild weed bouquets, decorate pumpkins and make fish prints.

Free walk-for-wildlife T-shirts will be given to participants who collect at least $25 worth of pledges, and a pair of Rock Sport walking shoes, donated by Brodil's Bootery, will be given to the individual who raises the most money in pledges.

To register for the walk or pick up pledge forms, call the Audubon office at 837-9400 or stop in at the center at 2000 Main St., Marshfield.

Best bet for now

A group of residents have taken it upon themselves to ensure the continuation of the Cohasset school sports program.

They include several parents, a couple of non-parents, teachers and administrators. They are people concerned that cuts in the school's athletic budget will create a program only for the more affluent residents of this town.

At this point, $50,000 has been taken out of the athletic budget for this coming school year. A good portion of that reduction can be made up if students at the junior/senior high school pay a user fee for every sport in which they participate.

Other school systems are implementing this system, and as time goes, many more will join rank. The days of free sports programs in the public schools are coming to a close.

But without additional financial support, the user fee for Cohasset students could be as high as $100 per sport. That means a family with two children could be paying as much as $600 a year for their children's athletic participation.

Some families, even in Cohasset, can not afford such an extravagance.

The fundraising group, known as Friends of Cohasset School Sports, is organizing a series of fundraisers. Their hope is to raise about $30,000 for the year, an amount that will make a vast difference in determining that user fee amount.

Their first event will take place August 31. Through the efforts of Athletic Director Clark Chatterton, who also works at the Music Circus in the summer, the executive producer there has consigned 500 seats to the organization.

The Friends of Cohasset School Sports is now selling tickets to the David Crosby and Graham Nash concert for $40 and $32.50. All seats are in the first eight rows of the Music Circus, and all profits from the sale will benefit the sports program. Tickets are available by calling the high school at 383-6111 or the Music Circus at 383-9850.

Throughout the year, the fundraising organization will be holding various functions to benefit the sports program.

It's a sad commentary that once again, our public schools are forced to rely on the financial support of a private organization. As school committee member Russ Reidy has said many times, public school programs should be supported by the schools, not by private organizations. It is the responsibility of every taxpayer in this town to support its public schools and the programs that are offered within those schools.

It is not an ideal way for public schools to operate, we agree. If our schools are to offer a quality program, we must all bear that financial responsibility. But this year constitutes an emergency situation. Without the help of these residents, many of our sports programs are doomed.

But we should learn from this lesson, and next year we must be prepared to share the responsibility of our public school system among all members of this community. If we want sports to continue in our schools, then its success must be borne by us all.

Historical museums open for the summer

The Cohasset Historical Society's two museums on Elm Street at Cohasset Center are continuing their summer season.

The Capt. John Wilson Historical House and the Maritime Museum currently are open each day except Mondays from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Admission to the museums is $1.50 per building for adults. Society members and their guests are admitted free of charge.

The two historical buildings offer an unusual and significant view of the history of this small New England town itself now a big-city suburb but once a thriving and self-sufficient maritime and agricultural community. Cohasset's history extends to early colonial days and much of that history is preserved in the Society's museums.

In the Capt. Wilson House one finds an extensive collection of home furnishings; furniture, kitchenware, toys and artworks from the old homes of the town, displayed in an early 19th century environment. The 1810 sea captain's house remains the only primitive house still unmodernized in Cohasset and its ambience is that of a time long past.

Constructed in the year 1810 by housewright David Nichols and purchased in that year by Capt. Wilson for $475 the house remained in the Wilson family for more than a century. Cohasset businessman William Hamilton McGaw bought the old sea captain's home in 1912, and in 1936 presented it to the Historical Society in memory of his late wife Priscilla Lothrop Collier. Unique in the Wilson House is the second floor kitchen with its cooking fireplace. Originally the house held a small ship chandlery or marine supply store on its first floor, run by Capt. Wilson. Also unusual on the upstairs level is an antique "corner clock" or grandfather's clock built into one corner of the room. Originally found in the Samuel Bates House across the street the old corner clock was given to the Society many years ago. On the first floor the antique method of building construction, called post and beam, is easily visible. There is evidence that great beams of the structure had been used previously, perhaps in an older barn, and "recycled" by the builder into his village home.

Adjacent to the Wilson House is the Society's Maritime Museum, repository for large collections of artifacts, documents, prints, paintings and charts relating to Cohasset's long maritime era. By the mid-19th century this was a seafaring town, with numerous large "mackerel catcher" schooners calling Cohasset their home port. Fishing, mercantile trade, shipbuiding, lifesaving and salvage formed a major area of activity in the town and the Maritime Museum's exhibits reflect that bygone era when Cohasset's frontier was the Atlantic Ocean.

Generations of Cohasset young men went to sea to crew upon and often to command the mackerel schooners, and some rose to become Master of ocean-spanning packet vessels and clippers whose destinations often were the distant ports of Europe, Asia and South America. In the Maritime's collections one finds 19th century models of square-riggers, intricate wooden carvings and quarterboards from the mackerel schooners, antique fishing equipment, the contents of a Captain's sea chest, charts of our coastline, as well as relics from the many shipwrecks that occurred locally. The town's volunteer lifesavers and the Massachusetts Humane Society's lifesaving station at Cohasset are represented, and the story of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse, both the ill-fated first lighthouse and the famous second light, is told in displays.

On the Maritime Museum's second floor numerous collections of general historical nature are to be found. Housewright's tools, early agricultural implements, a cordwainer's desk with tools and shoes, stone tools of the early Amerind tribes inhabiting "Quonhassit," old school desks and books, and items from an early apothecary's shop are among the varied exhibits to be seen. The building itself is an 18th century ship chandlery, built by Samuel Bates for his fishing venture at Ship Cove. The Bates family were shipowners and merchants for several generations.

Last of the Bates family to own the wharf on Border Street and its adjunct buildings was John, whose mackerel schooners numbered more than twenty, with five longer square-riggers operating from Cohasset and Boston "in the foreign trade." By 1900 the old family wharf and its property had been purchased by Cohasset resident Clarence W. Barron. In the mid-1950's C.W. Barron's granddaughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. William Cox, presented the old chandlery to the Historical Society and moved it to Cohasset Center as an adjacent neighbor to the Capt. Wilson Historical House.

Each of the Society's two buildings at Cohasset Center presents numerous facets of the history of this early New England village in an appropriate setting. Plan to visit the Capt. John Wilson House and Maritime this summer. The museums will be open through the end of September.

Rotary hosts Boy Scouts

Monday night, Aug. 21, was the annual get together of the Cohasset Rotary Club and Boy Scout Troop #28.

The Cohasset Rotary participates in many town activities, and especially enjoys its sponsorship Troop #28. The troop recently returned from a camping/-canoeing trip in Northern Maine and New Hampshire. Among their adventures were learning basic canoeing and safety skills.

At the dinner, several troop members shared their stories of the trip. They told the Rotary about white water canoeing, spotting moose, and kayaking. Both the Rotary Club and the Boy Scouts enjoyed the get together and look forward to sharing more experiences in the future.

Golf tourney Sept. 21

The Third Annual Gregory Curtis Golf Tournament will take place on Thursday, September 21, 1989, at the Braintree Municipal Golf Course.

The Florida-style tournament (fivesomes) will benefit a performing arts and a humanitarian scholarship given to high school seniors in memory of Greg Curtis, a Braintree teenager who died accidentally in 1986.

The fee is $300. per team, or $60. per person and includes the greens fee, two golf carts per team, refreshments (a cook-out on the course), and a sit-down dinner immediately following at the Braintree Sons of Italy Hall on King Hill Road.

A new car will be awarded to the winner of a Hole-In-One contest, and other prizes will be awarded for the longest drive and closest to the pin contests.

All golfers should be at the course by 8:45 a.m. for a shotgun start. Hurry! The deadline for registration is August 31, 1989.

This is a super opportunity to have a great time while helping a very worthy cause.

For registration information, call Debbie or Theresa Collins at 848-0485, or 848-4066.

Town celebrates relighting

group had tried to claim. The bell is now mounted at Government Island, near the granite pavements where the blocks were first fitted before being transported to Minot's Ledge.

Capt. Bernard said that the lighthouse was the "measure of the technology of its day" when it was built, from 1855-1860.

"Its survival for all these years is a testimony to the soundness of the engineering design and the quality of the workmanship," Bernard said. "I am particularly pleased with the restoration that's been done on this historic light. It was needed and it was done correctly. The community interest in maintaining and preserving the history of Minot's Light is tremendous. I congratulate you all."

Renovation on the lighthouse was begun during the summer of 1987, after a Coast Guard inspection of the 114-foot high tower revealed many fractures and cracks in the walls of the Watch Room. The topmost part of the tower was disassembled and stored, while the 42 granite blocks of the Watch Room were carried by helicopter to Government Island. Some of the blocks, which weigh from 2,200 to 4,000 pounds, were taken to Milford, N.H. where they were replicated by stonecutters from Berretto Co. Renovation and reassembly of the lighthouse was painstakingly performed by Gayle Electric Co. of Whippenny, N.J.

The obvious enthusiasm and satisfaction demonstrated by the townspeople Sunday when the lighthouse was relighted seemed to say that Cohasset wasn't quite whole without her "standing tall," and that those who never leave the safety of shore feel reassured by the flashing 1-4-3 just as much as did those sailors of yesterday who relied upon Minot's Ledge Lighthouse to guide them home.

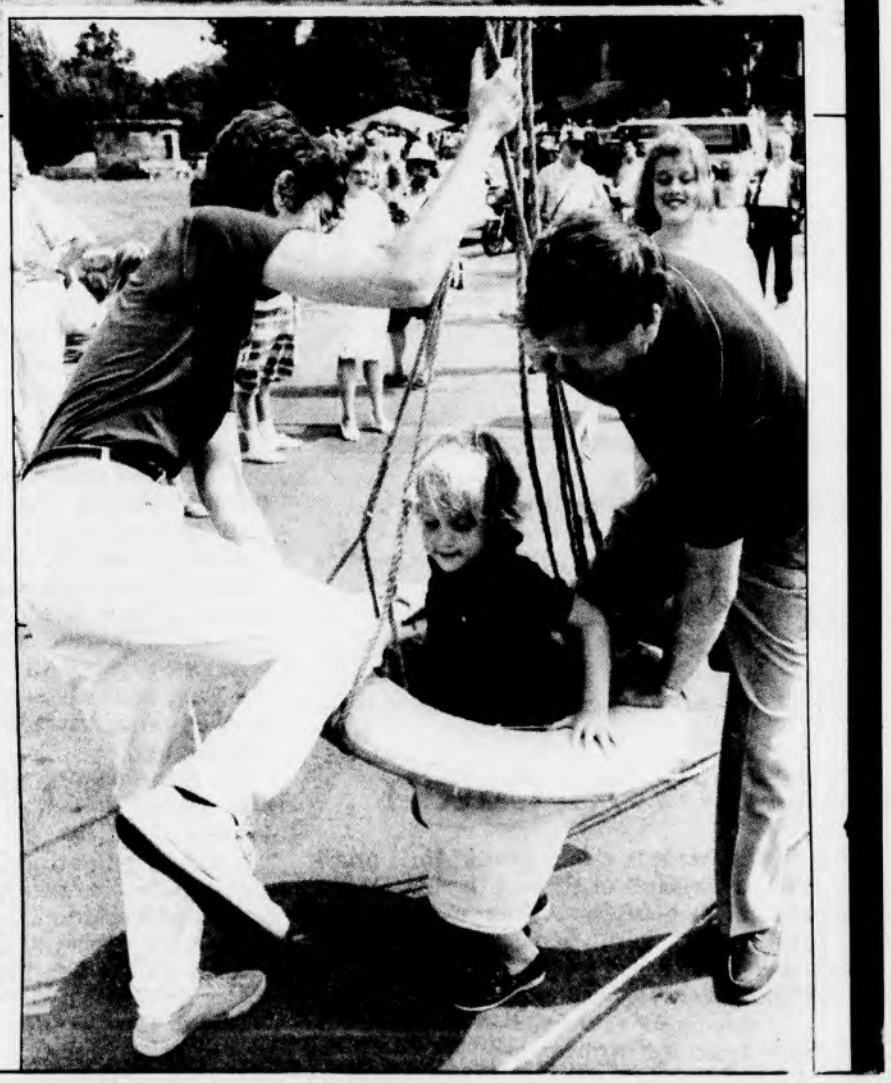
It is with special fondness that I congratulate all those responsible for the successful renovation of Minot Light. I have relighting many wonderful memories of growing up in Cohasset, but among the best are those of sailing through these beautiful waters, with Minot Light as a faithful landmark.



The skill and daring of the original construction crew is especially remarkable. Their determination to construct a beacon which would weather the storms in this dangerous location indicates a healthy respect for the sea and a solemn commitment to protecting all of us fortunate enough to live and work near her. The fact that their work has stood for 127 years is ample testament to their skill. It is most appropriate that Minot is one of the few lighthouses to retain a unique flash signal, and the 1-4-3, "I Love You" pattern reflects just how we feel about our lighthouse.

The Fishing Line

Blue shark big catch

The catch of the week is a 310-pound blue shark caught by Wilson Randell of Plymouth aboard the Green Harbor charter boat Sea Hunter skippered by Capt. Jim Firlotte.

The shark was 11-1/2 feet long and hit a cod fillet drifted in a chum slick on Stellwagen Bank, Firlotte reported.

Bluefish have been hitting very well lately off the mouth of the North River, reported Jerry Duffy at Mary's Boat Livery in Marshfield.

Dozens of anglers took big blues from 10 to 15 pounds during the weekend blitz. The fish were striking anything in the tackle box.

Among the anglers at the river mouth over the weekend were some of the 126 boaters in the third annual Grady-White owners' tournament sponsored by Bayside Marine of Duxbury.

Regina Greenwood of Pembroke won first place in the women's division with a blue of 8 pounds, 3 ounces and brought home a $200 Talbots gift certificate.

Dr. Sandy Bauer of Bennington, Vt., won second place in the women's division with a fish of 5 pounds, 1 ounce.

A fish of 16 pounds, 2 ounces won the men's first-place award—an Impulse fish finder—for Mike Montagano of Wareham.

Richard Stevens of Hanover took the second-biggest fish in the men's division, which tipped the scales at 14 pounds, 7 ounces.

David Roeder of Humarock, with a combined weight of 21 pounds, 12 ounces, took the men's second-place award.

Brian McKinnon of Marshfield had the second-heaviest combined weight at 21 pounds, 10 ounces.

Patty Howe of Oakham had a combined weight of 14 pounds, 12 ounces to win that prize in the ladies' division.

First-place junior winner was Drew Rogers of Framingham with a blue of 11 pounds, 10 ounces. Bob Stevens of Weymouth came in second with a fish of 11 pounds, 2 ounces.

Bob Bonner of Duxbury took the lightest bluefish of the tournament, a scrapper of 4 pounds, 8 ounces.

The third annual bluefish tournament to benefit Plymouth's Jordan Hospital is set for Saturday, Aug. 26 and Sunday, Aug. 27.

First prize for the largest bluefish in the adult division is $300. In the junior division, winners will take home rod-and-reel combinations, fully stocked tackle boxes and trophies donated by Adams Tackle in Pembroke.

Registration is $15 and will be held at Plymouth Marine on Water Street until noon Aug. 26. All proceeds will benefit the Jordan Hospital capital improvement fund.

Testimonial for Pericolo

A Testimonial for Peter Pericolo, Chief Court Officer, Hingham District Court who's been there for 26 years (1962-1988) and with Youth Service Board for 7 years (1955-1962) will be held at Rockland Son's of Italy on Sept. 15, with cocktails at 6:30 p.m. and dinner at 7:30 p.m.

There will be dancing with Jack Shea's Band, Mosley's on the Charles.

Tickets are $20 per person and may be obtained by calling or sending a check to: Marie Dinneer, 168 Dwelley Ave., Hanover, 02339. Phone: 878-7486.

Young artist courses

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, in Cohasset is sponsoring several new courses for your young artist this fall.

There are two courses special for parents of young children. Setting Up A Studio Space For Your Child At Home taught by the South Shore Art Center's Education Director, Kinda Keating and Nancy Connolly will meet for one class Wednesday, September 13 from 7 - 8 p.m.

Making Art Together taught by Nancy Connolly will meet for eight classes Tuesdays from 10 - 11 a.m. beginning September 20. This course is a great opportunity for Pre-school age and parents to learn basic art & craft techniques in a relaxed atmosphere. Make paint, model salt dough, create puppets, learn to use scissors and brushes.

For grades 1 - 3, Creative Photography I taught by Julie Hawkins will meet Tuesday from 4 - 5:30 p.m. beginning September 19. Have fun doing many projects relating to photography - photograms, collages and more. Students will learn about the camera, taking pictures and developing film in the darkroom.

Creative Photography II also taught by Julie Hawkins will meet Wednesdays from 4 - 5:30 beginning September 20. This course geared to grades 4 to 6 will focus on taking pictures, developing film and negatives, creating special effects and having fun with the camera. Learn about creativity and photography.

For grades 11 - 12, Portfolio Preparation taught by Susan Rodgerson will meet Thursdays from 7 to 9 p.m. beginning September 21. This course is designed for high school students who are putting together a portfolio for application to Art Schools. Emphasis will be on creating finished art works, selection and critiquing of pieces, matting and presentation of work. Requirements and standards of New England art Schools will be covered.

For more information and a complete list of the fall schedule, call the South Shore Art Center weekdays from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. at 383-9548. Registration is required for all courses and workshops.

Auditions for children

That New Theatre announces auditions for "Children of a Lesser God," Wednesday, August 30, and Thursday, August 31, 7 p.m. at First Trinitarian Church, Country Way, Scituate.

Need actress for part of Sarah: mid-20's, slim, youthful looking, deaf. Performances Nov. 2, 3, 4, 5.

Workshop at art center

Registration is open for September workshops in painting and design & decorating at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

SEA PAINTING with Ann Murphy will meet for two classes Tuesday and Thursday September 12 and 14 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. This workshop is designed for those with basic drawing and painting skills who would like to focus on painting the moods of the sea. Oils, acrylics, watercolors or pastels may be used. The group will meet in the studio as well as on location.

For a change of pace, the center has scheduled FAUX, FINISH, MARBLING & GRAINING with Jane Viator. The workshop will meet Saturday, September 16 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Create illusions of stone and wood using paints and glazes. Each student will complete a portfolio of sample boards, plus a small frame in one of the learned techniques. No previous painting experience is necessary.

For more information on these workshops or other workshops in October and November, call the South Shore Art Center weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 383-9548. Pre-registration is required for all courses and workshops.

State officials study waterfront regulations

By Tom Fabian
Mariner staff

Proposed state waterways regulations will prove to be a boon to coastal communities trying to preserve their waterfronts, yet promote water-related development for the public good, according to state officials.

If approved, the regulations would not allow for most non-water-related projects, such as private housing and office development, within 100 feet of the shoreline.

The regulation also would require "reasonable" public access through private development in tidelands, including filled tidelands.

Last week state coastal zone management and waterways officials discussed the new regulations with about 50 concerned citizens, planners and conservation commission members from area towns at a forum sponsored by the South Shore Coalition at Norwell town hall.

While the regulations will provide stricter state controls over public and private tidelands, including filled tidelands, the new rules will not interfere with local harbor plans or zoning requirements, they said.

The regulations are part of Chapter 91, the waterways licensing statute originally adopted in 1866.

It is the oldest law of its kind in the nation and regulates waterfront activities below the high watermark in those communities along the ocean, beside rivers and surrounding great ponds.

"Local zoning rules completely. A state-approved harbor plan supercedes these regulations. Towns with harbor plans can effectively veto any project that doesn't fit with local planning," Coastal Zone Management program manager Dennis Ducsik said.

Communities can prioritize what water-dependent uses it values and block small docks and other facilities that conflict with those priorities, he added.

This kind of development, along with additional filling, also will be blocked from Areas of Critical Environmental Concern, he said.

The Duxbury-Plymouth bay area has been nominated as an area of critical environmental concern.

The new regulations limit the amount and kind of development permitted in public tidelands, those below the low water mark, in private tidelands, those between the high and low water marks, and on filled lands in both those tidal zones.

However, the state has greatly reduced its jurisdiction in filled tidelands since a draft of the regulations was first released in 1987, Ducsik said.

"Filled tideland use regulation runs against local control. It put the state in the business of land-use control," he said.

The latest draft of the waterways regulations calls for state control only in those filled tidelands between the first roadway and the high water mark or 200 feet from the high water mark, depending on which is farther.

This allows for minimal interference with local zoning, Ducsik said.

Ducsik made an example of Boston's Back Bay, which is all filled tideland, but runs several miles deep.

Licensing procedures for new projects will call for local involvement, encourage planning board input and give weight to municipal performance standards, he added.

The new regulations would allow no new non-water dependent projects within 100 feet of the shoreline and allow no expansion of those non-water related projects existing below the low water mark.

These non-water dependent uses would also be subject to increased fees and stricter density and height limitations, Ducsik said.

Water-dependent projects within 200 feet of the high water mark will be licensed.

All those existing water-dependent projects without licenses will have three years to get one under the old performance standards and fees so long as they have not expanded since the first water-dependent licensing requirements were made in 1984.

On filled tidelands, all projects will have to provide "reasonable" public access to the waterfront including unobstructed access parallel to the shore.

Private facilities will have to provide some kind of public access to the water.

Ducsik said the regulations will help to promote other state programs, such as affordable housing, public transportation and historic preservation.

He told the crowd last week that state stewardship of waterways has a long historical precedent dating back to the Roman Empire.

He said the state first started licensing waterfront industry and development under Chapter 91 in 1866, but that once a license was given little attention was given to the continued expansion.

In 1979 the Supreme Judicial Court ruled that the state had a "perpetual responsibility" to regulate development on filled tidelands when what lies below them is public land.

The public comment period on the new Chapter 91 regulations ends Sept. 15.

Formal public hearings have been scheduled at 7 p.m. Sept. 11 at Lipke Auditorium at the Science Center at UMass/Boston and Sept. 14 at Cape Cod Community College, Route 132, Barnstable.

Waste consultant chosen

Following a year's search, the South Shore Coalition has chosen a consultant to conduct an approximately $120,000 study of the region's solid waste problems.

Last year the regional planning group received a $150,000 grant from the state's Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (now the Department of Environmental Protection) to formulate a plan to deal with solid waste on the South Shore.

After reviewing qualifications of 11 firms, and interviewing the four firms with the most solid proposals, the group's solid waste subcommittee chose the Energy Systems Research Group of Boston to conduct the study, Scituate public works engineering supervisor Paul Scott said.

While the Coalition gave its approval to ESRG, the subcommittee will negotiate with the firm later this month to determine the final scope of work to be done in the study.

Swim team celebrates season

By Linda Henderson
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Swim Team capped an undefeated season by winning the South Shore League Championships with a score of 332 points.

Hanover was second with a score of 274 points; Duxbury Aqua-Dux, third, with a score of 241 points; Scituate K of C, fourth, with a score of 228 points; Scituate Harbor Yacht Club, fifth, with a score of 217; and hosting Duxbury Harbor Yacht Club, sixth with a score of 162.

This year's team, coached by Kate Anderson and Beth LaLumiere, is the first Cohasset Swim Team ever to win the championships after an undefeated season.

This win is underscored by the fact that so many of the swimmers against whom Cohasset swam in the championships train year-round. As an example, four of the contenders in the girls 14 and under 100 meter I.M. train at Harvard with Bernal's Gators. Cohasset was very grateful for its own year-round swimmers like Jennifer Jackson, who commutes to Cambridge to train.

The meet began with first place finishes in diving by Caroline deLima among twelve and unders and Jonathan deLima for sixteen and unders. The divers are coached by Jane deLima and Greg Nourie, both veterans of the diving team. The divers' victories and points started Cohasset toward first place and they never looked back.

Swimmers were chosen to swim in the championships on the basis of performance throughout the season and final timings on August 9.

The results of the races were as follows:

10 & under, 50-meter free style—Ted Reardon, 3rd, Lauren deVito, 2nd.

Individual Medley—100 meters: 16 & under—Jonathan deLima, 1st, Jennifer Jackson, 1st; 14 & under—David Leahey, 1st, Ali Welz, 6th; 12 & under—Matt Pierce, 5th, Becky Golden, 1st.

50-meter freestyle: 12 & under—David Nothnagle, 4th, Becky Golden, 1st; 14 & under—Chip Anderson, 1st, Robin deVito, 5th; 16 & under—Bill Baird, 2nd, Brooke Anderson, 3rd.

25-meter butterfly: 10 & under—Ted Reardon, 2nd, Lauren deVito, 2nd; 12 & under—Nick Welz, 5th, Heather Littlehale, 2nd.

50-meter butterfly: 14 & under—Chris Kondrat, 2nd, Robin deVito, 4th; 16 & under—Jonathan deLima, 1st, Brooke Anderson, 5th.

25-meter breaststroke: 8 & under—Greg Bilton, 1st, Megan Connelly, 2nd; 10 & under—Doug Cameron, 2nd, Aimee Theriault, 4th.

50-meter breaststroke: 12 & under—Tom Greco, 2nd, Kate Carroll, 6th; 14 & under—David Leahey, 1st, Megan Staunton, 6th; 16 & under—Bill Baird, 2nd, Maureen Long, 4th.

25-meter backstroke: 8 & under—Justin Golden, 2nd, Megan Connelly, 2nd; 10 & under—Ted Reardon, 2nd, Ashley Brister, 2nd.

50-meter backstroke: 12 & under—Greg Schultz, 3rd, Heather Littlehale, 1st; 14 & under—Chip Anderson, 1st, Tracey Reardon, 4th; 16 & under—Topher Henderson, 4th, Jennifer Jackson, 2nd.

200-meter free relay girls—Brooke Anderson, Melissa Rousseau, Robin deVito, Jennifer Jackson, 3rd.

100 free relay—8 & under—Katy Devine, Greg Bilton, Justin Golden, Derek Bugley, 1st.

100 medley relay-boys—12 & under—Greg Schultz, Nick Welz, Tom Greco, Dave Nothnagle, 3rd.

100 medley relay-girls—12 & under—Becky Golden, Heather Littlehale, Katie Carroll, Hillary Strong, 1st.

200 medley relay-girls—16 & under—Melissa Rousseau, Maureen Long, Brooke Anderson, Jennifer Jackson, 2nd.

Each of the six clubs chooses its fastest swimmer for each event and the finishes are usually very close. To participate in the championships at all is an honor.

Congratulations to all of the athletes listed above, and to their teammates who travelled to Duxbury on a very wet Saturday to cheer them on.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT Docket No. 89P2013E1
Norfolk Division

Estate of BERTHA O. STURGES late of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that C. BARBARA GUILFOYLE of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executrix named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on September 27, 1989.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the fifteenth day of August, one thousand none hundred and eighty nine.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 88E0114-P1

To Denise Yess of Cohasset in the County of Norfolk, Norfolk County Trust Co., and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Jeanne Mahon of Chula Vista in the State of California representing that she holds as joint tenant an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County and briefly described as follows:

SOUTHWESTERLY by Ledgewood Drive, one hundred twenty-five (125) feet;

NORTHWESTERLY by lot numbered 28, shown on the plan hereinafter referred to, one hundred sixty (160) feet;

NORTHEASTERLY by lot numbered 29, shown on said plan, one hundred twenty-five (125) feet; and SOUTHEASTERLY by lot numbered 26, shown on said plan, one hundred and sixty (160) feet.

Said parcel is shown as lot numbered 27 on a plan drawn by Edwin A. Young, Surveyor, dated March 31, 1962, June 21, 1965, and March 9, 1967 as modified and approved by the Land Court, filed in the Land Registration Office as No. 31599A, a copy of a portion of which is filed in Norfolk Registry District with Certificate No. 84452, Sheet 3, Book 423.

There is appurtenant to the above described land the right to use said Ledgewood Drive and Brewster Road shown on said plan, to and from Chief Justice Cushing Highway, shown on said plan, in common with all those lawfully entitled thereto.

So much of the above described land as lies within the limits of said Ledgewood Drive is subject to the rights of all those lawfully entitled thereto, in and over the same.

The above described land is subject to the restrictions set forth in an Indenture of Restrictions and Protective Covenants made by Ledgewood Estates, Inc., dated March 18, 1960, duly recorded in Book 3803, Page 348.

The above described land is subject also to a Covenant between Ledgewood Estate, Inc., and the Planning Board of the Town of Cohasset, dated June 21, 1961, duly recorded in Book 3938, Page 491.

The above described land is subject also to an Agreement made by Ledgewood Estates, Inc., with the Planning Board of the Town of Cohasset, dated June 21, 1961 duly recorded in Book 3948, Page 139.

The above described land is subject to an Agreement made by Ledgewood Estates, Inc., with the Planning Board of the Town of Cohasset, dated December 20, 1961, duly recorded in Book 3956, Page 423.

The above described land is subject to the easements set forth in a grant made by Ledgewood Estates, Inc., to Brockton Edison Company and New England Telephone setting forth that she desires that all of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than two hundred and fifty thousand dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the sixth day of September 1989, the return day of this citation.

Witness, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this twenty-seventh day of July 1989.

Center presents watercolor exhibit

Thomas Rebek's latest watercolor paintings of waterlilies will be presented at the South Shore Art Center from August 25 to October 6

An opening reception with the artist will be Sunday, Sept. 10, from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. Gallery hours are Monday through Friday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and Sunday 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Rebek is known for his unique pond landscapes and waterlily paintings relating somewhat to the style of Claude Monet and Georgia O'Keefe. He has achieved Copley Master status with Boston's prestigious Copley Society,the nation's oldest art association.His work has been presented in numerous solo exhibitions throughout Boston, including the Copley Society and the Arnold Arboretum of Harvard University.

Rebek has also participated in many group shows, both locally and nationally, and his work is represented in permanent corporate and private collections throughout the United States.

In the last year alone, Rebek has won six noteable awards, including a Blue Ribbon award at the South Shore Art Center and a Best of Show at a Copley Society Member's Show.

"White Lily," a watercolor by artist Thomas Rebek which is now on exhibit, along with several other watercolors, at the art center, 119 Ripley Road.

THIS SMALL CAPE

This series of articles will focus on the renovation and expansion of a small six room Cape. The topics to be covered will include: a family room; kitchen expansion; added bedroom space; bathrooms; sun room; farmer's porch and a two car garage. Before investing in an addition, it is important to objectively evaluate your neighborhood and to have an accurate estimate of cost. If the improvements will make your home significantly larger and more expensive than those properties around you, it may be wise to consider moving rather than adding on.

Once you have decided to proceed, it is important to:

- Review local zoning and health regulations to obtain all necessary permits.
- Locate lot lines, wet lands and septic systems to be certain there will be no encroachment.
- Consult a professional to ensure that the design is in keeping with the size and style of the original house.
- Make a list of intended uses and potential furnishings so that wall space as well as living areas are adequate.

The Cape to be renovated is shown in the picture above. Our next article will deal with kitchen expansions.

At T.C. McIntosh Construction Inc., we specialize in additions from design to finish. For a free estimate or design consultation, please call:

Prepare for storms before they hit!

Food

Water

Medical Supplies

Cooking

Lighting

Radio

Auxiliary Heating

Eastern Utilities
Eastern Edison

Major storms may cause interruptions to your electric service. Should a storm hit, you can be prepared.

Have an adequate stock of storm-emergency supplies on hand. And check them periodically for usefulness.

Here are some "must have" items:

Food...Have canned and packaged foods that need no refrigeration. They should be non-perishable foods that need little or no preparation. If you have an infant, keep several days supply of formula.

You can extend the life of perishable foods by turning the controls of your refrigerator and freezer to the coldest position before the storm hits. And food stored in a freezer will stay frozen longer if you keep the door closed as much as possible. Should the food defrost, some foods can be cooked then refrozen once the electric service is restored. During winter storms, you can use a picnic cooler outside your home to preserve frozen foods.

And don't forget your manual can opener.

Water...If there's enough time before a storm, fill spare containers with water in case your electric water pump or city water system is affected by a power failure. This should be enough for cooking, drinking and washing until your service is restored.
An important point...you can flush a toilet by pouring water into the tank.

Medical Supplies...You should have a complete first-aid kit with an instruction manual. You should also have an adequate supply of prescription drugs or dietary needs that family members may need on a daily basis.

Cooking...If you have a fireplace or a woodstove, it can be used for cooking. If not, gas barbeque grills or campstoves will do. But they should be used only in open and well ventilated areas — NEVER in your home, for safety's sake. Charcoal stoves must also be used in well ventilated areas; never indoors. Burning charcoal releases carbon monoxide — a deadly poison.

And every home should have at least one fire extinguisher. Check them regularly to make certain they have not lost their charge.

Lighting...Camper lanterns and battery-operated lights are safer than candles. Keep one flashlight handy for each member of your household. And keep an adequate stock of fresh batteries in stock.

Butane and oil lanterns are useful. But you need to store the fuel in a safe place.

Radio...A battery-operated, portable radio may be the only way you can get up-to-date information on what's going on during and after a serious storm.

Auxiliary Heating...Some type of heater is essential in the event of an outage during a winter storm. If you have a fireplace or wood stove, keep an emergency supply of dry firewood on hand.

A UL approved electric generator is an alternative. Since there must be no connection between our lines and your generator, it should be installed by a licensed electrician and inspected by your municipal wiring inspector. An improperly wired generator could endanger your life and that of your neighbors and emergency workers.

If your home heating system is down for an extended period due to a winter storm, drain your water pipe and traps. Remember to shut off the main water valve to prevent flooding when the power is restored.

A Final Note...Be sure to disconnect or turn off all other lights and appliances that would go on automatically when your electricity is restored. This includes your furnace, water heater and water pump. But leave one light switched to the "on" position so that you'll know when your electric service is restored.

Remember to stay away from fallen wires!

Group wants to begin multi-town regional plan

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The town's government structure committee is scheduling a multi-town meeting to discuss possible ways of regionalizing municipal services.

Among the topics which will be discussed at the September meeting will be the possible regionalization of municipal wire departments, ambulance service, animal control and the sharing of highway department equipment. At their Tuesday night meeting, committee members said they hoped to schedule their multi-town session September 12 or 19.

The towns of Scituate, Hingham, Norwell and Hull will be invited to the Cohasset meeting. All of those towns responded to a letter sent by the committee last month, requesting their opinion of possible regional services.

All the communities responded affirmatively, although Hingham noted that the Hull, Hingham and Scituate tri-town commission would be the most approriate vehicle to study regionalization.

Cohasset selectmen have given the green light to the government structure committee to review regionalization.

In its next communication with the area towns, the government structure committee will outline its suggested topics for the September meeting. Those towns will forward a list of topics, so that a variety of issues may be studied. If there is a consensus of what topics will be discussed that night, the group may be able to form independent sub committees to continue further study, Roy Fitzsimmons, chairman of the government structure committee, suggested.

Among the topics likely to be discussed that night is the possibility of regionalizaing ambulance service. According to Fitzsimmons, the town of Hingham has already explored the possibility of joining a private service. As a member of the town's former ambulance study committee, Fitzsimmons said this was a topic he had previously reviewed.

"Our point in upgrading ambulance service is that our service right now is basic life support. We'd like to improve the quality of service," he said.

Members of the government structure committee mentioned several possible topics for future regionalization, including the police and fire departments.

Bus routes notice

School committee members have decided this year's bus routes will be sent to homes rather than being published in the newspapers.

The routes have been so greatly altered because of budget cuts, the committee felt that notices should be mailed to all parents. There will be only four buses to transport all students instead of the six as in years past.

Supt. Stephen Hart said that adjustments have been made by consolidating bus stops and by requiring more students to walk. He said that the most drastic changes were made at the secondary school level, so very young children will not be required to walk greater distances.

But he noted that the buses at the elementary level will be filled to capacity, because of fewer buses and an increase in enrollment which exceeded even the projected increase.

"The changes will take time to adjust to, and some people will be concerned, but our hands are tied," said Hart.

"When the notices go out, people will see quite a departure from the past," Hart said. "Buses will be crowded, with three to a seat and with no empty seats. Parents are going to have to stress more than ever the importance of their children behaving well on the buses."

"It's going to be trying and stressful, but if there are problems we encourage parents to let us know. We're open to suggestions," Hart said.

Third grade teacher Rose Collins digs in and starts scrubbing in preparation for the new school year which begins next week.

Local man leaves life of intrigue

George Higginson has seen much of the world in his role as a foreign affairs advisor. But nothing is more welcomed than the view from his backyard along Atlantic Avenue.

Every summer, Higginson and his family return to the home where he was born. Overlooking the Atlantic, the home was the first oceanside residence constructed in Cohasset. It was originally a hotel owned by Capt. Worthington in the 1700's, and included all the coastal land from Cunningham Bridge to the harbor.

The spacious rooms, too many for Higginson to instantly recall, have been a welcomed summer respite for the Cohasset native since he entered the foreign service and moved to Washington, D.C. in 1961.

Higginson, a graduate of Harvard Law School and a former Boston attorney, is retiring from foreign service. His years of international citizenship are over.

"I'm retiring after 28 years in the foreign service. I took a hard look and concluded that all the top assignments are going to political appointments. It was time to come back home," he says.

"This house is my home. We tried to come back here for two months every year. I think in the entire time I was away, we didn't make it back here for three years," he adds.

And as he closes out his career in government and looks to another in the private sector, Higginson says he'd like to keep the Cohasset address. "If I had to choose between our Washington home and here, if I had my druthers, I'd rather be here."

The 57 year-old attorney was recently honored for his last tour of duty in which he served as for-

Hutt scholarship fund

Area fishermen are now raising money for a scholarship fund in memory of three-year-old Samantha Hutt, who drowned Aug. 17 off Bassings Beach.

The scholarship will be used for Sammy's sister, Katherine Anne, 6, when she reaches 18 years of age. Their father Peter Hutt is a fisherman who lives in Scituate and fishes out of Cohasset.

Donations may be sent to Scituate Federal Savings Savings & Loan Association, 72 Front Street, 02066. Checks should be made out to the Sammy Hutt Memorial Scholarship Fund.

For more information, call Barbara Fassnacht, Scituate Lobster Trap Co., 545-0090. Donations may also be left with her.

No Labor Day mail

Residents are advised that all post offices will be closed and there will be no regular mail delivery Monday, Sept. 4, in observance of Labor Day.

In keeping with postal policy, Special Delivery and Express Mail will be delivered on the holiday. Collection boxes will be picked up according to holiday collection schedules.

Customers are reminded that 24-hour service, seven days a week, is available at Self-Service Postal Centers located in the lobby of the Boston General Mail Facility, 25 Dorchester Avenue, Boston and at the Middlesex-Essex General Mail Facility, 462 Washington Street, Woburn.

For postal information during non-business hours, customers may call the Postal Answer Line at 617-451-9922.

School loan guide available

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray distributed to the libraries in her district a guide to Higher Education Loans in Massachusetts. The guide informs students and parents of the loan options for this fall semester.

If a student has filled out the necessary financial aid forms at school and not yet applied for an eight percent Stafford Loan, this is the lowest student loan available. The Financial Aid Office at the school or any local lender participating in the student loan programs can provide the student and their parent with application information.

The guide is now available at the Cohasset, Hingham and Hull libraries.

If a student needs assistance in obtaining a Stafford, SLS or PLUS loan for the fall semester they can contact MHEAC at 617-426-9796 or 1-800-322-0888. MHEAC's Central Information Department will give top priority to students in need of application information.

Recent tree-cutting off Jerusalem Road has conservation commissioners and some residents worried about the impact the cutting will have on wetlands in the area.

Peter Mallen and Harry Judd of 121 Jerusalem Rd. sent a letter, dated August 25, to the commission, complaining about the removal of undergrowth and several large trees on the wetlands side of Jerusalem Rd. between numbers 121 and 85.

The letter said that on August 24, Abbot Arborists of Cohasset, "at the request and in the employ of" Mr. and Mrs. William E. Haynes of 104 Jerusalem Rd., cut down "a large number of trees" on land owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Anton of 85 Jerusalem Rd. The letter said that the Antons agreed to permit the removal only of lower branches on the trees, and were "blameless.

In their complaint, Mallen and Judd said that the tree-cutting was a "disgraceful disregard for the environment." They claim that the trees and growth serve as a buffer to protect the marsh. They said that the Haynes had trees removed in 1988, but not to the extent of the recent cutting. Mallen and Judd complained verbally to the commission last year, and the board spoke to some residents.

In their letter, Mallen and Judd expressed concern that, without the trees, erosion will occur and that water run-off from the road will carry pollutants into the wetlands.

Mallen and Judd closed their letter by requesting that the commission "address this yearly destruction immediately and forcefully. Every year more trees are cut down. This must be stopped. The damage done can not be repaired, but the trees must be replaced. People must learn that they are responsible for their actions."

Commissioners said Jean Williams of 96 Jerusalem Road also had trees cut soon after. They said that Harry Judd picketed the location with a sign protesting the harm being done to the environment.

As a result, said commissioners, traffic backed up, and the police responded and informed Judd that he could not impede the work being done by Abbott Arborists.

Commissioners agreed to invite all the parties involved to their September 12 meeting, to find out who was responsible for the removal of the trees.

Conservation action

Conservation commisioners Tuesday agreed to release lot 3-A from the order of conditions on Whitney Woods Lane. Roland Leary of Norwell has nearly completed an 8-lot subdivision on the property.

Commissioners said that some work on the road and drainage system was not done properly. They said they wanted to ensure that the work was done before all the homes were sold.

Wayne Burks and Fred Leary, representing Roland Leary, said that they wanted lot 3-A released because they were to pass papers the next day. They said they would have to come before the commission to discuss conditions on lot 4-A, and that they could resolve any remaining problems with the roadway at that time. The other six homes have already been sold, they noted.

Commissioners voted 5-1 to release lot 3-A from the order of conditions. Member Tom Callahan was opposed, saying that the order of conditions applied to all the individual lots and not just the roadway. He also said he doubted Leary's claim that they did not own the road, and so were not liable for any work needed to be done.

Chairman Jeff Wahl warned the Leary representatives not to come before the commission on lot 4-A the day before they were to pass papers.

Commissioners also discussed a Notice of Intent for Koko Island to do extensive filling of the parking lot to the rear of the restaurant. The owners are planning to fill to 12' an area of about 7,200 square feet. This would raise the rear parking lot to the level of the restaurant's rear entrance.

A new septic system is to be installed under emergency conditions granted by the Board of Health. Conservation Commissioners have informed health board members that they are concerned about that the fill might crush piped Peppermint Brook which runs beneath the lot. They are also concerned about the direction of run-off from the proposed raised parking lot.

George Mealey Post plans a grand clambake

By Bill Leitch
Mariner staff

They're calling it a "clambake", but that word doesn't do justice to the event planned by the American Legion for Saturday, Sep. 9 at Sandy Beach. With a choice of lobster or steak for dinner, served with half a chicken, corn on the cob, clam chowder and, of course, steamed clams, this year's clambake goers should plan to skip breakfast that morning.

The clambake starts at noon and will go to "sunset", said Jack Burke. This is the fourth annual clambake, and the second year that proceeds from the event will benefit the Christine Burke Memorial Scholarship Fund, in honor of Jack's daughter who died in a car accident in 1988 at the age of 18.

Last year the clambake raised a $5,000 scholarship which was awarded to Paul Marx of Cohasset.

"We'd love to be able to maintain the $5,000 scholarship," Burke said. "That sounds like a lot of money, but it really isn't with today's costs for education."

Burke noted that the American Legion has three other scholarships worth $600 each. He said that recipients are selected by the Legion's scholarship committee. Winners are not limited to Cohasset students, he said.

Entertainment at the clambake will be provided all day long by The Irish Volunteer, a "not strictly Irish" band that plays Country & Western and early '50's music, said Burke.

There will also be a raffle of items donated by local businesses.

In addition, hats and T-shirts bearing a logo for the scholarship fund will be sold.

There will be a full bar as well. Burke said that a police officer will be on duty at the clambake, but he added that he doesn't expect any problems.

"It's an older crowd, so it isn't likely there will be any incidents," Burke said. "We all have a great time."

Burke said he hopes the clambake will draw at least as many people as last year, when about 200 joined the fun.

The price for dinner is $25 per person, with children admitted free. Hot dogs will be served all day long for the children, Burke said.

The rain date has been set for Sunday, Sep. 10. Burke said that the Legion set a rain date for their liquor license in case the clambake is postponed until the next day.

Dan Anderson of Cohasset is catering the clambake.

"The best part is we have a good relationship with the Sandy Beach people," said Burke. "We promise to always leave it like we found it. They usually close the beach after Labor Day, but we talked them into leaving it open for us."

Coastline Council issues

The Coastline Council for Children, a citizen advocacy group working on issues affecting children in the Coastline Area Towns of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth is seeking volunteers from these towns to serve as Board of Directors and Committee Members. The Coastline Council is part of a statewide network of Councils serving as the citizen arm of the Commonwealth's Office for Children.

Through its Committees, the Council has in the past year assessed the need for child care in Hull, reviewed proposals from programs seeking state dollars and strengthened a parents network for children with special needs.

By contributing 2-4 hours a month, members of the Council directly influence the quality of life for children in need of services. To become part of this positive, active force call Mary Thomas, Community Representative at 331-1520.

Sports will cost you $50

By Bill Leitch
Mariner staff

School committee members voted unanimously Monday to establish a high school athletic user fee of $50 per student per sport.

The money generated by the fee will supplement funds raised by the athletics fundraising committee to support school sports during the town's current fiscal squeeze.

The committee already eliminated a number of assistant coaching positions to reduce the athletic program's budget by about $10,000. But $40,000 must still be raised to support the program, which was cut by $50,000.

School Superintendent Stephen Hart hopes that $20,000 will be generated through ticket sales and fundraising. The $50 user fee with an estimated 400 participants would generate the remaining $20,000. Hart noted that the money is needed for this fiscal year, so that fundraising can continue through June, 1990.

Hart estimated that at least $6,000 will be raised through ticket sales. He said $5,300 has already been raised.

"That's a very good start toward the $20,000 goal," Hart said. "I think we can support sports with this fee."

Committee members commended Athletic Director Clark Chatterton for his work selling tickets.

"Clark should be congratulated," said member Russ Reidy. "Watching him get rid of those tickets is remarkable. He's put in a lot of time."

Reidy and other members noted that the fee will probably cause the number of participants in the sports program to decline somewhat. Reidy said that the effect would probably be felt most in spring sports, after families have had to pay for fall and winter sports.

Member Ralph Kidder noted that if too many students decide not to play sports, then the $50 fee will not generate the needed money. He suggested setting a larger fee with a rebate if more than enough is raised. Hart said a larger fee would be a disincentive and would turn away even more students. He said that a $75 fee with a $25 rebate still amounted to a $75 fee with no guarantee that a rebate would be possible.

Kidder also expressed concern that the fee would prohibit some students from playing sports. Hart said if there are cases where the fee causes a real hardship they will be "resolved on an individual basis."

Music teacher resigns

In other business, members accepted with regret the resignation of Suzanne Parker, instrumental music teacher at Deer Hill School. Parker taught at the school for the past two years.

Supt. Hart said that Parker was "bright, enthusiastic and talented."

He said that there was a great improvement in the quality of musicianship among the students Parker taught.

Members agreed that Parker was one of the more outstanding young teachers in the school system.

Kidder emphasized that Parker did not leave to go to another school, but that she left the education field altogether. He said that Parker did not feel that her position as a newer teacher was very secure in light of the state's budget crisis.

"It's not just a sad story for one teacher and her students," Kidder said. "It's a crisis which, if it is not recognized, will doom us as a country."

Hart agreed, saying that there are usually plenty of applicants for teacher positions, but that not many are "top caliber," and that there has been a marked decline in quality over the past several years.

Local man leaves life of intrigue

eign affairs advisor to the Commandant of the U.S. Coast Guard. He recently received one of the highest honors given to a civilian, the Coast Guard Meritorious Public Service Award.

This two-year assignment was, in Higginson's words, "always interesting and I must admit, very exciting."

This last tour brought him to many of the world's "hot spots" as Higginson advised Coast Guard officials on international negotiations.

The Coast Guard has not grown in size, but its responsibilities and the fragile nature of those assignments have changed, he noted.

"It's an exciting time for the Coast Guard," he says.

An important function of that branch of the service is to fight the international inundation of drugs, primarily in the "choke points" of the Caribbean between Cuba and Haiti, and Haiti and Puerto Rico. Higginson was instrumental in the negotiations with several countries to begin training their troops by the U.S. Guard. In some cases, Higginson notes, it was important for the U.S. to have facilities simply to gas up or land military helicoptors. He was an advisor to those delicate negotiations.

Higginson, a man of great patience, believes that international cooperation and understanding is achieved only through "small, cautious steps." The emergence of Glasnost, for instance, is an example where the U.S. and Russia must proceed with cautious optimism.

He helped the Coast Guard negotiate an agreement with Russia regarding pollution in the Chukka Sea. That agreement spells out exactly how future oil spills in the territory north of Alaska and the Soviet Union will be contained and cleaned by both countries. It also states how accidents in that area will be handled and search and rescue operations are also defined between the two superpower nations.

There are some prolonged negotiations Higginson was unable to complete in his tenure with the Coast Guard, including an agreement regarding the boundary line of the Bering Sea. "The issue there is whether it's a straight line or a circle. That has yet to be resolved," he says with a smile, acknowledging that international affairs can sometimes stall over the most mundane issues. "At least we have agreed not to fight over that while we worked out the agreement on search and rescue procedures. We completed that without admitting a specific boundary line."

Despite the continued political differences between the two countries, Higginson has seen for himself the growing sense of cooperation from our neighbors in the Soviet Union.

"It's obvious during negotiations with them that they have been told to try for an agreement. So we are moving ahead on many issues."

The aura of Glasnost was never so profound to the Cohasset native as this past summer when the port of Leningrad hosted the Coast Guard training vessel, The Eagle.

It is a three-masted sloop, about 278 feet long. It has traveled the world, but is technically con-

Regional plan proposed by local committee

Member James Whelan noted that the bigger a town, the harder it will be to regionalize departments.

Member Jean Cotton suggested that perhaps a regional central dispatcher for the police and fire departments could be investigated. Patricia Facey, a member of the government structure committee, noted that although the towns currently participate in a mutual aid system, there may be trouble ahead as departments are cut back because of budget restraints. "If one town is cut back, it may want others to take up the slack. That's not the way to run a community, and I know some people are nervous about that," she stated.

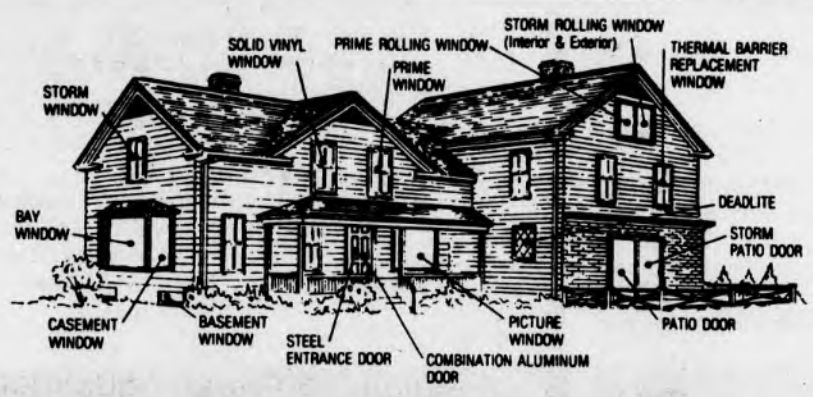
If regionalization between towns is to work, according to Whelan, it will require "brother/sister" towns which are homogenous and cooperative. He noted that regionalizing police and fire departments may be too difficult to negotiate "because you're running into unions then," he said.

Member Wilson Pile suggested that animal control is a department that could more easily be regionalized. "It's something we all desperately need," he noted. Dennis Roth, another member of the committee, also noted that certain types of highway equipment, such as street sweepers, could be shared among the towns.

"Regionalization is something we should do and test out for a while so there is no radical change and people can see it works,' Facey stated.

Chairman Fitzsimmons said representatives from these towns should investigate whether regionalization will decrease insurance costs to the individual members.

In a study he reviewed from the files of the Massachusetts Municipal Association, committee member Whelan concluded that "non controversial" departments stand a better chance at regionalization.



"Not all services lend themselves to a cooperative venture," he said. Town shouls avoid regionalizing the "most controversial" services that are an integral part of the town, he said, particularly the police and fire departments.

The study noted that in Franklin county, there is a regional pact between seven towns to share its gas, plumbing and wiring departments. They share two fulltime employees, and the town agrees they receive better service now.

"It's important to consider, if we propose regionalization of a service - is there a real financial incentive there? Will there be an improvement in services? And are these services truly a regional matter? These are the questions that must be asked," Whelan stated.

□ Denise Louise Murphy of Cohasset has been accepted into Emmanuel College's class of 1993. She will begin her studies in art therapy this fall. Denise is the daughter of William F. Murphy and Marjorie A. Murphy of 33 Cedar Acres Lane.

Denise is a graduate of Notre Dame Academy in Hingham. While in high school, she sang in the a capella choir and glee club. Denise received a four-year academic honor award in art, and a 1988 award for excellence in advanced studio. She was also recognized at The Boston Globe Art All-State Scholastic Competition. Denise received the Cohasset Teacher's Association Scholarship. She was a volunteer with the Cohasset Recreation Department for retarded children and works at the Ripley Road Nursing Home.

□ In case you are wondering why Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rattenbury are walking around with huge grins on their faces, the answer is simple . . . Clay Henry Rattenbury! Clay is their new grandson, the son of Paul and Sheri Rattenbury; he was born on August 15th in Newport News, Virginia, and weighed in at a hefty 8 pounds, 15 ounces. We'll bet that Clay's sister, Tiffany, will be a big help to her baby brother, cause she is three years old.

□ Congratulations to Saddia Bryant, a Hobart Lane resident. Saddia made the Dean's List at University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. She will be a junior at the university this fall.

□ James E. Ogburn was named the general manager of Webb-Norfolk Conveyor recently. He is responsible for planning and directing the division's sales, engineering and manufacturing. The company has designed and fabricated unit-handling conveyor systems for manufacturing, warehousing and distribution.

□ Matt T. Hochkeppel, son of M. Molly and Joseph E. Hochkeppel, 22 Smith Place, has been accepted for fall admission at Rochester (N.Y.) Institute of Technology, where he will major in photography.

He was a member of the 1989 graduating class of Model Secondary School for the Deaf, where he was class salutatorian. Hochkeppel was a member of the soccer, wrestling, baseball, football, and intramural teams, as well as a member of the Computer, and Drama Clubs.

Matt T. Hochkeppel

□ Maura Dunn was promoted by Coopers and Lybrand recently. SHe is supervisory consultant in the Management Consulting Services Group.

□ Congratulations go to Sarah Seavey, who made the Dean's List at the University of Hartford CT for the spring semester of the 1988-89 academic year.

□ While you are "out and about" this week, be sure to stop in at the Bound Brook Artisans, the co-op gift shop located on Rte. 3A in Cohasset. This month they have been featuring jewelry by Carol Loring, and it is wonderful! They also have raffle tickets available, you can win a large primitive painting! The benefits of the sale will go to the Kingston House. Bound Brook Artisans is open Mon.-Sat., from 10 to five.

□ We want to wish a special gal a special birthday . . . have a great day Jeannie, you deserve it!

□ The question "around town" is "Will the Duck Pond really be ready by Labor Day?" Everyone is certainly laboring to be sure that it is on schedule, here's hoping! Maybe there will be a "welcome back to the ducks" program upon completion.

□ Congratulations to the Cohasset Swim Team, who won the South Shore League Championship this year. We salute Kate Anderson and Beth LaLumiere, the coaches of the awesome team. Cohasset is certainly a name on everyone's mind when it comes to their swimming prowess, you and your swimmers deserve a round of applause.

□ Martha Gjesteby, who is the selectmen's liaison to the Mass Municipal Association, has been named to a board on that association. She is a part of the public works, utilities and transportation. Being known for the hard worker that she is, you can be sure she will do an admirable job.

□ Betty Ripley is sure happy as she heads for Florida and her first peek at her brand new grandson . . .

□ A lot of you remember Jack Karle, who now lives in Newport, Rhode Island. Remember his "baby" Priscilla? Well, she is soon to be married, to Matthew Gerard

Pilon, so you can bet their life is hectic at the moment! We certainly want to wish Priscilla and Matthew every happiness as they embark upon this new life together. May your every wish come true, and here's to years of wedded bliss!

□ As many are aware, tonight is the concert of David Crosby and Graham Nash. The committee that has been selling the tickets reports that they are thrilled with the response, and it is great to see the town pull together to support the athletes! The Friends of Cohasset School Sports are friends indeed! In case you missed it, and would like to purchase tickets, call Clark Chatterton at 383-0560 or 383-9850. There is a good chance that he will be able to get seats for you, then you too can be a friend! The date is August 31, the time is 8:00, and they promise it will be super.

Bill Kleinz, Fred Toppan and Pam Byrnes were presented annual service awards in appreciation for their year of service to Century 21 Atlantis Realty, Inc. located in Cohasset.

□ Congratulations to Saadia Bryant of 25 Hobart Lane. Saadia made the Dean's List at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor for the Spring Semester of 1989.

□ Happy birthday to Helen Jason.

□ Sure sounded like the Boy Scout Troop #28 had a great time on their canoeing trip in Northern Maine and New Hampshire. What young boy wouldn't give anything to learn about canoeing and camping, right there in the elements! The boys even saw a moose! Hats off to the Rotary Club for sponsoring the troop and helping to make such adventures possible!

□ That's the news for this week, please call with your family's latest!

Labor Day history

Labor Day has a long history.

In 1869 an association of working men formed a relatively secret organization called the Knights of Labor which eventually evolved as the American Federation of Labor.

Their first convention was held in Pittsburgh, Pa., in November 1881.

Almost a year later, on Sept. 5, 1882, a parade of members of several labor unions marched through New York City.

Oregon was the first state in the union to designate Labor Day as a holiday, initially selecting the first Saturday in June for the observance.

That was in 1887. Colorado, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York quickly enacted a law designating the holiday to recognize labor's contribution to the nation.

Other states followed. In North Carolina, the holiday was observed on the first Thursday in September. Pennsylvania set aside the first Saturday of September.

Louisiana designated Nov. 25 as Labor Day.

Finally, Congress declared in 1894 that the first Monday of September be Labor Day.

Credit for creating the special holiday goes to Matthew Maguire, a machinist from Patterson, N.J., and Peter J. McGuire of New York City, founder of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and co-founder of the Federation of Organized Trades and Labor Unions which was the predecessor of the American Federation of Labor.

The holiday is observed worldwide.

In Australia, it is celebrated on different dates in the various states.

In New Zealand, it is in October.

In most European countries, including the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, it is observed May 1.

School safety tips

Vacation time is about over, and thoughts turn to the re-opening of school and its attendant problems, according to Police Chief Joseph Kealey.

The chief joins other members of the Safety Officers League and the Registry of Motor Vehicles in the promotion of back to school safety and the following thoughts:

Kealey said the greater number of pedestrian accidents occur with students in the third to seventh grades.

The thought occurs that safety must be reviewed at all ages, and each trip must be considered an adventure.

Kealey suggested parents discuss with their child or children the following:

- Crosswalks and their purposes.
- Driveways, small hidden streets with backing cars.
- Pedestrians, cross lights, red and yellow or walk, don't walk signs.
- Green lights, moving cars.
- Streets, who uses them and why.
- School patrols and their duties.
- Police officers and traffic supervisors. Introduce the child.
- Importance of proper use of sidewalks, or if none, the safest place to walk.
- Introduce the child to responsibility and self-sufficiency.
- Confer with teachers as to what is to be taught in school by teachers and safety officers and how to form a partnership in children's safety.

Local man leaves life of intrigue

sidered part of the United States' fleet of warships.

"I actually thought this was the first time a U.S. warship had ever docked in a Russia port, but I was wrong. So I guess it was the first time since 1975," according to Higginson. The negotiations which resulted in the official Coast Guard visit began a year ago.

The Coast Guard was the guest of the Soviet Navy, and it was an experience Higginson will never forget.

As a bystander to the event, Higginson says, "The Russians bent over backwards to welcome us. This was my version of those little steps we need to take."

As the vessel sailed into port, both the Russian and United States bands were performing on the dock. There were several official visits to local dignitaries, always with a glass of Coca Cola on hand, Higginson recalls.

A visit to the Russian Navy admiral's summer residence was going to be a difficult ride by bus for the Coast Guard, Higginson thought. Instead, the Russians arranged for hydroplane boats to carry the servicemen to the summer palace - an extraordinary offer from our former Cold War enemies.

"It was a tremendous feeling," Higginson says. "The people there seem so pleased that it is no longer the official policy to hate Americans. They are very pleased to be nice and to be able to associate with Americans now."

One of his most memorable recollections is a concert he attended in Leningrad. In a huge concert hall, as the curtain rose, Higginson watched as the Soviet Naval band sat on one side of the stage, while the Coast Guard band performed from the opposite side.

"The Russian band was all male, dressed in drab uniforms. The Coast Guard band was men and women in their beautiful dress uniforms. I thought to myself that this was going to be just awful, but they played together beautifully, although the American band played a lot more jazzier music.

"Then after intermission, the curtain rose and the two bands had combined. The house was screaming - it was so exciting," he recalls. "Then there was a piccolo duet with this Russian performer, about six feet, six inches tall, and this tiny American woman. They were wonderful, and after their performance she reached up and kissed him. Everyone loved it."

Higginson predicted after this year's success, the Russian band will initiate a number of changes, including female performers and jazzier arrangements.

The Coast Guard also plays an important role in the international war against drug trafficking, according to Higginson. A Coast Guard attache is stationed in Colombia and there is a training team in Bolivia, instructing that country's military on their anti-drug operations along the rivers. One hundred and twenty training teams were sent around the world last year, all paid by the state department's narcotic bureau.

Regarding the precarious situation in Colombia, Higginson says there is no way the United States can send in troops to help their government battle the powerful drug czars. Military training teams could be useful, but Higginson quickly explains that is how the Vietnam War escalated into a major American conflict.

"We have to be very careful there," he warned. "I hope we've learned a few lessons since then."

Higginson said his own foreign service career has indeed come to an end. He is currently looking for other employment, hopefully something with an international twist.

His three sons are grown, and two have expressed an interest in foreign service work. His wife, Genevra, is still down in Washington, D.C., as director of special events for the National Gallery of the Arts.

Their memories of life in other countries will not be lost, he says.

"I remember one day I went shopping in Algeria and there was a bunch of women at the front of the store by the clerk. I walked in and the clerk yells,'May I help you sir?' I said, 'No, these women were before me.' And he replied, 'Oh, they don't count.' I couldn't believe it, but that's the way life is in some countries. It's an experience."

As he closes his career with the government, Higginson, whose father was a Cohasset selectman and himself a former member of the appeals board, says the intrigue of foreign service remains strong.

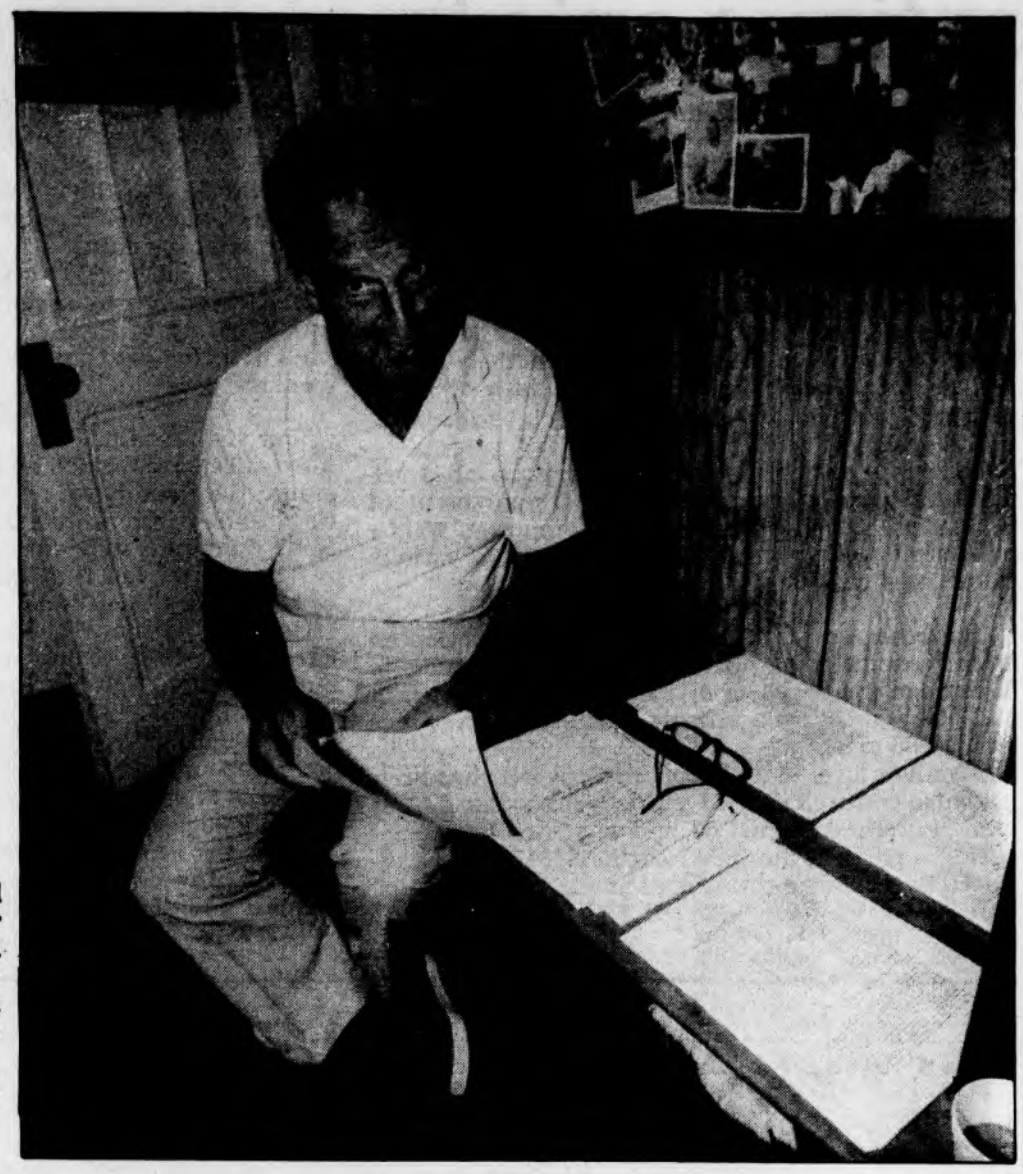
"It was tremendously challenging and extremely exciting."

Letters

Thanks to a great team

To the editor:

(This letter was addressed to the members of the Cohasset Swim Team. Ed.)



Congratulations on a phenomenal season! I know you all thought that it was going to be a killer summer, but you stuck with all the hard work — all those laps in the pool — and it sure did pay off, didn't it? You really deserve to be the South Shore League Champions and I am proud of you!

I hope you all will come back next year so we can have another winning season! Thanks for a great summer. Hope you have a wonderful school year!

Fall outings at the science center

NORTH RIVER CANOE TRIP

Join SSNSC naturalists for the first North River canoe trip of the fall season, Saturday, Sept. 9, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. (raindate: Sept. 10). Members/$20 adult, $16 child under 12 (our canoe); $12 adult, $10 child (your own canoe). Non-members/$26 adult, $21 child under 12 (our canoe); $14 adult, $12 child (your own canoe). This historic, federally designated scenic river is ideal for an autumn canoe trip. Enjoy a picnic lunch at an ancient Indian campground. We provide canoes, paddles, and preservers. Canoes hold 3 adults or 2 adults and 2 children under 12. Some ability to canoe is necessary. Please note the raindate; refunds will not be given unless your space is filled.

INTERPRETER TRAINING

Do you have an enthusiasm for nature and want to share your love of the outdoors with children? The Science Center is offering a four-part, hands-on training program in environmental education to prepare you to be a Science Center guide. Classes meet Tuesday, Sept. 12; Thursday, Sept. 14; Wednesday, Sept. 20; and Friday, Sept. 22, from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Members/$40. Non-members/$60. Registration fee is refunded to those who guide for SSNSC for the fall season, one day a week (2 hours a day). Ongoing educational benefits are also provided.

WILDFLOWER WALK

Join a Science Center naturalist in search of autumn wildflowers, Tuesday, Sept. 12, 10 a.m. to noon. Members/$5. Non-members/$7. Asters, goldenrod, pearly everlasting, and many other colorful native wildflowers decorate our fields and woods in late summer and early autumn. This guided walk will help you recognize and identify the many varieties of fall flora.

NATURE NURSERY

Nature Nursery programs serve to inspire and develop children's awareness of their environment. Children may be registered in September for sessions throughout the year [call the Science Center (617) 659-2559 for a complete schedule and registration information]. They should always dress for the outdoors.

PARENTS & TOTS

Moms and Dads, re-discover the natural world by sharing time with your tot in the outdoors, Wednesdays (Sept. 13, 20, 27, Oct. 4, 11, 18) or Fridays (Sept. 15, 22, 29, Oct. 6, 13, 20), 10 to 11:15 a.m. Members/$50. Non-members/$65 per six-week session). Fee includes one parent and one tot. Additional child Members/$15. Non-members/$20. Papooses free.

THREES

Sensory awareness activities related to nature will be emphasized in this program for 3-year-olds, Tuesdays, Sept. 12, 19, 26, Oct. 3, 10, 17; 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Members/$60. Non-members/$75 per six-week session. Children's curiosity of their surroundings will be enhanced as they take short hikes through the autumn woods and to the pond. Snack is provided. Children must be 3 by August 31, 1989.

FOURS AND FIVES

Naturalist Barbara Devine will teach 4- and 5-year olds about the wonders of the outdoors in a small group setting, Thursdays, Sept. 14, 21, 28, Oct. 5, 12, 19; 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Members/$60. Non-members/$75 per six-week session. In addition to walks and activities, the children will listen to nature stories and be encouraged to borrow a book from the nature library each week. A snack is provided. Children must be 4 years old by August 31, 1989.

AFTER SCHOOL SCIENCE CLUB

Join teacher/naturalist Elsa Ryberg for "Creepy Crawly Critters," Tuesdays, Sept. 12, 19, 26, Oct. 3, 10, 17; 3:45 to 5 p.m. Members/$45. Non-members/$60 per six-week session. You'll be on your knees searching the soil for worms and beetles...dipping your net into the pond to see how water insects live. Learn how spiders eat, move breathe, and defend themselves. Crafts are included. Dress for the outdoors.

9 - 12 YEARS

Meet other "junior naturalists" with whom you can share your love and curiosity for nature, Thursdays, Sept. 14, 21, 28, Oct. 5, 12, 19; 3:45 to 5 p.m. Members/$45. Non-members/$60 per six-week session. Outdoor, hands-on experiences will be supplemented by nature experiments and crafts. Opportunities to explore woods, swamps, fields, and ponds. Dress for the outdoors.

WEDNESDAY NATURE WALK

Join a Science Center naturalist for a relaxed, informal walk, Wednesday, Sept. 13, 9:30 a.m. to noon, to explore the Glades, No. Scituate. Members/free. Non-members/$4. The rocky cliffs and wooded areas afford spectacular views of the Atlantic. Ideal for all ages.

FALL FLOWER DESIGNS

Craftsperson Ginny Ballou-Hunt will conduct a two-part workshop on fall flowers, including Thursday, Sept. 14, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., a wildflower walk to pick and press asters, goldenrods, and other beautiful fall wildflowers, and/or Thursday, Oct. 26, 7 to 10 p.m. to fashion a decorative floral lampshade with a delicate rice paper overlay, using the flowers pressed in September. You may register for either or both workshops: 9/14: Members/$13, Non-members/$16; 10/26: Members/ 15, Non-members/$18; both programs: Members/$26, Non-members/$32. Materials are provided. Bring an X-ACTO knife or a pair of small, sharp scissors.

HAWK MIGRATIONS

Naturalist and avid hawk watcher Bob Abrams will lead a trip to observe migrating hawks, Sunday, Sept. 17, 7:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Members/$9. Non-members/$12. Mid-September is the best time to see goshawks, sharp-shins, red-tails, red-shoulders, kestrels, merlins, and ospreys. If we're lucky, we might see a bald eagle! Carpool from the Science Center. Wear sturdy footgear and bring lunch.

CORN FESTIVAL

The Science Center will hold its annual Corn Festival, Saturday, Sept. 16, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The celebration features colonial craft demonstrations and a craft fair, music by the environmentally concerned Earthtunes, an agricultural fair, farm kitchen, a scarecrow contest, a snack bar, and lots more. Admission: adults/$1.50; children 14 years and under/$.75; children under 3 years/free.

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than one mile from the Route 3 interchange. Hours: 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday; closed Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 4. All programs require pre-registration. Call (617) 659-2559 or drop by the Center for a complete list of autumn activities.

The Fishing Line

By Bill Bowers

A 941-pound tuna nabbed in tourney

What a fish!

Tom DePersia of Marshfield, captain of the Green Harbor charter boat Bigfish II, brought in a 941-pound bluefin tuna Aug. 26 to win the 19th annual Green Harbor Tuna Club tournament.

The fish was caught by Dave Williams of New York.

The second-place winner—and the only other tuna caught in the tournament—was a 388-pounder fooled by Ken Medeiros of Plymouth, skipper of Hog Wild.

Both tuna came from Stellwagen Bank.

In other tournament news, Bernie Hamill of Cohasset caught a 17-pound, 8-ounce bluefish to win the $300 first prize in the third annual Jordan Hospital Bluefish Tournament.

He also won a commemorative plaque and a rod and reel donated by Adams Tackle of Pembroke, which provided all merchandise prizes.

Stephanie Haines of Dedham won second place with a 17-pound, 2-ounce fish. She brought home $200, a rod and reel and a plaque.

Third-place winner was Bob Forsyth of Marshfield, whose 15-pound, 9-1/2-ounce bluefish won him $100.

Doug Costa and David McConnell, both of Plymouth, took the fourth and fifth prizes of $50. Their fish weighed 15 pounds, 2 ounces and 14 pounds, 14 ounces.

First prize in the under-14 junior division went to Zak Gillam of Marshfield, whose 15-pound, 7-ounce fish netted him a rod and reel and a trophy.

Joe Smith of Pembroke, son of Adams Tackle owner Bill Smith, came in second with a 14-pound, 9-ounce blue, also winning a trophy and a rod and reel.

Third prize for a 14-pound, 8-ounce fish went to Sally Hamill of Cohasset (Bernie's daughter), who brought home a trophy and a tackle box stocked with lures.

The fourth- and fifth-place winners were Jimmy Tracy of Plymouth (14 pounds, 5 ounces) and Alex Clark of Norwell (13 pounds, 2 ounces). Both boys won trophies and tackle boxes with lures.

Bill Bois at Adams reported excellent bluefishing close inshore from Brant Rock to Scituate Harbor.

Dave Whitney of Marshfield won a $20 gift certificate for his 14-pound, 4-ounce bluefish, the largest of the week.

Larry Butler of Pembroke also got a certificate for the 5-pound, 6-ounce largemouth bass he caught in a secret Pembroke pond.

Richie McCluskey, 13, of Weymouth caught another largemouth of 3 pounds, 3 ounces in Whitman's Pond in Weymouth.

Bois said both sportsmen released their bass alive after weigh-in.

Janet Trask at Trask Tackle in Scituate said Jordan Hospital tourney winner Bernie Hamill has entered a massive 17-pound, 10-ounce bluefish in the Trask Bigfish tournament, which runs through Labor Day.

Several local anglers took blues during a weekend blitz off Rexhame Beach, Marshfield.

Gordon Price of Scituate and his son, Tyler, pulled two 12-pound blues out of the fracas.

Jim Clancy, 11, of Scituate had another bluefish of 13 pounds, 3 ounces, caught on a Rapala plug.

School-size striped bass are plentiful now in the North River from the mouth to the Union Street bridge, reported Jane Duffy at Mary's Boat Livery in Marshfield.

One angler, who declined to leave his name, weighed in a 20-pound, 36-inch keeper bass.

Small jointed plugs, Kastmasters and seaworms, all will take these river linesides.

Remember, you must release carefully all stripers less than 36 inches long.

Flounder are pleasing North River bottom bouncers fishing the incoming tide near Damon's Point. Use seaworms or pieces of squid for bait.

There have been several reports of stripers chasing pogies right into Scituate Harbor over the weekend; so this area should be checked out.

Bob Burke of Weymouth caught a 14-pound, 9-ounce bluefish on a mackerel chunk at Harding's Ledge, reported Pat Newcomb at Fore River Tackle in Quincy.

And Cliff Edwards of Quincy weighed in a 44-pound, 7-ounce striper he caught on cut bait at Boston Light.

Keep those lines in the water.

Vo-tech grads continue onto four-year colleges

By Judy Enright
Mariner staff

Dr. Clifford W. Easton has a suggestion for those who would like to get two educations in high school instead of just one.

Sign up now at South Shore Regional Vocational Technical School while there are still some openings, he says.

Dr. Easton, superintendent/director of the school, says his students graduate with high school diplomas, and like other high school grads can choose further education, or they can go directly into the work force. "The interesting thing about our programs is you get two educations here instead of just one," he said. "You get a high school diploma but you can go directly to work or go on for additional education."

Some graduates, he added, go immediately into careers and earn as much as those who graduate from college with four more years of education.

DIRTY FINGERNAILS

He added, after describing some of the courses the school offers, "our programs have obviously moved from dirty fingernails to high technology." Almost all trades are becoming highly technical, he said.

Vo-Tech's Hanover and Abington campuses will open on Sept. 6 for 9th graders only who spend that full day familiarizing themselves with the facilities. A picnic lunch is provided for them by the school.

Grades 10 to 12 return on Sept. 7, which is a full day and includes a hot meal. Bus routes for Vo-Tech students are mailed to their homes because students come from so many different communities.

The regional system serves the towns of Hanover, Norwell, Scituate, Cohasset, Rockland, Abington, and Whitman/Hanson on two campuses, one in Hanover and another in Abington.

Dr. Easton said there are about 50 fewer students enrolled this year than last year when the starting figure was 501. He said that official enrollment figures will not be available until Oct. 1.

He added that in addition to students from the district towns, there will be about 70 tuition students from outside towns in the school this year. That figure stays fairly constant each year, he said.

There were probably from 60 to 65 fewer applications to the school this year than in the past, he added Those who are interested in applying now should do so soon by calling the main number, 878-8822.

Openings exist in all three undergraduate classes in machine shop, welding, metal fabrication, machine packaging and marine tech.

New this year at the school will be a course in American studies which will be team taught and focused on the sophomore class.

There will also be a number of extracurricular activities available to students and an activity period will be introduced on Wednesdays with offerings ranging from chess club to athletic clubs for intramural sports.

There will also be a computer learning lab developed through a grant from the Department of Education. During the year, the computers will be networked within the learning site and to various classrooms outside the learning center.

LUNCH PRICES

Like other area schools, Vo-Tech has experienced an increase in lunch prices. Hot lunches for students have been increased from 85-cents to $1, which is still below most area schools. Faculty lunches rose from $1.65 to $2.

A familiar face, that of Leonard Cody who has been guidance counselor for 31 years, will be missing this year. He retired August 31 and was feted by staffers during a party at Justin's Hearthside. He will be replaced by guidance counselor Pamela Titus.

Budget cuts have affected vocational-technical education as they have affected all schools, Easton said. "We rely more heavily on grants now than ever before."

He added that the initiative the school planned to take in its academic programs has been slowed because of budget cuts.

Easton said he felt sorry for member towns who were hit so hard by state aid cuts but still, by law, must live up to their Vo-Tech assessments. "This puts them in a bad position and I feel badly about it," he said.

PARTNERS

"For the first time in years, the state budget cuts have affected the cities and towns more than the regions. It's usually more severe at the regions. We want to be partners with them in education. The last thing we want is to be adversaries," he said.

"The way the law is structured makes us appear to be adversaries," he added.

He said the school will offer all the courses it offered last year and that no staffers were cut. He is currently looking for math, reading and painting/wallfinishing teachers and hopes to hire them provisionally pending approval at the next school committee meeting.

School is an eight-period day and runs from 7:50 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

School committee meetings are at 7:30 p.m. the third Wednesday of every month at the Hanover campus and the public is invited to attend.

Lots of food, lots of fun at the Blueberry festival

May Merritt patiently awaits for the entertainment portion of last weekend's blueberry festival.

Magician Michael Ford was a major attraction during last week's Beechwood Church late summer festival.

Beechwood Church Pastor Steve Hall tells the audience at last week's festival to enjoy the tremendous food prepared by church members for the annual event.

The Hall family, Larry (Dad), Brendon, Cameron, Stephen and firends, settle back to enjoy the magic show during last weekend's blueberry festival.

Nature outings for the family at S.S. Science Center

Enjoy a walk in the woods or a leisurely canoe trip searching for natural happenings with naturalists from the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell.

WEDNESDAY NATURE WALK

Join a Science Center naturalist for a leisurely walk along the beach and estuaries of Third Cliff, Scituate, Wednesday, Sept. 6, 9:30 - noon. Members/free. Non-members/$4. We will be on the lookout for native plant and animal life, migrating birds, and late summer wildflowers. These informal walks are perfect for all ages. Meet at the Science Center and register at the Main Desk. Call 659-2559 for more information.

GREECE SLIDE SHOW

International travelers and long-time friends of the Science Center Jim and Caroline Brown will present their impressions of Greece, Friday, Sept. 8, 1-2:30 p.m., in the Science Center's first Armchair Travel program of the fall season. Members/$4. Non-members/$6. Part of an Elderhostel tour, the Browns cruised through the enchanting Cyclades, visiting isles of Delos and Mykonos. Blown ashore by a sudden storm, the group retreated to the mainland, stopping at Mycene and Corinth before proceeding northward to Macedonia, home of Alexander the Great. Join us for this special presentation! Refreshments served. Call the Science Center 659-2559 for registration information.

Rolf Egon, an officer of the South Shore Astronomical Society, (a SSNSC affiliate) will present a slide presentation and viewing of the first quarter moon, Friday, Sept. 8, 8 - 10 p.m. Members/$3.50. Non-members/$4.50. Following slides of our solar system and far-flung galaxies, we will go outside to the observatory telescopes for viewing the moon, double-stars, the Ring Nebula in the constellation Lyra, the Andromeda galaxy, and the planet Saturn. Call the Science Center 659-2559 for registration information.

NORTH RIVER CANOE TRIP

Join SSNSC naturalists for the first North River canoe trip of the fall season, Saturday, Sept. 9, 9 a.m. - 3 p.m. (raindate: Sept. 10). Members/$20 adult, $16 child under 12 (our canoe); $12 adult, $10 child (your own canoe). This historic, federally designated scenic river is ideal for an autumn canoe trip. Expect to see migrating waterfowl, native flora, and the many old shipyards that dot the riverbanks. Enjoy a picnic lunch at an ancient Indian campground. We provide canoes, paddles, and preservers. Canoes hold 3 adults or 2 adults and 2 children under 12. Some ability to canoe is necessary. Plase note the raindate; refunds will not be given unless your space is filled. Call the Science Center 659-2559 for registration information.

The Science Center will hold its annual Corn Festival, Saturday, Sept. 16, 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. Colonial craft demonstrations, craft fair, music by the Earthtunes, agricultural fair, farm kitchen, food, trail walks, and lots more. Admission: adults/$1.50; children 14 years and under/$.75; children under 3 years/free.

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than one mile from the Route 3 interchange. Hours: 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday; closed Sundays in August and Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 4. Call 659-2559 or drop by the Center for a complete list of autumn activities.

Art center open house

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, will hold its fall open house Sunday, Sept. 10 from 4 to 6 p.m.

The public is cordially invited to attend the afternoon reception and meet with the artists, Thomas Rebek and Judy Rossman who are currently exhibiting in the Bancroft Gallery, and the South Shore Art Center Gallery artists who are exhibiting current works in the Dillon Gallery.

It is also an opportunity to tour the facility and register for all fall courses and workshops. This fall, there are many new courses and workshops for both adults and young artists to choose.

Of special interest for adults are two lecture/trips. LANDSCAPE PAINTING & TRIP TO FULLER MUSEUM with Katherine Smith will meet Friday, Sept. 29 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Spend the day outdoors painting on the grounds of the museum, lunch in the cafe and view the exhibits in this enjoyable one day workshop. GALLERY TOUR with Louise Kalish will meet Thursday, Sept. 21 from 10:30 a.m. to noon. Visit the Arden Gallery on Newbury Street and view the work of George Snyder (acrylic paintings/assemblage) and Ed Hendricks (kinetic steel sculpture). Artist Louise Kalish will critique and discuss the exhibit.

In addition to these lectures, there are also workshops in September, October and November. For parents of young children, SETTING UP A STUDIO SPACE FOR YOUR CHILD AT HOME will be offered Wednesday, Sept. 13 from 7 to 8 p.m. Come to this workshop and go home with the confidence, ready to encourage creative discovery in your child.

For a complete listing of courses and workshops or for more information please call the South Shore Art Center weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 617-383-9548. Pre-registration is required for all courses.

Center hosts corn festival

South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell will hold its annual Corn Festival, Saturday, Sept. 16, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The festival celebrates the natural and cultural heritage of New England, its foods, crafts, and traditions centered around the fall harvest.

Admission to the Corn Festival is $1.50 for adults, $.75 for children 14 years and under; and free for children under 3 years. The festival will be held rain or shine.

Among the activities planned are demonstrations of colonial crafts and New England traditions, including chairmaking, quilting, angora spinning, storytelling, and honey harvesting.

You might also create a scarecrow to enter the Scarecrow Contest. Or, enter your prize vegetables or flowers in the Agricultural Fair. And don't forget to buy your raffle tickets, either before or during the Corn Festival. For $1 each or $5 for a book of six tickets, you might win a lovely Eldred Wheeler night stand ($500 value); two subscriptions to the Nickerson Theatre for the 89-90 season ($200 value); or coupons for six haircuts and 1 perm at Fantastic Sams ($104 value). Information, entry forms, and tickets for these events are available at the Science Center (617) 659-2559.

The Corn Festival is funded in part by the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities. The Science Center is located on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than one mile from the Route 3 interchange (Exit 13).

Volunteers needed

If native wildlife preservation and environmental education are of interest, you are invited to a new volunteer organizational meeting Wednesday, Sept. 6 at 7 p.m. at the New England Wildlife Center in Hingham.

The private, non-profit center has both a wildlife hospital and a thriving education program that reaches both children and adults throughout New England.

Center volunteers work in all areas: clerical, construction, research, treatment, maintenance, and education. The organizational meeting will focus on opportunities in animal handling and care (including birds of prey), educational display design, fundraising, and educational programs.

It will be held in the Center's new hospital located in the Hingham Ammunition Depot. To RSVP and get directions to the facility, call the Center's office at 617-749-5387 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays.

With IMPULSE, you pay only for the movies you want. Call your local office for more information on how you can order pay-per-view.

"TECH TIP" OF THE MONTH

"All snow - Is it my TV or the cable?"

If this is your question, Service Technician Paul Scioscia has a tip for you: If you have a VCR hooked up to your cable service, there's an easy way to find out. Just insert a pre-recorded tape (that you know to be good) into the VCR and press play. If your tape plays, then your cable service is not working. Give our repair service a call at:

659-2274 (from Hanover, Scituate, Norwell) or 740-2416 (from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull)

- We'll either correct the problem over the phone or schedule a service technician to come out.

The course meets Thursday from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for four weeks beginning September 21. Planning for New Parents with Sandra Manzella explores projected college costs and how to prepare financially for your child's education. The class will meet for two weeks in November on Thursday from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

An exciting new course called "Mental Aerobics: Seeing Opportunities and Creating Alternatives" will encourage you to think creatively and expand your horizons. This class will meet on Saturday, Oct. 21 from 10 to 3 p.m.

Dr. Helene Lieb, a Counseling Psychologist, will be teaching three courses in coping strategies: Assertiveness Training, Stress Management, and Coping with Family Stress.

Two computer courses will be offered: Introduction to Personal and Home Computers and Computers for the Novice.

Craft courses include Sweater Sampler, Needlepoint, Flower Arranging, and workshops in Cut and Pierced Lampshades and Fabric Painting and Decorating.

A course in Contract Bridge is being given on Mondays from 8 to 10 p.m. The course is taught by David Leopold, a leading tournament player and Life Master. This 8-week course begins Oct. 2.

Landscape Design and Planning will be held on Mondays from 9 to 11 for eight weeks beginning September 18. Learn the basics of landscape design and how to solve problem areas.

To register or for further information regarding these or any of our courses, call Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088.

Walking tour Sept. 17

The Cohasset Historical Society's third summer walking tour of Cohasset's most historic sites will be held Sunday, Sept. 17.

This tour event will met at the Cohasset Central Cemetery, corner of North Main St. and Joy Place at 3 p.m. A walk through the ancient Burying Ground, dating from early Colonial days, will be followed by a bus trip along Cohasset's first "main street," now called King Street, to Beechwood's Mill Lane where the site of Mordecai Lincoln's early ironworks will be visited.

Cohasset's early Burying Ground near the village center dates from 1705, shortly after the first settlers arrived here from Hingham. Oldest stone among the "old slates" is that of Margaret (Hardin) Tower, wife of Ibrook Tower, a first settler of the Conahasset area of east Hingham. The walking tour will visit the original section of the cemetery to see numerous of the "old slates" marking the town's first generation of settlers. As population grew the Burying Ground expanded to include 19th and 20th century sections in which generations of resident families were buried.

The 1670 survey map of Conahasset made in connection with the division of lands in this area delineated several proposed highways, and today's King Street was one. Originally intended to be the main thoroughfare of the town, King Street exists today as an ancient way lined with a number of fine examples of early homes. The tour will travel the "Old" or original part of King Street on its way to the site of Lincoln's early water-powered ironworks at Turtle Island off Mill Lane in Beechwood. There, using the flow of Bound Brook to turn the mill's wheel, Mordecai Lincoln smelted bog iron ore to make tools and hardware for local settlers, thus creating one of Conahasset's first major business ventures.

At the Mill Lane site, refreshments will be served. The September 17 Society walking tour is free and will be open to the public.

Republican cook-out Sept. 10

The Cohasset Republican Town Committee is sponsoring a cook-out Sunday, Sept. 10 at the home of Ted and Julie Guild, 365 Jerusalem Road, beginning at 4:30 p.m.

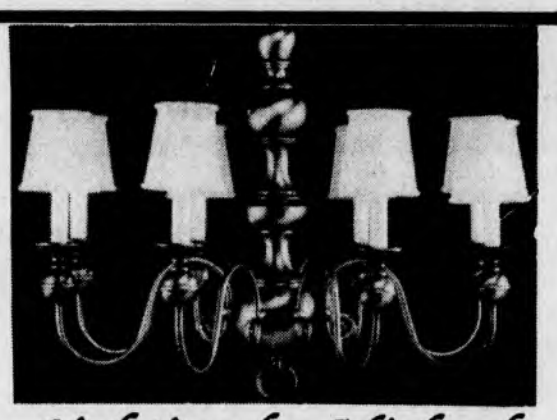
All are welcome to join in on the festivities and meet the candidates, Bill Weld and Jon Bryan.

Former U.S. Attorney Weld is running for Governor and will speak around 5 p.m. Weld has spent seven of the last eight years working for the Justice Department as U.S. Attorney for Massachusetts and Asst. U.S. Attorney in charge of the Crime Division. He has been a Chief Prosecutor for organized crime and corruption cases.

Bryan is trying to bring government back to the people in his second attempt against Gerry Studds for the 10th Congressional District seat.

Tickets for the cook-out are $5 per person and can be obtained by sending a check A.S.A.P. — made out to: The Cohasset Republican Town Committee — to Julie Guild, 365 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, Ma. 02025. No tickets will be sold at the door.

For any further details call 383-6443.



Pack 38 Cub Scouts

At the commencement of Pack 38's Bike Rodeo the Scouts registered their bikes with Cohasset's Safety Officer, Clifford Jones. John Wilkie, of Cohasset Cycle Sports, checked the bikes for safety. The Scouts learned how to inspect their bikes for faulty brakes.

The Cub Scout Rodeo included eight course events including: slalom, coasting, tunnel ride, figure eight, slow race, safety race and time travel. The First Place winner is Ben Smoot; Second Place - Turley Laas, and Third Places - Christopher Olney and Ben Ketchem.

Thanks to Elaine Smoot, Jeff Forsdick, Linda Farrag and Carol Bestick for their planning of the Rodeo.

On the Border With Area Rugs and Wallcoverings
Spruce up a special room without spending a lot of money or time by outlining it with border wallcoverings or splashing its floor with area rugs. Both enhance visual interest, create unity and add a "designer" touch quickly, easily and economically.
Borders can complement your room's architectural design. Placed at ceiling's level, they add spaciousness. Try using borders like "molding" to highlight windows, staircases, doorways and other hard-to-decorate areas.
Areas rugs, like border wallcoverings, define living spaces and give definition to a room.
Area rugs are perfect for hardwood floors. They let the beauty of the floors show while providing an acoustical cushion to soften sounds.
Round rugs add unexpected shape to rooms while runners polish otherwise empty hallways. An oval braided rug in a cozy kitchen takes the morning chill of unslippered toes.
Can't afford a full size oriental? Buy an area rug and get a luxurious look at considerable savings. With a little imagination, you can use area rugs and border wallcoverings to easily, economically add spark to even the dowdiest room.

Fallon named to UMASS post

Bill Fallon, former girls basketball coash at Cohasset High School, was named the new Head Women's Basketball Coach at the University of Massachusetts/Boston.

A native of Hull, Fallon comes to the Harbor Campus with solid coaching credentials following nine successful years guiding the Women's Basketball Program at Cohasset High School. During this time his team's have qualified for the state tournament five out of the past six seasons, culminating with a State Division III Championship in 1988. Fallon, a 1980 graduate of UMASS/Amherst, was named Boston Globe Coach of the Year in 1985 and has the distinction of coaching the Scholastic Girls Medal Team in the Baystate Games the past two summers.

"I look forward to the challenge of coming to UMASS/Boston because there is tremendous opportunity for growth," said Fallon. "I think with its locality and facilities, we can make the women's program competitive in a short period of time."

Fallon inherits a UMASS/Boston Women's Basketball Team that completed last season with a 4-21 overall record and placed sixth in the Little East Conference.

Youth soccer clinic registration

The Cohasset Recreation Department is holding youth soccer clinics for the kindergarten, first and second grades.

The clinics begin Saturday, Sept. 23 at Cohasset High School in the front field. The clinics will be coordinated by David Pike and Ted Carroll. Applications are being mailed out this week.

The cost of the six-week clinic is $25 per child with a $5 discount for any additional children in a family. Each child will receive a shirt.

Registrations are being held Saturday, Sept. 9 from 9 to 11 a.m. at the recreation office, town hall and from noon to 2 p.m. at Milliken Field. Registration will also take place Sunday, Sept. 10 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Deer Hill School during the pancake breakfast.

If you would like to mail your application send it to: Cohasset Recreation Department, 41 Highland Ave. Checks should be payable to the Town of Cohasset.

Slimdown class in September

Nutritionist Patricia Messing is starting a new class called Slimdown, an eight week group weight control and exercise program designed to provide sound weight control techniques and up-to-date nutrition information.

Participants will design an individual eating and exercise program.

Classes meet Tuesdays from 6:45 to 8:15 p.m., starting September 12 at the Cohasset Community Center. It includes 45 minutes of moderate exercise. Cost is $80 for the eight-week program.

Messing holds a master's degree in nutrition and is an exercise instructor.

Call 383-0088 to register or for more information.

Crafters, antique dealers invited

Crafters and antique dealers are invited to participate in the South Shore Natural Science Center's annual Corn Festival, Saturday, Sept. 16, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The fair's emphasis is on colonial, natural, and harvest-type crafts and antiques, including blacksmithing, rughooking, tinsmithing, quilting, weaving, carving, basketmaking, and candlemaking.

The fall celebration, held at the Science Center on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, will feature demonstrations of colonial and harvest crafts, music by the environmentally concerned Earthtunes, an agricultural fair, a farm kitchen, and the Kernel's snack bar, activities for the whole family, as well as antique and craft booths.

The fee is $20 per 10-foot frontage. Crafters' work will be juried. Please call Connie Beal at 659-2559 or 659-7196 for an application or more information.

South Shore Natural Science Center, a non-profit organization founded in 1962, promotes understanding of the natural and cultural environment through educational programs and resources.

Lots of fun and food at Little League lunch

By Marie Buckley
Special to the Mariner

A recent break-up cookout at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kevin Lewis culminated the 1989 season for the 10 year-olds and under Cohasset All Star Little Leaguers.

Lots of fun, food, and reminiscing about the summer season of baseball was enjoyed by players, coaches and their families.

The team, under the able direction of Coaches Kevin Lewis, David Buckley, Buddy Bilton and Kevin O'Connor, accomplished a fine showing of 7 wins and 6 losses in the North River Tournament Summer League. This is the first time Cohasset has sponsored a 10 and under team and everyone associated with the team appreciates the efforts of the players as well as the coaches. The team was comprised of 15 players, all of whom were diligent and hardworking and dedicated to the team. This resulted in a rewarding experience for all.

A highlight of the season was Cohasset's win over South Plymouth in the ninth inning. The game took place as part of South Plymouth's Founders Day celebration. Cohasset was interviewed on FM Radio after the game.

The team had a grueling schedule for the month of July with four games and two practices each week. And in spite of the heat this group proved to be a very determined Baseball team.

The season finale was the Dean Witter Tournament in Hingham, in August. Despite the tough competition, Cohasset proved to be a formidable opponent, beating Norwood 9-5, losing to Dedham 3-1, and losing to Hyde Park 12-0.

The Cohasset 10 and under All Stars wish to thank their families and friends for their continued support throughout the summer season. A special thank you goes to Peter Laugelle and the crew of the Cohasset Park Department who kept Barnes Field so neatly trimmed not only during the regular Little League season, but also throughout the summer when our out-of-town opponents came to play!

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormons) at 379 Gardner St. in Hingham will hold a 12-week Family Relations Course starting Sunday, Sept. 10 during the Sunday School session at 10:30 a.m.

The purpose of the course is to foster a more loving home environment between husband and wife and children. The class will be led by Bro. Peter Twomey of Marshfield, member of the congregation. Opinions and viewpoints expressed often provide comfort to other class members, Twomey said. Learning to understand and communicate is the key to a happier togetherness.

Over the years, the LDS church has presented this course as an aid to married couples who want to enhance their sacred relationship and establish strong Christian homes.

For more information call Polly at 383-1847.

Dredging funds proposed

A key House committee has rejected the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers budget proposal which would have ended funding of dredging projects in 21 southeastern Massachusetts communities.

Those communities include Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Kingston, Marshfield, Plymouth and Scituate.

Earlier this year, according to U.S. Rep. Gerry E. Studds, D-Cohasset, the Army Corps asked the House Appropriations Committee to adopt its plan to stop maintaining navigation projects in bodies of water handling less than 25,000 tons of commerce annually.

This threshold did not differentiate between high and low-value cargo and did not consider the recreational value of a project.

"Harbormasters, selectmen, finance committees and residents of 21 towns in the Tenth Congressional District can now breathe a sigh of relief," said Studds.

Studds noted that over many years commercial fishing piers, housing developments, marinas and other recreational areas were built in reliance on the navigability of harbor channels.

Money found for cemetery

Plans for a new town cemetery have been revived once again, and this time it won't be costing the taxpayers.

At their Tuesday night meeting, selectmen listened to and supported a proposal outlined by Glen Pratt, chairman of the cemetery study committee.

Although last spring voters decided not to raise their taxes to fund a $50,000 cemetery project, the plan had received prior approval by two town meetings.

Several weeks ago, the study committee received permission from selectmen to talk with town officials about ways the design and construction of a cemetery could be funded without raising taxes.

More than $44,000 was discovered in the cemetery department's "Sale of Lots" account, Pratt explained, and town counsel advised the committee that money could be used to fund the project.

Their proposal to selectmen was to borrow a short term loan when payments become necessary, probably in December, 1989. If the term of the borrowing is one year, then the interest payments could be made from the "Sale of Lots" account.

In fiscal year 1992, the cemetery, which will be located along Pleasant Street and Smith Place on land formerly controlled by the school department, will be generating income from the sale of lots. That income will be placed back into the "Sale of Lots" account to repay the amount taken out to construct the project, Pratt explained.

Another option, which was not supported by the David Crosby and Graham Nash performed for an adoring crowd last Thursday night at the South Shore Music Circus. Proceeds from the sale of five hundred concert tickets are going to support the Cohasset school sports program.

Hingham resident is a candidate for state senate

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

A former classroom teacher, a lover of history, and a hardened Boston businessman is now charting a course for Beacon Hill.

Don Hussey of Hingham is running for the state senate seat now held by William Golden of Weymouth.

Since Senator Golden has all but announced his campaign for Lieutenant Governor, Republican Robert Hedlund of Hingham is eying a run for Golden's seat. Possible Democratic challengers appear to be Rep. Robert Ambler and Selectman Brian MacDonald, both of Weymouth, with Christy Mihos of Cohasset another possible Republican candidate. Human Services Secretary Phil Johnston at one time considered a a campaign of his own.

Hussey did not throw his support to Hedlund, a neighbor and fellow Republican, because, "he lacks the life experiences he needs for the job," according to Hussey. Although personal friends, Hussey said the young candidate "is a nice young man. But it will take more than that. As a state senator, you will have to make decisions based on life experiences. You can't act impulsively in government, as young people are apt to do. Only with great patience can you accomplish anything in government. My experiences in business have taught me the art of patience.

"Besides," he said with a smile, "I can't throw my support to anyone else, because I know I could do a better job."

Life experiences is a phrase used frequently by the 46 year-old resident of Ocean View Drive. They began for him in a sixth grade classroom in Norwell where he taught from 1969 to 1981. Those years were, in his words, "the jewel of my life."

The time spent as a teacher left an indelible mark on his life, and for Hussey there is no issue more vital than the survival and success of the public school system.

The most important problem in this country is not crime, drugs, or fiscal problems, he said. It is the survival of the educational system.

"Of course, all of those things are important," he stated. "But educating our young people is what

A glorious concert for Cohasset sports

Clark Chatterton, Cohasset's school athletic director, was standing by the concession stand at the South Shore Music Circus last Thursday night, minutes before the entertainers walked on stage.

There were a few more tickets to be sold, and then he could call it quits for the night. By showtime, Chatterton had successfully rid himself of the remaining tickets, and the Friends of Cohasset School Sports had garnered $6,300 in its first fundraiser for 1989.

At a gathering at Kimball's By The Sea following the David Crosby and Graham Nash concert, Chatterton expressed amazement at the success of their efforts. For the past three weeks, members of the quickly-assembled organization had devised the fundraising activity, publicized it, and sold 500 tickets.

Through the generosity of music circus executive director Edward Kasses, the Friends of Cohasset School Sports were consigned 500 seats in the first eight rows of the theatre. They paid the regular admission price for the seats, and then sold those tickets at a profit.

The $6,300 raised by last Thursday's event will be given to the school department to offset cuts in the athletic budget. The hope that is future fundraisers will allow the schools to keep its athletic user fee at

Selectmen form anti-drug group

Keeping in step with the federal government, Cohasset selectmen are forming their own blue ribbon commission to deal with the drug problem on a local level.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby suggested Monday night that the board form a commission which will report back to selectmen and the school committee.

In light of the president's recent attack on the international supply of illegal drugs, Gjesteby said selectmen should also initiate some effort, but on a community level.

She suggested the blue riboon panel report back to selectmen and the school committee with their findings by December 1. She recommended that the commission include several members, such as the police chief, the school health education coordinator, local physicians, parents and teachers.

"I think we've got to prepare our children and citizens about the drug situation," she noted.

Selectman Ned Tebbetts said the committee should also study the problem of alcohol abuse in the community.

"I think we should define their charge more specifically - to evaluate drug and alcohol abuse in the town - and they should recommend courses of action," Selectman Diana Kornet suggested.

Gjesteby said the committee could also include ex-addicts and professional counselors.

Selectmen unanimously endorsed the formation of the commission.

Anyone interested in appointment to the blue ribbon commission of drugs should contact the selectmen's office at town hall.

Minot Light Round-about

Boaters are invited to participate in the second annual Minot's Light Round-about held off Cohasset on September 16.

The boats which will participate in the race are primarily Alden Ocean Rowing Shells, both singles and doubles, which were developed by Arthur Martin. A former Cohasset resident, Martin will participate in the race.

The course is a five-mile triangular open ocean row for experienced sailors. An on-board bailer and personal floatation device is required. Handicapping for age, sex and rig will be taken into account with a staggered start.

The race begins at noon at Sandy Beach on Atlantic Avenue. Registration is at 10 a.m. on Sandy Beach. There will be post race refreshments, and an award ceremony featuring the presentation of the Francis Haggerty Memorial Trophy. There will also be a free rowing clinic for experienced and beginning scullers. Loaner boats will be available.

After the race, the annual meeting of the Alden Rowing Shell Assn. will be held. More than 750 members throughout the United States and Canada belong to this largest rowing association in the country.

There is a $15 entry fee which can be sent by check to "Minot Round-about," Paul Mogan, c/o Shoreline Oar and Sail, P.O. Box 460, N. Scituate, Mass. 02020.

Rock and roll superstars got to meet a few local celebrities backstage after the Crosby and Nash concert held last week at the music circus. Cemetery fee change

The cemetery study committee has proposed a series of fee increases, but selectmen said the recommendations must be "fine-tuned" before they are approved.

Selectmen serve as the cemetery commissioners, and as such must approve any changes in the fee schedule.

According to study committee chairman Glen Pratt, Cohasset currently has the third lowest grave site fee among 18 communities surveyed. Although most cemeteries charge between $600 and $700 for a grave site, Cohasset charges $250. The committee recommended that it be increased to $300 for a single grave.

Grave sites in the town's cemeteries may only be purchased by Cohasset residents or former residents. The study committee suggested that grave sites for former residents could be increased to about $500 per site.

Study committee chairman Glenn Pratt noted that Cohasset now charges $125 for perpetual care, but he recommended that be increased to $200, and combined with the grave site fee. The chairman also noted that Cohasset's charge for grave openings, which is now $125, should be increased to $200 or more.

"When you add everything else, it's a terrible burden," Selectman Martha Gjesteby noted.

Pratt suggested that the town implement a "buy-back" mechanism so the town can regain any unused grave sites being sold by the owners.

Selectmen chairman Burt Pratt suggested the committee review the proposed changes before bringing them back to selectmen for approval.

Committee appointments

The following town committee appointments have been made: Mary Lou Studds of Ledgewood Drive was named to the Fair Housing Committee.

The following residents were named to the advisory committee: John Mullett, Nancy Roth, Jeffrey Bates and Ann Whelan.

Deck Point to comply with town order

The owners of Deck Point Inc. have promised to try and stop the flow of mud and water from the vacant Rte. 3A site into Sanctuary Pond.

For several months this has been a concern of the conservation commission, particularly last month during the several days of heavy rain.

Representatives of Deck Point Inc. appeared before the commission Tuesday night. They were responding to a letter sent by the commission in August, notifying the owners about an enforcement order against the property. In that letter, the commission ordered the property owners to take immediate steps to stop the flow of siltration into the watershed area of Sanctuary Pond.

Deck Point Inc. had planned to construct 108 condominium units on the Rte. 3A site, using state Homeownership Opportunity Program funding. A number of moderate-income units were to be included in the project which would sell for about $75,000 to $85,000. Low-income units would be rented through the Cohasset Housing Authority or Deck Point Inc. The remaining units would be sold for about $200,000 each.

Many residents and organizations, including selectmen and the Chamber of Commerce, objected to the project which was to be located on land zoned for business, nextdoor to Seavey Electronics, Norfolk Conveyor and Cohasset Heights Ltd.

The housing partnership committee also opposed the project which received the town's first comprehensive permit by the zoning board of appeals. Ultimately, funding for the project was denied by the state Executive Office of Communities and Development. Since that decision last March, there has been no action on the plans.

Atty. Marshall Newman, representing Deck Point Inc., said the enforcement order against the property could deterr possible buyers for the property. He also argued that because the commission could not prove the siltation originated on the Deck Point property, they did not have any authority to issue the enforcement order. That order would require the owners to file a formal notice of intent, outlining a specific plan to eliminate the problem.

Conservation chairman Jeffrey Waal refuted that argument, but he assured Newman that any perspective buyers could be made aware that the the current owners are cooperating with the order.

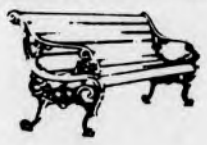
"The crux of the matter is, what evidence do you have that there is a problem at Sanctuary Pond?" Newman asked. "We just don't acknowledge the siltration is from our site."

Commissioner William Parmenter told the representatives he had walked the site during the rain and witnessed the heavy stream of mud and water flowing through barriers erected on the property. Commissioner John Bryant produced a series of photographs which showed the flow from the site across Rte. 3A, which eventually leads into the pond.

But Newman was not convinced that the problem eminated from their property.

Commissioner Merle Brown explained that the gaping holes on the property did not cause the siltration, but he believes it is from the mounds of dirt and rocks excavated from the site.

"Those mounds of dirt have to be stabilized," he stated. "I said that in May. "That's my major concern there, not the holes."



"We have added siltration fences and we are prepared to stabilize the hills, however, I do not belive this conservation commission has jursidiction (to enforce that order), but I'm not saying we're unwilling to work with you," Newman answered.

The commissioners requested that Deck Point submit a plan outlining how they will attempt to solve the problem. The representatives were scheduled to meet this week with the commissioners at the Rte. 3A site in order to develop that plan.

this country is all about. They must be aware of everything that is around them - of current events. And who does the teaching? Our teachers must also be helped."

If elected, Hussey said his priority would be education.

"Other politicians spend their free time at a photo session in front of the flag.

"I want to get into the classrooms of this district. I want to get to meet the fourth graders, those nine-year-olds whose minds are so impressionable and are being shaped by their teachers.

"That is the age when they should be told to stay away from drugs, to stay away from crime.

"I want our children to know that they are indeed our future, that we depend on them."

Hussey left his Norwell classroom eight years ago, but he remembers that time as the most enjoyable of his life.

He is proud of the work he accomplished and noted that many of the programs he began, such as intra-school sports and a math club, are still part of the curriculum.

"I just couldn't conceive spending the rest of my life teaching the sixth grade in room 14," he admitted.

There was a lot of cynicism spreading through education at that time, he recalled, as parents became more critical of the teachers and staff morale was shrinking.

When he left, the superintendent commented that the Norwell schools would suffer with the loss "of a good teacher." He welcomed that simple accolade.

Hussey had begun a small business renovation company during the summers and weekends and decided in 1981 to expand it into a full-time career.

"I left there to suffer the pains and frustrations of the small businessman in Massachusetts," he said.

He also began a ship repair business that began in the Cashman boatyard on the Back River and later moved into the East Boston shipyard.

Working with Boston's labor and shipping unions for seven years, Hussey gained valuable experience. His companies survived, he gained the respect of hardened union bosses, and he "burned no bridges" when he decided to sell the operations last December.

It was time, he figured, to chart a new course in his life. A lifelong interest in history and an understanding and passion for politics directed him to the race for the state senate.

"I was free from my business responsibilities, and I began to focus on what I wanted to do with my life," he stated.

Don Hussey

During the presidential campaign of George Bush, he had became an active member of the Massachusetts Republican party.

Through his business connections throughout the country, he would speak openly about the financial and administrative atrocities being committed by the Democratic leadership back in Michael Dukakis' home state.

"I don't think most people had any idea what was happening back here while the campaign was going on," he said.

"He was borrowing money to borrow time until he was president.

"He was implementing a universal health care plan that would bankrupt every small business in this state."

After talking with Republican guru Ray Shamie and Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Hussey decided it was time to take that turn into politics.

"We've got a government so vast which has been in control in this state for so many years.

"Favors are expected and favors are granted," he said. But the situation can be changed, particularly for this district which Hussey has tagged, "The Massachusetts Gold Coast."

"This is the most beautiful part of the state with a highly-educated population," he continued. "It is a district that has put a lot of time and energy in local education and town services.

"The saying, 'the least government is the best government,' is very true. And town government exemplifies that.

"At the state house, they're all dancing to the music. And it seems like the Democrats are frozen in place."

Currently, Massachusetts has "the closest form of government to a socialist welfare state," according to the candidate.

Only those who are disabled should be eligible for unemployment benefits, he said. "Society should take care of the disabled – those who can't take care of themselves.

"The rest of our time and money should be spent to enhance education, the environment and, in this district, transportation."

To give all people the desire to work, he said, again comes back to education.

"Although the supply of drugs is everywhere, the only way we can rid our kids of drugs is through education. And the only way we can motivate people is through education," he said.

"When I was in business, I hired every ethnic group you can imagine. I hired men from prison – longtime inmates from Concord and Walpole.

"I got to see what motivates these people. It is not the penal system, but the desire."

When employees were slated to be fired or laid off, Hussey as company president first tried to locate new employment.

Hussey is a Catholic and an active member of St. Paul's Church in Hingham. But he clearly follows the precepts of the constitution and delineates between his religious and political beliefs .

On the volcanic topic of abortion, Hussey is pro-choice.

"If you argue for the other side, you will set back women's rights 20 years," he states simply. "I've read Roe versus Wade and the Webster case, and I clearly believe in the right of women to choose.

"If you take a look at society, there are not just those with education and money.

"There are many people without money, and to say a woman cannot choose when she can't afford to feed and clothe the children she has, is wrong. "She should be given that opportunity to make her own decision. And at a certain economic level, I believe the state should, with reasonable limitations, help pay for that choice.

"I think government should get out of people's private lives. Sometimes I think they make laws to justify people in uniform. There is simply too much government today."

A campaign for state senate

Hussey said it is an easy choice for him to separate his religious beliefs from his political practices.

"You can't legislate morality. You can find a common ground, but when you legislate morality, you're getting into personal lives.

"As for me, I make my decisions as a whole person, someone with an education, a family, faith and a lifetime of experience," he continued.

As a product of an Irish-Catholic family, Hussey's allegiance to the Republican party was somewhat akin to mutiny. An aunt, in fact, labeled him a traitor.

"The Democrats," he said, "set up a bureaucracy to help the little guy. But it does little more than help the bureaucracy survive."

Regarding the possibility of reviving the Old Colony railroad, Hussey wondered, "why spend billions of dollars and years of study to go back to what we had 30 years ago?

"If we are going to spend money, it would make more sense to come up with a new system that will be better than what we had before," he said.

Hussey wants to investigate the construction of an elevated railroad system on a series of platform tracks above the present system.

"We have that track land under state control. What we should do is study the possibility of constructing a unirail system, electronically driven, elevated on concrete stanchions," he suggested.

"It would not interfere with pedestrian crossings, and it would solve a lot of the legitimate concerns expressed by the neighbors.

"You know, it's about time we on the South Shore get something we really need. The North Shore always gets the gold, and we get the silver.

"Wouldn't it be great if we could solve our transportation problems with a clean, efficient system we could all be proud of?"

When asked if the state senate is too tough a forum for a former classroom teacher, Hussey replied, "You don't know what tough is until you've worked and survived on Boston's waterfront."

Hussey said he will bring no personal agenda to the state house. He no longer has a business to oversee, and he is not a lawyer with a practice back home.

"Mr. Ambler is going to have a pension from his union associations, a pension from the House of Representatives and, if elected, a salary from the senate.

"All three of those incomes are public monies. I will not have such incomes," he noted.

Hussey and his wife, Brenda, have a 15-year-old son, Greg, a sophomore at Hingham High School, and a 13-year-old daughter, Jennifer, an eighth grader at South Junior High School in Hingham.

Fall schedule for cable show

Thursday, Sept. 7 from 8 to 9 p.m., Pierson to Person begins its new live broadcasting schedule on Continental Cablevision Channels 3 and 53.

The program, beginning its third season on Continental Cablevision, is hosted by Wigmore A. Pierson and is dedicated to informing and elaborating on public issues affecting all citizens of the South Shore. A wide range of guests is already scheduled for the fall.

September 7 from 8 to 8:30 p.m., Pierson will discuss Cohasset's new real estate property valuations and its impact on the 1990 tax rate with members of the Board of Assessors: James Lagrotteria, Thomas Duggan, and Michael Patrolia.

Between 8:30 and 9 p.m., Daniel Leahy and Wayne Sawchuk will talk with Pierson about the Chamber of Commerce and the current state of business on the South Shore.

The program is seen each Thursday night on Channel 53 from 8 to 9 p.m., in Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Hanover and Scituate.

FOR AN IDEA OF HOW DIRTY YOUR ORIENTAL RUG IS, RUB THIS AND LOOK AT YOUR FINGER.

Oriental rugs are constantly picking up various types of soil. Some are greasy and some are gritty. But they all can eat away at your treasured possession.

For your Oriental rug to retain its beauty and value, it should be cleaned at least once every three to five years.

At Grillo Oriental Rug Cleaning, we carefully examine each rug, then give it the most suitable treatment. Sometimes that means gentle machine-washing, other times it means our 'Art-Safe' hand-washing. And our exclusive equipment and methodology enable us to remove the deep-set grit that others miss.

Furthermore, unlike harsh commercial cleaning, our individualized, museum-quality care is always safe, always effective.

For more information, or to have your rug picked up, call (617) 871-6500. Outside this area code, call 1-800-649-7707.

Money found to design new town cemetery

cemetery committee, would require a $50,000 bond item. The town would have to make its debt service and premium payments in fiscal 1991 from the "Sale of Lots" account. Repayment of the account would begin in fiscal 1991 from the sale of grave sites.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby took exception to the committee's determination to go forward with the project saying, "This is the proposal that was voted down two times by the electorate."

Selectman Ned Tebbetts added his concerns, saying he was not willing to vote on the matter until the issue was publicized and residents become more familiar with the proposal.

"This is how we bought the highway department truck last year," Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt reminded the two board members. Gjesteby recalled the incident and said she had also opposed that purchase.

Last year, selectmen voted to go ahead with the purchase of a highway department vehicle after money was found in another town account. The vehicle was purchased with that money, although residents had defeated a tax override for the same purpose.

"Let's get this out in the open and after a month or two we can take a vote," Tebbetts suggested.

The remaining three selectmen disagreed.

Selectman Diana Kornet noted that the $44,000 is "ideal seed money" which can be used for the design and construction. She reminded the board that voters opposed a tax increase to fund the project, but twice they supported the plan itself at town meeting.

"Glenn and his committee have done exactly what we have asked them to do four weeks ago," she noted. "To me, this is an ideal seeding - it's practically the $50,000 they're asking for."

Gjesteby and Tebbetts asked Pratt why the committee did not support a less costly plan to locate 540 grave sites in the existing Beechwood Cemetery - a plan conceived by their engineering consultant, Brewster Fuller.

Pratt explained that the plan was an option presented to the committee two years ago, but it was not Fuller's primary option and did not receive the support of the study committee.

It was simply a way to provide "stop gap" grave sites while a more permanent solution was found, he noted, adding that many "stop gap" measures should be considered while a new 500-plot cemetery is being constructed. He also noted that if the study committee knew about the $44,000 account before town meeting, they would not have asked voters to appropriate any money for the project.

Robert Davenport of Sohier Street asked selectmen how the town continually finds "all this money" when town officials have claimed "the town is broke?"

"We're very fortunate," Selectman Rocco Laugelle responded.

Selectmen Chairman Pratt recalled an explanation previously given by the town accountant that the town was finding "rainy day money - and it's raining now."

Selectmen Pratt, Kornet and Laugelle supported the study committee's proposal and urged them to move forward on the plan. Selectmen Tebbetts and Gjesteby opposed the vote.

A glorious concert raises money for school sports . . .

a reasonable level. At last week's school committee meeting, the fee was set at $35 per student per sport. Without the projected assistance of the fundraising organization, the proposed fee was $100.

"It's sort of good news/bad news tonight," remarked Deer Hill principal Ken Ekberg following Thursday night's concert. "We have the goose and the golden egg in the music circus, and they have been very good to us. But the bad news is, we have to continue finding sources of income if the athletic programs are to continue."

At Kimball's Thursday night, Chatterton noted that the first fundraiser "would not have been successful without the efforts of a lot of people." He expressed his particular appreciation for the music circus and its board of directors.

Bruce Cameron, president of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, told about 200 people gathered at Kimball's that Cohasset sports provided his two brothers and two sons " a fabulous experience." He noted that the community "now has the obligation to continue that for all the youth going into our school system in the future. I hope we take the spirit of tonight into tomorrow and next year. It's very important for the youth of this town to have the kind of programs we've had. It's important to have the best educational program available to our children."

Superintendent Stephen Hart thanked Kasses for his contributions to the Cohasset school program, and presented him with a gift for his efforts. The producer also received a gift from the athletes of Cohasset High School, which was presented by school committee member Russell Reidy.

Earlier in the night, a packed house was treated a night of magic, jokes, and music. Magician John Farrentino performed an array of intentionally mis-fired tricks and humor. Supt. Hart volunteered for one of Farrention's antics, when he was asked to appear on stage and present the magician with a $20 bill. Although it appeared the magician accidentally burned the money, it later appeared safe and sound, and was promptly returned to Hart's wallet.

The crowd, which included a mix of older and newer fans, was treated to a two-hour concert by headliners Crosby and Nash. The pair are part of a group, labeled Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young, which assembled for its first public concert in 1969 during Woodstock. Since then, the group has performed together and individually, producing a series of successful albums.

During the concert, Crosby, who spent time in a Texas jail on a drugs and assault charge, performed "Compass," a song he wrote in prison about "finding your way." He told the crowd about his inability to perform or write during the years he spent hooked on heroin and cocaine. "So much for drugs enhancing creativity," he stated. The audience, which included a number of parents and teachers, applauded.

During a performance of "Teach Your Children," the audience sang the words to the familiar tune, while Nash played the piano. Crosby noted his appreciation of the attentive audience when he explained how their difficult harmonizing becomes impossible in large stadiums when rowdy fans interrupt their concentration with loud yelps.

There was no such interference from Thursday night's ticketholders.

Fuse causes Pilgrim shutdown

By Patricia Desmond
Special to the Mariner

The Pilgrim nuclear power plant shut down automatically last week when a short circuit in the transformer triggered other electrical problems in the generator.

Boston Edison officials said the plant should be back on line within a week.

The problem began at 7:15 p.m. Aug. 30 when a one-amp fuse blew, causing a voltage increase of 10 percent, said company spokesman Elaine Robinson.

"The voltage increase was not a power surge," said Robinson.

The control-room operator took over, she said. When the operator saw the indicators showed there was a problem, he switched from automatic to manual.

On Friday, workers replaced the transformer, and tests of various pieces of equipment were scheduled to determine the extent of damage caused by the electrical problem.

"As far as we know, there was no damage to anything on the nuclear side," Robinson said.

There was no release of radiation and there was no risk to the public or to employees, according to a written statement issued by Edison.

"The apparent cause for the shutdown was a malfunction in the turbine generator's voltage regulator."

The shutdown was automatic, according to the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

"It's expected that after a lengthy shutdown there would be problems with the equipment," said T.J. Kim, part of the on-site NRC inspection team.

Pilgrim was closed in April 1986, largely due to management problems.

Kim said there is no requirement Edison obtain further approval to restart the operation, but the company plans to do more tests on non-nuclear equipment before returning to normal operation.

The plant was operating at 75 percent power when the automatic shutdown occurred.

There have been 11 shutdowns at Pilgrim since it began power ascension last December.

Some of those shutdowns involved tests, some involved regular maintenance and others involved malfunctions.

Engineers from General Electric, which designed the Edison plant turbine, were called to Plymouth to check out the electrical problems.

The damaged transformer was located in the turbine building where steam generated by the nuclear reactor is used to turn huge turbine engines, creating electricity.

Earlier last month Boston Edison was fined $25,000 for a breach of procedure which resulted in a spill of radioactive water.

A worker was mildly contaminated during the incident which occurred April 12 when two control-room workers failed to keep circuit breakers in the correct position.

The circuit-breaker problem put added pressure on the system, triggering a backup safety device to release 120 gallons of radioactive water.

The water collected in a drain and eventually exposed a worker to contamination.

The renovations at the common pond are well-underway, but not yet complete, as promised this summer a Cohasset selectmen. Changes in the renovations, including the addition of a pavement sidewalk bordering the pond, have caused the delay. Much of the work is being completed by town employees. (Staff photo/Dave Sullivan)

□ John Patrick Maichle, of Cohasset earned a Bachelor of Arts during commencement exercises held August 10 at Framingham State College.

□ John Colocousis, formerly of Cohasset, recently completed a project for Babson's Management Consulting Field Experience (MCFE), a program that gives students the opportunity to become consultants to small and large companies.

□ Alison M. Crehan, daughter of Herbert and Karen Crehan of 10 Brooks Rd., Wayland, formerly of Cohasset, will enter Bates College as a freshman.

A graduate of Cohasset High School, Crehan served as editor of the school's literary arts magazine.

□ Sarah Seavey of Cohasset was named to the Dean's List at the University of Hartford.

□ Two Cohasset residents were named to the Dean's List for the spring semester at Wentworth Institute of Technology: Sasha Bubanja, building construction technology; Theodore Jones, computer science; and Mark F. Rattenbury, electrical engineering.

□ Actors, singers and dancers of all ages are wanted for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's November production of Meredith Wilson's "The Music Man". If you have been in a show before, or have always wanted to be on stage, you can be part of this lively show. Non-members as well as members of the club are invited to participate in the auditions. Director Martha Sawyer has scheduled two sets of auditions at the Cohasset Dramatic Club's facilities in the old Greenhouse Restaurant on Stagecoach Way (runs between Main Street and the town parking lot) in the Village. For the adult and teenage parts the audition dates and times are from 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. on Monday and Tuesday September 11th and 12th. For the children's parts the date and time is 7:30 on Thursday, Sept. 14th. The show calls for 23 adult characters, 8 to ten teenagers, male and female (ages 14-25); and, for the children there is a need for 8 to 10 kids under age 15. One boy and one girl will have speaking and singing parts. For further information call Martha Sawyer at 545-7248 or Bonnie Haley at 545-6485.

□ Dick and Sally Wheeler had visitors recently, and were they pleased!! In from Denver, Colorado were Chris and Debbie Wheeler with their infant daughter, Emily Kathleen Wheeler. Chris, Debbie and Emily stayed just long enough to celebrate Dick and Sally's 50th wedding anniversary, flying back to Denver on Monday morning. Emily was the youngest passenger on the plane leaving Denver, aged five weeks!!!

□ There is more than one Lamp that was a sensation at Fenway Park recently. Hillary makes the news this week. She sang the National Anthem at the Red Sox game last Saturday, and everyone was thrilled. By the way Hillary is nine years old!!! That's really something to be proud of Hillary, and we are all that!! And, you can bet Dad (Dennis Lamp) was one proud Dad that day!

□ South Shore Elder Services needs volunteers to help with noon time meals for homebound senior citizens. A variety of jobs are available for voluntary amounts of times. For more information, call Joyce Fallon at 383-9790.

□ Cadet Brian H. Leary received practical work in military leadership at the U.S. Army ROTC advanced camp, in Fort Bragg North Carolina. Brian is from 96 Elm Street in Cohasset.

□ Three sales associates were recently honored at Century 21 sales meeting on August 17th. Bill Kleinz, Fred Toppan and Pam Byrnes were presented annual service awards in appreciation for their year of service to Century 21 Atlantis Realty Inc.

□ Hats off to the Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club, who recently awarded scholarships to three graduating seniors. The two Cohasset recipients were Michele Casolara and Amanda Church. This club works long and hard to make these scholarships possible, right now they are holding a raffle for a quilt made by several members. It will be raffled off in November. Call Cindy at 383-2582 or Char at 545-7128 for raffle ticket information.

□ Aren't people wonderful? Hope you have heard that area fishermen are raising money for a scholarship fund in memory of Samantha Hutt. For more information call Barbara Fasanacht at 545-0090.

□ Don't forget that this Saturday is the George Mealey Post Clambake held on Sandy Beach. With Dan Anderson as the chef, its always the best one around. The Clambake raised $5,000 last year, and the Christine Burke Memorial Scholarship went to Paul Marks. Be there.

□ Congratulations to Bernie Hamill who caught a 17 pound, 8 ounce bluefish. He won the first prize in the third annual Jordan Hospital Bluefish Tournament. Bernie's daughter, Sally, also won a prize for third place.

□ Bernard Hamill and his daughter, Sally, 8 yrs. recently fared well in the third Annual Bluefish Competition held to benefit the Jordan Hospital. Sally placed third and was the only girl for the second year in a row to place in the Junior Division. Her dad, Bernard, won First Prize in the Adult Division. The tournament attracted almost 400 anglers.

□ The Cohasset Dramatic Club will be holding auditions for Meredith Wilson's musical "The Music Man", an award winning musical about a flim flam man that arrives in a small mid-western town. He primises the towns folk that he can provide music and pride to the children of River City, to prevent them from falling into the evil clutches of trouble, trouble, trouble. . . .The director of this musical is the much experienced and respected Martha Gaffey Sawyer.

Auditions are to be held at the Cohasset Dramatic Club's theater on Stagecoach Way in Cohasset. The audition times and dates are September 11 and 12 for adults and September 14 for children, from 7:30 to 10 p.m. all three nights. Come dressed for movement and have prepared a ballad and uptempo song to sing. If you don't sing or dance, you're welcome to come with a prepared monologue. Backstage help and production help is always welcome.

Production dates are November 9-11 and 16-18. For more information, call Bonnie at 545-6485.

□ Happy first day of school to all (especially Mom)! Be sure to call and let me know about your school year as you go along, it is newsworthy and everyone loves it.

□ A special thanks to Dan Leahy, who hosted the buffet that was held after the Friends of Cohasset School sports benefit last week. 250 people enjoyed the fine food that was presented so nicely. An anniversary

It seems like we have been wallowing in anniversaries all year.

The baby boomers, the Big Chill generation, had the 20th anniversary of Woodstock, the rustic festival of music, sex, drugs and protest in upstate New York which those who practiced it still claim was the great turning point in the culture of our recent times.

The motion picture industry observed the 50th anniversary of "Gone With The Wind" and "The Wizard of Oz" and "Stagecoach" which, if you listen to the press agents and the flick freaks, made 1939 the pinnacle year in that or any other form of entertainment.

The booksellers note that it was the 50th anniversary of the publication of John Steinbeck's The Grapes of Wrath, and baseball fans dutifully recall that a half century has passed since a dying Lou Gehrig retired after playing 2,130 consecutive games and called himself "the luckiest man in the world."

All that is but prologue, a warmup for the big one that arrived last Friday, the 50th anniversary of the day the German armies of the Reichsfuhrer Adolph Hitler marched into Poland and began a war that touched the lives of more people for a longer time than any other in history.

Before it was over, nearly 15 million men in uniform had died, a like number of Jews, Gypsies and Slavs were systematically exterminated in death camps, and the most horrifying weapon ever devised killed 130,000 people the very first time it was used in anger.

It always startles, then saddens those who lived it to be reminded that World War II is just another page in the history books for four out of five people living today.

Pearl Harbor, Stalingrad, Anzio, Guadalcanal, St. Lo, Coventry, Lidice, El Alamein, Tarawa, Lashio, Kiska — they are just names on the map now, and Stalingrad, where the most terrible hand-to-hand battle in history raged for five months, is not even that any more since some dimwit changed the name to Volgograd.

World War II, which began with a goosestep 50 years ago, is worth remembering, for when the last shot was fired and the last bomb was dropped, nothing was ever the same again.

American blacks, downtrodden for more than 300 years, tasted equality while in uniform on foreign shores and revolted for their share of the dream.

Women, pressed into service as soldiers and sailors, riveters and shipping clerks in great numbers for the first time, discovered and confirmed they could perform every bit as well as a man in most of those roles and never let the men forget it.

And over it all has hung The bomb, the most fearsome weapon of them all, the very thought of which has locked the world in an uneasy "balance of terror" through two generations that have never really known peace.

And it all began 50 years ago Sept. 1.

Letters

To the Editor:

On the 17th of August, in the late afternoon, I unfortunately happened to be at the scene of a very tragic accident in Cohasset Harbor at Government Island.

A very young girl's body, a victim of drowning, had been recovered from the waters and brought to the fishermen's dock. One of our assistant harbormasters, Jimmy Sheerin, was at the scene and I was so impressed by the way he had without hesitation taken charge of a very traumatic situation, and applied CPR & Resuscitation continuously and effortly until an ambulance had arrived. Although, quite visibly shaken and upset, he continually worked while we were all hoping against hope that some kind of a positive sign would appear.

I also remember Jimmy as being on our Cohasset Fire Department many years ago, and being on the scene of an accident that one of my sisters was involved in. The calming care and emergency treatment that she received at the scene from Jimmy was professional, sympathetic, and continual until the ambulance arrived.

What a very sad day for the town when Jimmy decided to go onto further things in his life and leave the fire department.

Jimmy is a personal friend of mine and of my entire family. I feel the town of Cohasset also has a personal friend in Jimmy as on many occasions he has been there for many families in very difficult situations.

I know I feel that if my daughters were in a kind of situation where Jimmy happened to be, I will have the knowledge and the very secure feeling that he will have done everything possible to promote their good health & safety.

Jimmy should be commended by all our townspeople, and may the families of the young accident victim know that everything possible that could have been done at the scene was done.

Thank you Jimmy. We are lucky to have you in our town.

Fall courses at the science center

Go for a hike, learn to canoe, or take a nature photography course this autumn with naturalists from the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell.

HAWK MIGRATIONS

Naturalist and avid hawk watcher Bob Abrams will lead a trip to observe migrating hawks, Sunday, Sept. 17, 7:30 a.m.-1 p.m. Members/$9. Non-members/$12. Mt. Wachusett, north of Worcester, is one of New England's finest spots for observing migrating hawks, and mid-September is the best time to see them! We'll look for goshawks, sharp-shins, red-tails, red-shoulders, kestrels, merlins, ospreys, and a variety of other species. With luck, we may see a bald eagle. We will carpool from the Science Center. Wear sturdy footgear, and bring lunch. Call the Science Center 659-2559 for registration information.

MASS. ARCHAEOLOGICAL SOCIETY

Join members of the South Shore Chapter of Mass. Archaeological Society, Monday, Sept. 18, 7:30-9:30 p.m., for their regular monthly meeting. Free admission. On the second Monday of every other month, M.A.S. presents an interesting program on a variety of archaeological topics at the Science Center. Call the Science Center 659-2559 to preregister.

WORLD'S END

A Science Center naturalist will lead a leisurely walk, Wednesday, September 20, 9:30 a.m.-noon, to World's End, Hingham. Members/free. Non-members/$4. Designed by Frederick Law Olmstead, the park is known for its spectacular views, rocky coastlines, landscape design, and unusual plantings. These informal walks are perfect for all ages. Preregister by calling the Science Center 659-2559.

NATURE PHOTOGRAPHY

Naturalist and freelance photographer Trygve Swift will introduce novice photographers and nature enthusiasts to the fine art of capturing nature on film in a five-part course, Wednesday, Sept. 20, 27, and October 4, 7-8:30 p.m., and Saturdays, Sept. 23 and 30, 10 a.m.-1 p.m. Members/$35. Non-members/$45. You will learn about the parts of a camera and accessories useful for nature photography; the comparative merits of black and white and color prints and color slides; and techniques of taking pictures of plants and animals in their native haunts. Evaluation sessions will follow your Saturday field excursions, and the final session will offer suggestions on slide-show design. A list of materials will be provided upon registration. Call the Science Center 659-2559 for registration information.

MYSTERIES OF TIBET

In our first Magic Carpet luncheon and slide show of the fall season international traveler Julie Smith will take you to spectacular Himalayan landscapes and share her experiences visiting the temples and countryside of the little-known "roof of the world," Friday, Sept. 22, 11 a.m.-1 p.m. Members/$8. Non-members/$10. See the magnificent treasures of the Potala and the Jokhang Cathedral in Lhasa; the colorful, bustling bazaars; brilliant prayer wheels; silver burial stupas of the Dalai Lamas; and gilded statues of the Buddha. You will see temple ceremonies and rural regions seldom witnessed by tourists. Following the slide program, enjoy delicious Tibetan delicacies prepared by our cosponsor, The Junior League of Boston. Call the Science Center 659-2559 for registration information.

The highways and byways of old Conyhassit

By David Wadsworth
Special to the Mariner

During the middle of the 17th century the eastern part of the town of Hingham, at that time called Conyhassit, was mostly vacant land, undivided and owned in common by the town's qualified residents.

Conyhassit was used primarily for the harvesting of fresh and salt hay from low lieing marshes and meadows. Its upland areas served as pasturage for the town's cattle and sheep. Although the marshes and meadows of the shore had been granted to individual owners over numerous years, Conyhassit's uplands remained common land until the Land Division of 1670. By that time the second generation of Hingham families was approaching maturity and additional space for farms and homesteads was needed to accomodate a growing population. Thus in 1669 and 1670 the eastern uplands were surveyed and parcelled out to qualified Hingham residents, with each man receiving a share of the newly opened land.

Surveyor of the Conyhassit upland was Lieut. Joshua Fisher of Dedham, and the map he drew is known as the "Joshua Fisher Plat". On it are shown the individual parcels granted to Hingham settlers. In addition to the property lines, the Fisher Plat shows a grid of proposed highways running through the uplands to serve their new owners. Of today's major roads, several are traceable to the original ways envisioned by Lieut. Fisher. Only one modern Cohasset street, however, follows the exact course laid out by the surveyor; Sohier Street. The others, through three centuries of development, have been altered or relocated in part, if not in their entirety. Fisher's grid proposed a series of roads running through the uplands in a northeast to southwest direction, intersected by more running form northwest to southeast.

Today's Sohier Street is one of the former group, exactly as it had been originally planned in 1670. Others of the east to west roads shown on the plat have their modern counterparts in Beechwood Street and Pond Street, though neither today follows the exact course shown on the 1670 plat. Additionally, Fisher envisioned another of the parallel roads leading from the shore into the uplands. Its northeast terminus would have been near Bow Street at Jerusalem Road. This "phantom highway" seems never to have been developed, though some think its western end may exist as Lambert's Lane near the Golf Club.

Fisher's 1670 Plat also shows two highways at right angles to the four just described. Of these two northwest to southeast proposed ways, one is today's King Street running from North Main Street to Lily Pond (the part of King Street from the pond to Beechwood Street was not shown on the 1670 plat and is more recent.) A second northwest to southeast highway shown on the plat has no modern counterpart, but was planned some distance to the west of King Street. Yet another northeast to southwest way, connecting King Street at Lily Pond to the parallel road to the west can be found today as an undeveloped forested path known as "Hezekiah's Lane" at Lily Pond's northern edge.

Additionally, Conyhassit's uplands were transected by two pre-existing cart paths dating from earliest time. Not part of Fisher's grid, each wound its way through the uplands in a general northwest to southeast direction and served as rough connecting roads between the settlement at Hingham and the one to the south at Scituate. Modern counterparts to these early paths are North and South Main Streets, and, winding along the shore, Jerusalem Road. Both, though not included by Lieut. Fisher in his grid, were to become major thoroughfares in a developing community. Interestingly, the highway grid envisioned by surveyor Fisher in 1670 consisted of roads running in straight lines, with no apparent regard for variations of topography and none for natural obstacles. Thus it soon became apparent that the plan would have to be modified. Beechwood Street on the plat proved impassable in reality, due to numerous large outcroppings of granite ledge. Its course soon was adjusted by relocation, so that today's road is some distance from Fisher's original. King Street suffered somewhat the same problem; its proposed northern section led directly into the mine of Breadencheese swamp, and wisely never was completed. Not for two centuries would the ancient way of 1670 reach the town's northern shore when Forest Avenue was constructed, passing to the east side of the swamp.

As for King Street itself, it originally was envisioned as the main thoroughfare of the new settlement at Conyhassit. By the early 1700's its residents set about to construct their Meetinghouse nearby, and stacked large amounts of freshly cut lumber for that purpose. The men of the eastern section, near the Common, had other ideas, however, and upon one moonless night quietly moved all the cut lumber from King Street to the Common a mile to the east. Thus it was, goes the traditional story, that the Common became the town's center. Cohasset's main thoroughfare, Main Street is not one of the 1670 highways planned by Lieut. Fisher, but one of the ancient cart paths the origin of which is obscured by antiquity dating perhaps to the early hunting tribes of Indians who were here centuries before the first European settlers.

Today, King Street, Joshua Fisher's choice as the town's main highway, is a residential area lined with a number of Cohasset's earliest and most interesting homes.

Bass and bluefish fatten up for southern migration

The Fishing Line

By Bill Bowers

Prime time is coming soon.

Local anglers are eagerly awaiting the onset of autumn weather, which always triggers a feeding frenzy as the striped bass and bluefish fatten themselves up for their long southward migration.

But Gene Kaiser and Jack Prince, both of Plymouth, would say the fishing isn't too shabby even now.

Kaiser recently landed a trophy striped bass of 47 pounds, 4 ounces while fishing in a boat near Plymouth Beach, reported Dan Nunes at The Tackle Shop in Plymouth.

And Prince caught a 15-pound, 8-ounce bluefish in the same area.

Both fish won their captors a $15 gift certificate for weighing in the largest specimen of the month.

Freshwater anglers have been doing well in the Plymouth ponds, too.

Tami Burns, 14, of Abington caught a 3-pound, 4-ounce smallmouth bass.

Ken Haskins of Manomet had a really nice largemouth bass of 5 pounds, 10 ounces.

Joe Quinn and Mike Murphy, both of Plymouth, had a 2-pound, 4-ounce pickerel and a 1-pound, 8-ounce yellow perch, respectively.

Nunes said he expects saltwater action in the Plymouth and Kingston areas—where schoolie stripers and bluefish have been eagerly smashing topwater plugs—to get very hot very soon.

The Plymouth jetties and the mouth of the Jones River, as well as the old standby Plymouth Beach, all are good places to try, as is Plymouth Harbor itself.

Anglers farther up the coast should try for bass around the North River, where George Kauffman of Scituate took a 20-pound, 38-inch lineside on a live tinker mackerel.

That fish came aboard a boat off Fourth Cliff, but stripers are also available as far up the river as the Union Street bridge, reported Jerry Duffy at Mary's Boat Livery in Marshfield.

Most of the bass are schoolies, but every now and then someone hangs a keeper, especially at high tide and as the water is just starting to drop.

Paul Lamb of Plaistow, N.H. released three schoolies he caught on live eels. Kevin Jenkins and Ray Miller, both of Abington, had keeper bass of 16 and 17-1/2 pounds they caught on seaworms.

Kastmasters and jointed plugs are also tempting linesides lures.

Remember, you must carefully release all bass smaller than 36 inches long—but there's no law against releasing keepers as well.

Sportsmen are releasing more and more freshwater bass these days, reported Bill Bois at Adams Tackle in Pembroke.

Tom Perry of Plymouth used a spinnerbait to fool a 6-pound, 6-ounce largemouth in a secret Plymouth pond. Jack Furtaldo of Rockland had another of 6 pounds, 4 ounces from a secret Pembroke pond.

Both fish were released alive after weigh-in, a practice the people at Adams strongly encourage.

Bois said some savvy locals are starting to hit area ponds—like Little's, Charge and Fearing's in Plymouth—in search of trout, although the salmonids will continue to hang in deep water until temperatures drop a bit.

Cod are surprisingly cooperative out at Stellwagen Bank for this time of year, according to Pat Newcomb at Fore River Tackle in Quincy. Cod jigs and baits of mackerel or clam all are producing well.

Closer inshore, look for bluefish around Hull Gut and between Hardings Ledge and Boston Light in the daytime, and in the Fore, Back, Weir and Neponset Rivers as darkness falls.

And, during the long, silent hours before dawn, big stripers cruise the inky blackness of the rivers in search of an easy meal—which, with luck, will be at the end of your line.

We are on the threshold of the very best fishing of the season, so keep those hooks sharp and wet.

Autumn offerings at the science center . . .

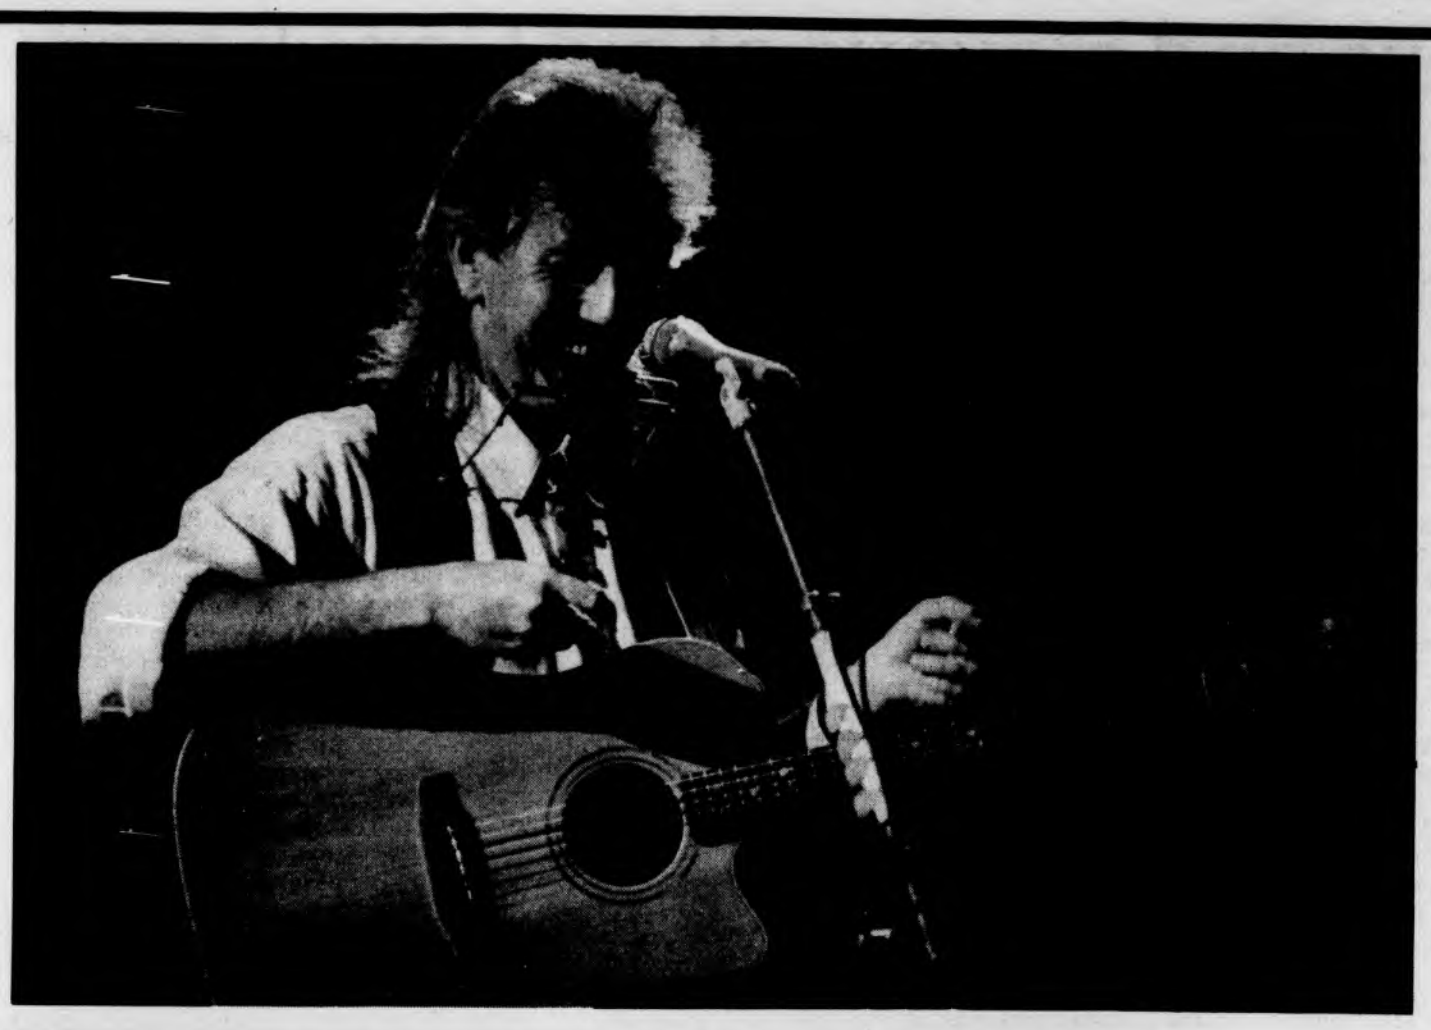
BASIC CANOEING

Are you interested in Science Center canoe trips but need some canoeing experience? Russ Sears, a professional canoe guide and leader of Science Center canoeing excursions, will teach a basic canoeing class, Saturday, Sept. 23, 9 am.-2 p.m. Members/$20. Non-members/$26. You'll learn canoe strokes, parts of the canoe, canoe safety, and have practice canoeing on Jacobs Pond. All equipment is provided. Minimum age: 12. Bring your lunch. Call the Science Center 659-2559 for registration information.

BIKING AT BARE COVE

Join teacher/naturalist Alice Hibberd for a bike ride along the beautiful, paved trails of Bare Cove Park, Hingham, Saturday, Sept. 23, 9:30-11:30 a.m. For children ages 8-12. Members/$5. Non-members/$8. Stopping at several spots, we'll search for signs of wildlife, including box turtles, rabbits, and more. We'll see ducks and gulls at Weymouth Back River and hike through the woods for nature exploration and other activities. Children should bring their bike, a snack, and a bike lock, if possible. Parents must drop children off at the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham. Directions are available upon registration. Call the Science Center 659-2559 for registration details.

HIKE AT WAPACK



Join a Science Center naturalist, Sunday, Sept. 24, 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m., for a hike in the Wapack Wildlife Refuge in southern New Hampshire. Members/$10. Non-members/$12. The Refuge contains spruce and hardwood forests, bogs, swamps, rock ledge, and cliffs within its 1,700 acres and is home to an abundance of wild mammals (including bobcat, snowshoe hare, porcupine, and deer). This six-mile hike will cross the summit of North Pack Monadnock Mountain, an excellent location for observing autumn migrants. Dress appropriately (sturdy footgear recommended) and bring lunch. We'll carpool to the Refuge. Call the Science Center 659-2559 for registration information.

CORN FESTIVAL

The Science Center will hold its annual Corn Festival, Saturday, Sept. 16, 10 a.m.-4 p.m. The celebration features colonial craft demonstrations and a craft fair, music by the environmentally concerned Earthtunes, an agricultual fair, farm kitchen, a scarecrow contest, a snack bar, a Native American Indian harvest celebration, and lots more. Admission: adults/$1.50; children 14 years and under: $.75; children under 3 years/free.

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than one mile from the Route 3 interchange. Hours: 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday. Call 659-2559 or drop by the Center for a complete list of autumn activities.

AAUW dinner Sept. 12

The area branch of the American Association of University Women extends an invitation to all college-graduated women to attend the annual Pot Luck dinner, Tuesday, Sept. 12 at the Plymouth River School in Hingham at 6:30 p.m.

Dr. Alease Bruce, a recent delegate to the National Convention in Washington, D.C., will be the guest speaker.

Please call Jane Moore, 337-5451 or Linda Curran, 337-7603 for reservations and further information.

Clarifying college admission

A free public session explaining many aspects of college admissions will be offered by Leslie Goldberg, an independent educational counsultant from Hingham.

Topics such as S.A.T.'s, admissions terms, deadlines, applications, essays, campus visits will be covered in addition to a question and answer period.

The program will take place in the Whiton Room of the Hingham Public Library, Tuesday, Sept. 19 from 7:30 to 8:45 p.m.

For additional information call 749-2074.

Meditation workshops

Wah Lum Academy, located on Rt. 3A in Cohasset, will host three special workshops Saturday and Sunday, September 16-17.

John Loupos and Susan McMackin are certified as advanced instructors in the Healing Tao system and will offer Microcosmic Orbit meditation, Tai Chi Chi Kung, Fusion of five Elements meditation.

The workshops are open to the public and may be appropriate for anyone seeking to increase and improve their energy reserve.

To register or for further information call 383-6822 or 383-2688.

Society walking tour Sept. 17

The Cohasset Historical Society's third and final Historical Walking Tour of the summer is scheduled for Sunday, Sept. 17.

Included in the special event will be a tour of Cohasset's Central Cemetery, the town's early "Burying Ground," then, via bus, a visit to the "ancient way" of King Street, Cohasset's first "Main Street." The tour will travel to the Mill Lane site of Mordecai Lincoln's iron smelter and forge at Turtle Island where the foundations of the last operating water-powered sawmill, active until the 1930's can be seen. Lincoln's ironworks were among the first local industries in the earliest years of the 1700's. Since that time a number of later mills of various types have utilized the water power of Bound Brook, at the Turtle Island site.

The Sunday, Sept. 17 tour meets at the Central Cemetery, corner of North Main Street and Joy Place (itself the ancient "road to the Burying Ground.") Time of the tour will be 3 p.m.

In October, the Historical Society will hold a special observance of the 140th anniversary of the sinking at Cohasset's Grampus Ledges of the Irish famine ship, the brig "St. John" of Lettermore Island, County Galway, Ireland.

Oct. 8, 1849 "St. John," owned by Lettermore shipowner Tony Conneelly and carrying a full complement of passengers and crew bound for Boston, was wrecked at the Grampusses with the loss of 99 souls. That was Cohasset's worst and most tragic shipwreck and has been made the subject of study in the Galway area of Ireland's west coast.

Further details regarding the special program devoted to the "St. John" will be announced.

College art credit

Undergraduate credit is available for many courses at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset through the Massachusetts College of Art, and is transferable to most institutions of higher learning.

The Cooperating Institutions Program, established in 1977, is an outreach program of the Massachusetts College of Art seeking to serve the general public and non-accredited educational institutions. Its goal is to extend to a larger audience the high standards and expertise in the arts. The program enables individual students to receive credit for courses taken at regional art centers, which may be more geographically convenient for part-time study.

In addition, the program serves the cooperating institutions themselves by disseminating awareness of the academic standards of a degree-granting college specializing in the visual arts. The requirements for assignments and number of contact hours are comparable to those at the College. Transcripts will be kept on file at Massachusetts College of Art.

For a complete list of courses available at the South Shore Art Center qualifying for Massachusetts College of Art credits, call weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 617-383-9548.

'Music Man' auditions

Actors, singers and dancers of all ages are wanted for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's November production of Merideth Wilson's musical, "The Music Man." Non-members as well as members of the club are invited to participate in the auditions.

Director Martha Sawyer has scheduled two sets of auditions at the Cohasset Dramatic Club's facilities in the old Greenhouse Restaurant on Stagecoach Way (runs between Main Street and the Town parking lot) in the Village.

For the adult and teenage parts, the audition dates and times are from 7:30 to 10 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 11 and 12.

For the children's parts, the date and time is 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 14.

The show, set in turn of the century Iowa, calls for 23 adult characters including: Harold Hill, a fast-talking salesman (baritone/tenor); Marian, the town librarian and romantic lead (soprano); Marian's mother (a brogue would be helpful); Marcellus (age 30-40), a comic singing role, and Harold's sidekick; the blustery, small-town Mayor (non-singing) and his comical, committee-chair-Mayor (non-singing) and his comical, committee-chair-woman wife (limited singing); a barber shop quartet; four ladies who pair off with the barber shop quartet; and other fun roles for all levels of talent.

Teenagers, male and female, from 14 to 25 (you have to look like one even if you are not) will be part of the chorus and dancing group. About 8 to 10 needed — two with speaking parts.

For the children there is a need for 8 to 10 kids under age 15. One boy and one girl from this group will have speaking and singing parts. The entire group will comprise the town band.
comprise the town band.

Show dates at the Cohasset Town Hall stage are November 9, 10, 11, 16, 17 and 18.

For further information call Martha Sawyer at 545-7248 or Bonnie Haley 545-6485.

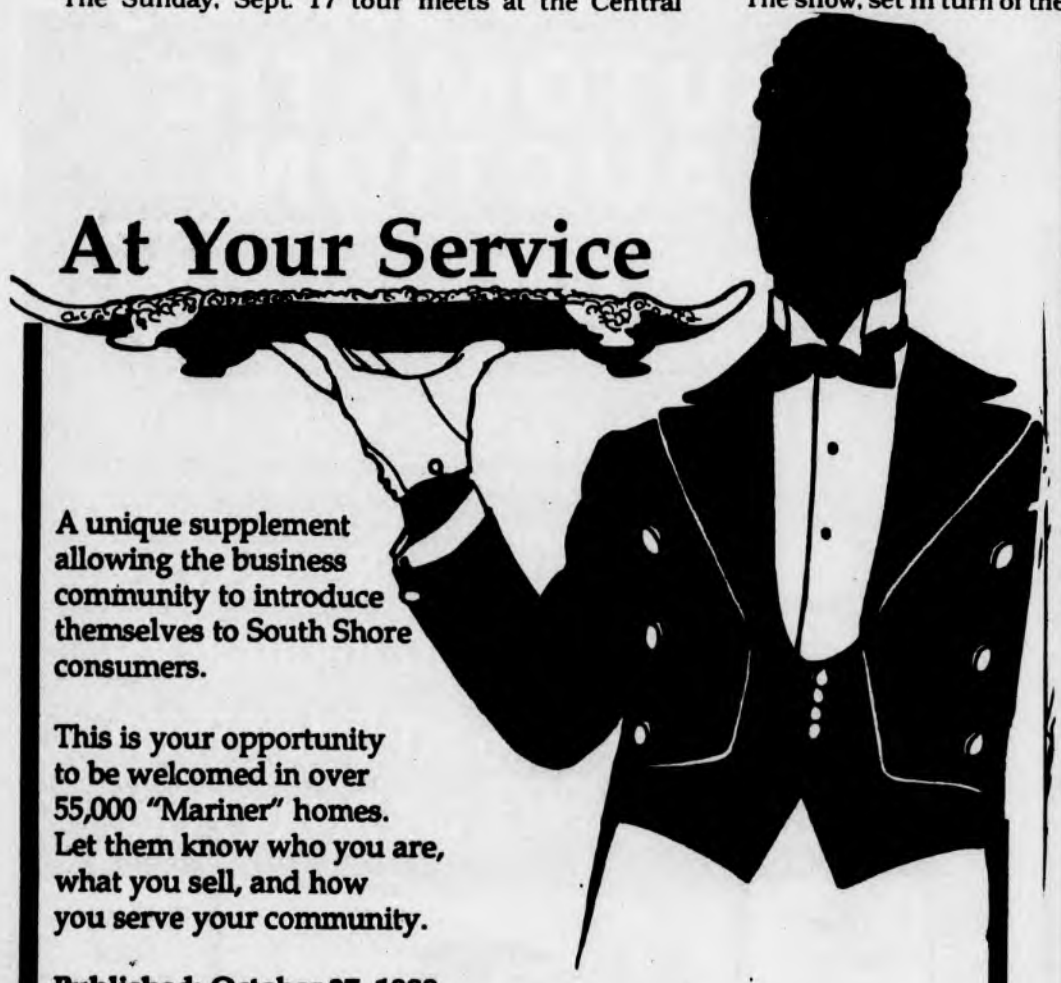
Secretaries meet Sept. 10

South Shore Chapter, Professional Secretaries International, will hold a dinner meeting at The Whiton House in Hingham, Tuesday, Sept. 10, at 6 p.m.

Mary Usovicz, Manager of Community Relations, Mass. Water Resources Authority, will be the guest speaker and her topic will be the Boston Harbor Project.

The South Shore Chapter PSI meets the second Tuesday of each month at local restaurants. PSI's mission is to effect increased productivity, career development and quality of work life within the office environment by providing opportunities for educational, personal and professional growth.

Anyone interested in attending the September meeting or obtaining information about Professional Secretaries International should contact Vice President Eleanor Fusoni CPS at 749-5728 or 696-4115.



After school hockey

LDS missionaries visit

Elder Randy Blackmore and Elder Jim Carter are young men who are serving as missionaries for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (the Mormons).

They come from Alberta, Canada and South Carolina respectively and are living in the area while visiting homes in Cohasset, Scituate, Hull and Norwell.

At 19 and 22 years of age Blackmore and Carter are ordained "elders" who teach the joys of living the gospel of Jesus Christ to all who care to listen. Some 38,000 young Mormons today give two years to serving voluntarily and without pay in all parts of the world. As missionaries they live Spartan lives without radio, television, sports or vacations, devoting themselves fulltime to unselfish service.

Spiritual leader of the local South Shore congregation is Bishop Bradley K. Johnson with chapel and meetinghouse located at 379 Gardner St. in So. Hingham.

Elders Carter and Blackmore are available for teaching individuals or groups. They offer a program that entails not just Sunday worship but a way of life conducive to better health and greater family unity.

CARDINAL AUTHENTICATED

One of our kindergarten children attended the silver jubilee of St. Anthony's Church and met Cardinal Law. He was resplendent in bright red robes, and his large figure loomed over this wide-eyed little girl. She looked up at him and said, "I know you are a cardinal because we have one in our back yard and it's the same color." Cardinal Law when he later told this story said it felt good to be authentic.

CHURCH SCHOOL RALLY DAY

The St. Stephen's church school begins its new year with a rally day on Sunday, Sept. 17. Children will assemble in Walton Rodgers Hall at 10 a.m. There will be a party. They will be introduced to their classrooms, curriculum, and teachers. It will be an exciting day beginning a strong year of Christian Education.

INVITATION TO EVENING COFFEE

Ten Evening Coffees will be held from September 10 through October 15. Seventeen households (couples or individuals) will be invited for coffee, tea and dessert at a parishioner's home. The purpose of the meeting is to involve everyone in the future of St. Stephen's Church. We are subtitling the evenings: "Forming the Vision; Sharing the Dream." At the end of the evening the stewardship pledge cards will be given out. They may be taken home and returned to the offering plate the next Sunday or sent in to the office.

There is nothing new under the sun. We did the same type of thing (only with covered dish suppers) fifteen years ago and found it very helpful.

You will be receiving an invitation and phone call for one of these evening coffees. Please make every effort to attend — for the good fellowship and for your participation in the future of St. Stephen's. That is how important it is.

Obituary

Helen A. O'Brien

A funeral Mass was celebrated Wednesday, Sept. 6 in St. Paul's Church in Hingham for Helen A. (Griffin) O'Brien, 77. Burial was in St. Paul's Cemetery in Arlington.

Mrs. O'Brien died at home Sunday.

Mrs. O'Brien, a retired nurse, was a supervisor at the Cambridge Tuberculosis Sanitarium for many years. She was a graduate of Carney Hospital School of Nursing.

Mrs. O'Brien leaves four sons, Frederick F. O'Brien of Brant Rock, John J. O'Brien of West Newbury, Mark O'Brien of California, and Joseph P. O'Brien of Hull; two daughters, Gail Ann Houlihan of Hingham and Carmeline M. O'Brien of Brighton; a brother, Kevin A. Griffin of Cambridge; a sister, Mrs. John J. McNulty of Wakefield; and eight grandchildren. She was the sister of the late John F. Griffin and Mary R. Leonard.

Donations in her memory may be made to the South Shore Visiting Nurse Association, or to the Hospice of the South Shore, P.O. Box 334, Braintree, 02184.

Quarterly dividend report at Cohasset Savings Bank

The Board of Directors of Cohasset Savings Bank (NASDAQ-CHTB) has declared the Bank's seventh quarterly cash dividend payable October 2, 1989 to stockholders of record September 15, 1989, continuing the rate of six cents per share established for the first quarter of 1989.

The bank has 1,002,978 shares outstanding.

The bank reported net income of $76,000 or eight cents per share for the second quarter ended June 30, 1989. Donald E. Bates, President, noted that total interest and dividend income for both the second quarter and the first six months had increased, but that earnings had been affected by higher interest rates paid on a large volume of term deposits received in the earlier months of the year. He said that lower current interest rates should work to the bank's advantage when many of these deposits mature in the third and fourth quarters of the year.

Deposits increased about $4.2 million in the first six months of the year, reaching a record of $50,062,000 as of June 30, 1989. Total assets at June 30, 1989 were $63,564,000 and stockholders' equity at that date was $12,789,000.

Walk for Walk for wildlife Sept. 23

The sixth annual walk for wildlife to benefit the Massachusetts Audubon Society will step off at 9 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 23, from the South Shore regional office off Route 3A and proceed to the Daniel Webster Wildlife Sanctuary off Winslow Cemetery Road.

Check-in time is 8:30 a.m.

This eight-mile walk is the forerunner of Farm Day which will begin officially at 11 a.m.

While some walkers may take two to three hours to finish, the time goes by faster walking with friends.

The route is scenic and well-marked. Volunteers will staff the checkpoints and offer water and fruit to the participants.

At the end of the route, the walkers will be greeted with cheers and watermelon.

Walkers who raise $25 or more in pledges will be given an osprey T-shirt designed by Scott Hecker of Marshfield.

Once again, Chris Cook, owner of Brodil's Bootery, will donate a pair of Rocksport walking shoes to the walker raising the most pledges. He also has donated the cost of producing the T-shirts.

The prize for a child taking part in the walk is an Audubon duffle bag.

Registration forms are available at the following locations: Brodil's Bootery at Marshfield plaza, the public libraries and town halls in Marshfield, Scituate and Duxbury, the Marshfield Hills General Store, the Front Street Book Shop in Scituate Harbor and at the South Shore regional office.

For further information, call the office at 837-9400.

THIS SMALL CAPE

ARTICLE #2

The objective of expanding this kitchen was to create a large, bright and efficient dining and cooking environment. The original kitchen was approximately 10' x 13' with very limited counter space and storage. The addition was built with a shed (slant) type roof projecting directly off the back of the house creating an 18' x 13' area.

The new kitchen features:
- Cathedral ceiling with automatically controlled skylights for a bright and spacious effect
- Bay window in eating area and corner windows over sink to take advantage of views
- Plenty of cabinet space with a center island for additional work area and storage
- A stylish corner sink to maximize usable counter space
- Carefully placed and varied lighting to enhance the bright and open atmosphere.

This kitchen addition illustrates how, with proper design, a small expansion (8' x 13') can create a totally redefined living area. Our next article will deal with family room additions.

At T.C. McIntosh Construction Inc., we specialize in additions from design to finish. For a free estimate or design consultation, please call:

Cohasset Mariner

Vol. XI, No. 51 | Thursday, September 14, 1989 | 1-800-874-6969 | 60 cents

Repairs to the Meeting House Pond on Cohasset Common are complete. Although the water is back, selectmen aren't so sure they want the ducks in town to know about it. To keep a huge flock of fowl from returning, town officials are asking people not to feed the ducks that have found their way back to the common.

No welcome mat for local ducks

The pond on Cohasset Common has never looked better. The water is back and the fountain is once again flowing.

But the feathered fowl which once flocked to Meeting House Pond are no longer welcome.

Now that the reconstruction of the pond is complete, selectmen are not anxious to repeat the tiresome, troubling and well-publicized effort. And, as one resident warned, further repairs can be avoided if the ducks are detoured away from Cohasset Village.

John Hubbard, a resident of Atlantic Avenue and a knowledgeable bird-watcher, warned selectmen this week that if people continue feeding the ducks, they will reappear and likely make the pond their permanent home. Such a habitat is unhealthy for the migrating duck, he stated in a letter to selectmen.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt agreed. "As far as I'm concerned, I'm convinced it's a bad idea. They depend on human beings to feed them and if the human beings fail to feed them, they die.

The ducks so deteroriated the concrete bottom of the pond, that it ruptured when heavy equipment was brought onto the site this summer, he said.

In his letter to selectmen, Hubbard stated, "Feeding the ducks in the duck pond is not really helping the ducks, particularly in the fall. The most serious harm done is upsetting the natural migrating behavior these animals have.

"Ducks are opportunists," Hubbard continued. "They will not fly south if food is available. Neither they nor the people who feed them think about what will happen when the pond freezes over. By then it is often too late to migrate south."

Money is there to offset deficit

The effect of reduced state aid will not result in additional town budget cuts this year.

A combination of events has succeeded in lessening the effect of a $345,618 shortfall in state funding to Cohasset.

Although town officials originally thought that budgets would have to be sliced further, it now appears there will be sufficient funds to offset the state deficit, according to the advisory committee.

What can't be made up in increased user fees and additional local revenue sources, will hopefully be found in the town's free cash account. It is expected that the account may total about $250,000 this year, a sufficient supply that will allow town officials to dip into the money if there isn't an adequate amount of revenue.

Although that money is set aside for emergency expenditures throughout the year, the town accountant believes there is enough there to cover any budget deficit and unforeseen expenses until the next fiscal year.

The free cash account total of $250,000 is nearly the same as last year, according to advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke, although it is significantly lower than in previous years. According to Goedecke, the town accountant believes that the free cash account will be sufficient to cover any budget shortfall after all fees increases and revenue sources are known.

If the deficit is larger than expected, there may not be enough free cash to absorb the shortfall. However, according to the town accountant's estimates, covering any budget shortfall should not deplete the free cash account for this year.

"If the deficit is significant enough to endanger the free cash, then we won't go near that account."

Council on Aging to fight budget woes

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Members of the Cohasset Council on Aging were treated to a dose of good news/bad news this week as they observe the 20th anniversary of the council.

The good news, according to Council on Aging director Kathy Bryanton, is that 38 percent of Cohasset's senior population now uses the senior center. "I think that puts to rest the notion that there isn't a need for a senior center in Cohasset," she said at the council's annual meeting on Monday.

Also, a private fundraising organization is now in full operation, attempting to stall any Council on Aging program cuts caused by budget constraints. The bad news came in the form of financial forecasts presented by both Selectman Ned Tebbetts and Bobbie Kamin, executive director of the Massachusetts Council on Aging.

Tebbetts, who is selectmen's liason to the local council, explained that loss of federal revenue sharing and a reduction in state aid has rapidly decreased Cohasset's revenue. That, combined with increases in fixed town costs, such as health insurance, a pension plan for town employees, and negotiated increases in the fire department, have caused major financial problems for the town.

In addition, he warned, property reassessments have been completed by the town assessors. Those numbers, which are available at town hall, have a lot of resident concerned, he noted, "including my wife and I."

Kamin explained that cuts in the state budget will

The Cohasset School Committee will be holding public meetings on the following dates: Thursday, Sept. 6, Sept. 18, Oct. 2, Oct. 16, Nov. 6, Nov. 20, Dec. 4, Dec. 18, Jan. 8, Jan. 22, Feb. 5, March 5, March 19, April 9, May 7, May 21, June 4, and June 18.

Additional meetings will be scheduled during the budget preparation period. Meetings will be held in the home economics room at the high school.

No decision on parking

Selectmen have delayed any decision regarding the continuing parking problems along Border Street until the owner of Hugo's Restaurant is able to attend.

Several neighbors from Border Street and Parker Avenue attended Monday night's selectmen's meeting, thinking that the problem was going to be discussed.

But Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt postponed the discussion, noting that Hugo's owner Paul Logue was suddenly hospitalized. The meeting was scheduled, Pratt noted, because of changes proposed by Logue to alleviate the parking and noise problems in that area.

Although several residents were upset because they had not been notified about the meeting, selectmen explained they were not legally obliged to notify abutters because it was not a public hearing. But, as a consideration to the residents, selectmen said they would notify one resident, Russell Benetti, about future meetings. He will serve as a spokesman and coordinator for the neighborhood.

The residents have complained for several years about the noise, parking and litter problems caused by patrons of Hugo's. Last year, selectmen agreed that Hugo's could use the Government Island parking lot until 10 p.m. for overflow parking, if the area was well supervised and cleaned.

Cohasset's Christy Mihos, a possible state senate candidate, attended last weekend's Republican Party cook-out at the home of Ted and Julie Guild. Mihos attended the event along his son, Christy IV, daughter Ashley, and wife, Andrea. (Staff photo/Buzz Wadsworth)

Cohasset's week . . .

Residents express interest

Several residents have indicated to selectmen their willingness to join the selectmen's blue ribbon commission on drug and alcohol abuse.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby last week suggested that the panel be formed to look into drug abuse in the community, and to investigate ways of dealing with the problem.

Since that time, Gjesteby and other selectmen have talked to several residents who expressed an interest in serving on the commission.

Anyone who would like to be appointed should contact the selectmen's office at town hall. Selectmen are expected to make the appointments at next week's meeting.

Good marks on the pond

Highway Superintendent Harold Litchfield received high praise from selectmen this week for his department's work on the Meeting House pond.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt said Litchfield and his crew should be commended for the time and effort they put into the pond renovations. "Our town employees do plenty for what they are paid," he noted.

Selectman Ned Tebbetts also offered praise to the board chairman for his supervisory efforts during the renovation project.

Selectmen interview building inspector finalists

At their Monday night meeting, selectmen interviewed three candidates for the position of building inspector.

A fourth candidate told selectmen prior to the meeting that he would be unable to attend the public interview, fearing he would lose his current job if his employer found out about his employment search.

Town counsel will determine whether the candidate may be interviewed in private without violating the state open meeting law.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon said 47 candidates applied for the job, and he had screened 15 applicants. Four finalists were selected from that process.

The first applicant interviewed Monday night was Richard Johnson of Miami Springs, Fla. Johnson, a former general contractor and building inspector in that state, is planning to relocate to Cedarville. Johnson told selectmen he has experience in zoning enforcement in Miami Springs, and with "dealing with tough situations" as the acting building official in that town.

The second candidate was Robert Egan of Hingham. A former industrial arts teacher in the Boston public schools, Egan holds a master's degree. If selected for the Cohasset position, Egan said he would sell a design and construction company he now owns with a partner. As the town's building inspector, Egan said he would regularly attend planning and zoning meetings. "I would not resent the time involved," he told selectmen.

The third candidate for the position was Michael Noon of Duxbury. A former code enforcement officer in Vermont, Noon is currently a construction engineer for Ocean Spray. He said he would like to return to municipal employment and noted that he would meet regularly with town boards in an effort to strengthen communication between his office and town officials.

As a code enforcement officer, Noon said he has experience with federal, state and local codes, and has participated in court cases involving enforcement of those building codes.

Ducks not wanted on common

Hubbard suggested that signs be posted around the common, warning people not to feed ducks in the pond.

"How do we enforce that?" Selectman Ned Tebbetts wondered.

Selectman Pratt suggested that a fine could be imposed and enforced. "It would be a damn shame to wreck this after we spent so much to fix it," he stated. "The bottom will be as filthy as before we dug it out. It's in the best condition now since it was built in 1903.

"Before, people would come down with bags of stale hamburg rolls. It's not just bad for the pond, it's bad for the ducks."

Pratt hoped their efforts would not be in vain. As of Tuesday morning, five ducks had returned to their former home, as young children awaited their arrival carrying bread crumbs.

He suggested that a small sign be posted near the pond, a replica of the Audubon poster sent by Hubbard to the board. It outlines the reasons why people should not feed migrating wildlife.

"If people do not feed them (the ducks), I think they'll go somewhere else," Pratt said.

Selectmen noted that little children will always be welcomed at the common, and they will not be prohibited from feeding a few kernels of corn to the wildlife. But they do not encourage feeding on a regular basis.

Selectman Pratt read from an essay written in 1909 by Cohasset's "quintessential" historian, Dr. Oliver Howe. In the essay, Dr. Howe described the new Meeting House Pond, saying it encompassed "a rare beauty seldom equalled."

Money is there to offset budget deficit

Goedecke said. "But we believe that will not be case."

Currently, the advisory committee is awaiting specific numbers on fee increases and revenue sources. Once those numbers are known, the amount of the budget deficit, if any, can be calculated.

"The big question right now is the confirmation of the proposed fee increases," Goedecke said. "And we're especially dependent on voters approving the landfill sticker fee at town meeting. If that fails, it will be a significant amount to offset. The board of health figures the stickers will bring in about $52,000 in revenue. That would be a significant loss if voters don't approve it."

Town officials anticipate a $20,000 increase in the revenues generated by a higher harbor mooring fee. The sewer rate increase, aproved by the annual town meeting, will generate an additional $10,000 this year.

In addition, more than $17,000 can be used from the town's overlay account, an amount set aside each year for property tax abatements. An extra $14,879 was also discovered in excess lottery payments to the town - an amount that has been untouched since 1987. In addition, the town's pension bill was $78,905 lower than aniticpated.

These 'pluses' are needed to offset some negatives, such as the lower new growth figures estimated by the assessors' office. They figure that new growth in Cohasset will probably only generate $101,000 in tax revenue this year, compared to their original estimates of $140,000.

All in all, Goedecke said the town has escaped the full fury of decreased state revenues. "I think we can consider ourselves fortunate compared to other towns," she noted.

"I think we're in a good position because of very conservative fiscal planning on the part of our town accountant (Mary Matthews Gallagher). Her projections of local revenues were very conservative and the revenues actually came in higher. So now we can take advantage of that money to offset the deficit. In the past, this deficit would have left us in a very bad position."

The advisory committee will meet again September 19. At that time, Goedecke said more specific numbers may be available to calculate the exact deficit and the amount which must be absorbed from the free cash acount.

Cohasset dancer at conservatory

Sharon Weber of Cohasset will be joining the South Shore Conservatory faculty to direct the dance programs at the school.

These programs will include Introduction to Dance for children four to six, Classical Ballet for children and adults, and Modern Dance for adults. Dance lessons are held on Thursdays at the Conservatory off 19 Fort Hill Street in Hingham.

Weber holds a Bachelor of Science in Dance from the University of Massachusetts. She also studied at the Connecticut Dance and Theatrical Center in Hartford, the Martha Graham Modern Dance studio and the Joffrey Ballet School in New York City, and the Marie Paquet Studio in Boston.

She was Resident Director of Drama and Dance at Fisher Junior College in Boston and has taught ballet and modern dance at various schools, community centers, and YMCA's.

In an effort to bring dance into the public schools, she has been working in cooperation with the University of Mass. dance department on a handbook and video package to distribute to physical educators throughout the state. She has developed a Creative Movement Fundamentals series of eight units, which she will be demonstrating at the up-coming convention for the Mass. Assn. of Physical Education, Recreation, and Dance.

For the children in the Introduction to Dance class, she is planning a program for parents and friends for the holiday season based on "The Night Before Christmas."

For further information about dance at the Conservatory contact the office at 749-7565.

Voters can expect about 25 articles on warrant

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It appears that residents will have to vote on at least 25 warrant articles at the October 10 special town meeting.

At their meeting Monday night, selectmen reviewed the warrant and voted to support most of the articles. Their only negative response was for a proposal to rescind money appropriated last spring to remove underground storage tanks at the fire station. Because that appropriation was later defeated by an override ballot, $10,000 must be stricken from the town budget.

According to state law, selectmen said, those tanks must be removed. Although the town voted not to override Proposition 2 1/2 to accomplish the task, selectmen said it must somehow be completed.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle suggested that selectmen not go along with the proposal, noting that private residents have been forced to remove tanks and the town is under the same obligation. Selectman Burt Pratt suggested that the advisory committee take the money from the town's stabilization fund. "We can't flaunt the state law on this," he said.

There was some confusion about whether the town must rescind a $50,000 appropriation for the design and construction of a new town cemetery. Last week, cemetery study committee chairman Glen Pratt explained to selectmen that $44,000 was found in the cemetery's Sale of Lots account. That money could be used to begin the project.

The question now remains whether they will begin using that money to finance the project, or whether the committee will take out a loan and pay it back with the interest from the Sale of Lots account. Because selectmen were unclear about the procedure, they were unsure whether it would be necessary to rescind the original appropriation approved by the annual town meeting. Selectmen will make a decision on that article after further discussion with committee chairman Pratt.

Selectmen will go along with a proposal to rescind the $280,000 previously approved by town meeting to finance the Milliken Field renovations. That project, which required a Proposition 2 1/2 override, was also defeated by a ballot vote.

Selectmen decided to add an article which will restore $1,800 to the town's celebrations account. This money is traditionally used to fund the local observances of Memorial Day and Veterans' Day.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle was adamant that the money which was cut from the budget last spring, be restored in full. The board supported the recommendation.

Selectmen will support an article to remove landfill privileges from the town facility permit. The board of health has recommended that the landfill permit be separate, with a $52 annual fee.

At the same time, selectmen believe that the beach permits, now under the jurisdiction of the recreation commission, should be issued by the police department.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt supported the change, saying the recreation commission has artificially inflated its annual income by adding the sticker permit fees into the revenue account. He also noted that the recreation department's "mixed-up hours' have resulted in confusion for many residents seeking facilities stickers at town hall.

"I have the sense the community is dissatisfied with the present system," Selectman Ned Tebbetts agreed.

Selectmen did not make any decision regarding the water commission's proposal to take land surrounding Lily Pond by eminent domain. Owners of Lily Pond Estates have received permission to begin construction, but the water commission is attempting to stop the development by purchasing the land.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson informed selectmen that he is trying to schedule a meeting with the land owners and the town prior to the town meeting. The owners previously indicated they may be willing to negotiate a sale of the property, he said. Selectmen voted to support the land taking, pending the successful completion of negotiations with the property owners. Selectman Diana Kornet voted against the proposal, saying the town cannot afford to purchase the property at this time.

The planning board has inserted a group of zoning bylaw articles into the special town meeting warrant. The same articles were approved by the annual town meeting, but because of an advertising technicality they were ruled illegal by the state attorney general.

The board also supported a fee schedule increase for Class one and Class two car dealers. Those fees will increase to $100 annually, although Selectman Laugelle complained that multi-million dollar businesses can easily afford a higher fee. State law mandates a maximum amount of $100, Executive Secretary Greg Doyon explained.

The board voted 3 to 2 to support a $40,000 transfer from the water department budget to the town's general fund. This is partial payment of a debt owed to the town by the water department, which according to state law must be approved by town meeting.

Selectmen were reluctant to accept the money, knowing that the department will have a budget shortfall this year because of decreased water purchases this past summer.

In addition, the water commission will propose a rate increase at the special town meeting. The commission has been trying to make the department self-sufficient, but this year's decreased water demand will necessitate a rate increase, he told selectmen. Currently, it appears the department will request a four and a-half percent increase, although it could be more if the town approves the budget transfer article, water commissioner Ron Goodwin said.

Selectman Burt Pratt said until a repayment plan is established by the water department, he will not support the budget transfer. "I don't want to take this money arbitrarily from the water department," he said. "I'd like to see a long term plan."

Selectmen also supported an article requesting $15,335 from the stabilization fund to purchase a new police cruiser. The old vehicle will be used by the animal control officer.

They also supported a revised animal control bylaw to replace the county regulations. At the annual town meeting, voters decided to secede from the county animal control agency.

Council on Aging fights budget woes

be felt by the local senior centers and councils on aging. Because the financial resources are no longer there, Kamin called on volunteers to bring their individualized resources and talents to the Cohasset Council on Aging.

Last year, the Cohasset Council on Aging received an annual budget of $33,000 from the town. But Kamin noted that if all the volunteer hours were added together, "it would be well over the value of what the town contributes annually." The senior center volunteers are a valuable asset to the town, she reminded the council members.

Kamin described the turbulent state budget proceedings, and said she was grateful that the councils' budgets were not cut deeper. In the process, she said, Cohasset lost its competitive grants for the following fiscal year, which is money used to fund the SHINE health insurance program and the local senior center outreach worker.

Cohasset will only receive $2,481 from the state in its formula grant program next year.

"The challenge I bring to you is that you can continue to bring success to your community. The resources you have are not in finances but in people. I challenge you to look at your resources rationally. You only fail if you don't try," she told the local council members.

Karen Corcoran is president of the Friends of Cohasset Council on Aging. It is a group of residents formed about a year ago, she said, in response to the budget crisis that threatened the senior center programs. At that time, the center was without a shuttle van, and the group tried to assist in the purchase of a new vehicle.

It is a private, non-profit organization which does not function under the control of the council or the town of Cohasset, she explained. The membership was formed, Corcoran stated, simply to provide financial resources for the senior center programs.

There are now close to 30 members in the organization which recently adopted a set of bylaws. The next step, she said, is establishing three subcommittees to work on fundraising. Their next meeting is scheduled for October 21 at the senior center. Interested residents are urged to attend, Corcoran said.

This year, the Friends have agreed to finance the mailing of the senior center monthly newsletter, Vista. That account was scheduled to be cut from the council's budget, she noted, and the Friends volunteered to take on that expense.

"We can't do a lot until we really get organizied," she said. "But this is a start."

Several members of the council listed a number of programs that are continuing this year. Among the new programs is one started by Dr. Wendall Merrill.

Dr. Merrill began the ABC - the Aging Breakfast Club- this year by making a few phone calls and inviting some senior acquaintenances out to breakfast. Now it is a regular Wednesday event, which sometimes includes a full day's sightseeing excursion.

"We'll go anywhere," he told the council members this week, and suggested that people call with ideas for their weekly trips. He also invited other seniors to join the club. Carpooling is encouraged, he said, and the cost of the day's event usually totals about $5.

In her address to the council, director Bryanton noted that 1989 has been a "year of anxiety" for the senior center. With the help of the community volunteers, the Council on Aging survived each crisis, she said.

"It really has been a very good year, and a year of growth for the Council on Aging," she concluded.

Red Cross welcomes blood donors Sept. 26

The next Cohasset community Red Cross bloodmobile will be held Tuesday, Sept. 26, from 2 to 7 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main St.

Corinne Cahill, R.N. will again be the coordinator on the day of the Bloodmobile.

Groups that will participate, as in the past, and their Donor Promotor are Seavey Engineering (Gayle Seavey); Webb-Norfolk (Bill Handrahan and Sue Faletra); Rotary (Wayne Robbins); Masons (Don Harrold); Lewgion (Steve Wigmore); Unitarian First Parish (Susan Grant); Second Congregational (Vi Tuthill); St. Stephens (Rev. Cutler); St. Anthony's (Carol Riley); Schoolteachers (Carol Riley); Glastonbury Abbey (Patricia Hammond); Independents (Mary Brennock); and Beechwood Congregational and Firefighters. Any other group interested in this Cohasset Human Service can contact Chairman Al Odermatt.

All previous donors in the last three years will be mailed a notice by the Red Cross, and they will be contacted by their group promoter to sign up for this Bloodmobile.

Ninety four donors participated in our last Bloodmobile held June 20. They donated 88 pints of blood. We would hope to exceed this number in the coming Bloodmobile.

Walk-ins are welcome after 4 p.m.

For further information contact Chairman Alfred Odermatt, 383-1283 or 878-3854; or Coordinator Corinne Cahill at 383-9265.

Windows – The Eyes of Your Home
If you're shopping for new "clothes" for your windows, it pays to know that a truly effective window treatment is not only a beautiful addition to your room but also a sound investment.
You can actually lower your fuel bill simply by installing appropriate window treatments. Draperies add polish to any room while providing excellent insulation from summer heat and winter's chills.
Sunshine pouring through your windows makes a room bright and cheery. Unfortunately, it can also do irreparable damage to your furniture, carpet and upholstery. An appropriate window treatment, like sheer curtains, lets in light while protecting your furnishings.
Finally, proper window dressing will shield you and your belongings from inquisitive glances of passersby, particularly important to those who live at street level in areas where foot traffic abounds.
Choosing the best window treatment is a task that requires careful thought and planning. The choices can be overwhelming. Let your imagination and intuition guide you to a style that not only complements your room but also provides adequate protection for you and your home.

□ We certainly want to wish Bob and Bobby Protulis a happy (belated, it was Sept. 9th) birthday!! What better present can a dad get than to have a son born on his birthday? Many more to you both.

□ The next Cohasset Community Red Cross Triannual Bloodmobile will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 26 from 2 to 7 p.m. at the First Parish House on 23 North Main Street. Previous participants will receive a notice by mail and will be contacted by their Group Promoter to make an appointment. New donors are urgently needed, and a special thanks to the 94 donors and the many volunteers who participated in the last Bloodmobile held on June 20. All healthy persons ages 17 and weighing over more than 110 pounds, should consider being a part of this most worthy community service, and enjoy the pleasure that comes with giving this gift of life, a pint of thier own blood. If you have any questions, call Al Odermatt at 383-1283 or 878-3954.

□ Congratulations to Cheryl (Marks), Jay and Jason Fiori, who had a new member added to their family on Aug. 23. Alicia Christine weighed 7 pounds, 10 ounces and was 19½ inches long. The beaming grandparents are David and Fran Marks and Leo and Mary Fiori. Congratulations to you all!!

□ We miss "Babe" Trott's happy face as she walks all over the town, hopefully you will be up and about real soon!

□ Best wishes go to Nina Atkinson and Douglas Jones as they begin their married life. May you have a long and happy future together, Mr. and Mrs. Jones!

□ Summer is officially over, the season finale was last Sunday's performance of Joan Rivers. Once that tent comes down, winter officially begins its appearance, it seems; maybe there is someone willing to perform in January or February, just to keep "old Man Winter" away. . . .

□ Hats off to John Colocousis, 1985 CHS grad. John has recently completed a project for Babson's management Consulting Field Experience. With this under his belt, John is ready to hit the business world, he can be a consultant to any company, large or small. Knock 'em dead John.

□ Best wishes go to Mr. and Mrs. John P. Reardon, Jr. They were married on June 24th, and Jane and Jack are happily settled in Cohasset!

□ John Loupos and Susan McMackin are offering an interesting course this weekend, at Wah Lum Academy. There are three workshops on Saturday and Sunday, offering Microcosmic Orbit meditation, Tai Chi Chi Kung, Fusion of five elements meditation. These are open to the public and are for you if you are asking to increase and improve your energy reserve (who isn't). Call 383-6822 or 383-2688 for more information.

□ Sure was a nice trip that the Seniors had to Great Woods recently and there are a few folks that should be recognized, as their contributions made it possible: Bob Magner of Cohasset Savings Bank, Ed Mulvey of Pilgrim Cooperative, Helen Garvey of Rockland Trust, and Terri Tucker of South Shore Multibank. Without those kind folks there would have been no transportation.

□ Martha Grinnell was spotted "around town" last week, she looks great and reports that all is wonderful in her life. She is an interesting person with a great outlook.

□ Had a nice chat with Doris Remes last week, she sounded exactly the same. Doris and Paul live in Florida with their son Ken, and their daughter Lauri lives right down the street from them. Paul is feeling ever so much better now, and they certainly are glad about that. I have their address, if you want to drop a line I will be happy to give it to you. I am sure they would love to hear from some of their old customers. Do you know it has been ten years since they closed Village Fabric and headed for Florida? They are in the same house as they moved to, and make good use of the pool there!

□ If you are looking for a nice night out, as well as a way to help the Quincy Crisis Center, plan on attending "A Feast For All Reasons." It will be held on Friday, Sept. 22 at the Broad Cove Ballroom on Rte. 3A in Hingham. The cost is $10 per person. For information and reservations call 328-9173, 749-9412, or 749-8857. They are also planning an auction to benefit the Mary Martha Learning Center, on Saturday, Nov. 4. More to follow.

□ Alyssa Cross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Cross of Cohasset is entering the 7th grade this fall at Newton Country Day School of the Sacred Heart.

□ Daniel W. Bliss of 76 Summer Street, and Jennifer C. Martin of 45 North Main Street, graduates of Cohasset High School, are now attending St. Lawrence University in Canton, N.Y.

□ That's the news from here, don't forget to call with your latest item!

Capping an undefeated season and a win in the South Shore League Championships, the Cohasset Swim Team recently held its annual awards ceremony.

Diving coach Jane deLima, speaking also for her co-coach, Greg Nourie, began by saying that 18 divers (including four boys and 14 girls, one from Hanover) had put in a summer of hard work and dedication. The diving team was undefeated during the season and won first place in the championships in both age groups.

In the 12 and under age category, the first place trophy was awarded to Çaroline deLima, second place to Becky Golden and third place to Dawn Meehan.

In the 16 and under age category, Jonathan deLima was first,Alison Doherty, second, and Colby Laurence, third.

Rookie of the Year awards went to Caitlin Connolly and Greg Schultz.

Most Improved Diver awards in their age groups went to Bobby Meehan for 12 and under and John Kissel, 16 and under.

The Unsung Hero Award went to Becky Golden. The Most Dedicated Diver was Çaroline deLima and the diving coaches' trophy was awarded to Kim Ward.

The Bancroft Trophy, awarded for volunteering of time to the Swim Center and the sport of swimming was awarded to Maria Kierce. The award was announced by Diana Karcher and the trophy presented by Jane Cook.

Coach Kate Anderson then awarded the following Swim Team Awards to her undefeated swim team:

Editorial

Be forewarned

We should consider ourselves lucky - this year. But we must also be aware that this luck will not hold out for long, and next year our town budget will likely be in worse shape.

When we defeated the overrides last spring, we knew that we'd have to return to yet another special town meeting to make further budget reductions. What we didn't anticipate at that time was the budget blow dealt by the state late last spring when we were informed of a $345,618 cut in revenue.

All of a sudden this shower of bad luck evolved into a downpour.

Town officials have been scrambling for several months, trying to find money to cover this gaping deficit. User fees have been increased in an effort to raise money without a tax hike. Selectmen believe that harbor mooring fees will jump, and the board of health is planning to implement a separate $52 landfill sticker fee. Ambulance fees have been raised, and town clerk licenses will be on the rise, if town meeting approves.

Although many people object to this approach to revenue production, many town officials believe it is the fairest and easiest method of obtaining needed money. It will affect only those people who participate in the service. Unlike a tax increase which would be shared by all, a fee increase is a more selective method of gaining needed revenue.

The gloomy budget news appears to have abated, at least momentarily. Additional revenues have been found in various town accounts, and it appears that town meeting will need to slice only those monies affected by the override defeat. That amounts to less than $200,000, which will hurt, but it could have been worse if we hadn't found monies to cover the state deficit.

We can't expect this luck to hold out for long, however. As another budget fast approaches, the town will once again be scrambling to find needed revenue in the face of increasing expenditures - a necessity in the continuing operation of municipal government.

Voters should be well aware that the prospect of future overrides is great. We can not expect to find additional hidden resources of money. And now that fees have been increased, there is virtually no where else to look except from our tax money.

Voters can always say no to another override. However, we feel that is not a suitable alternative to huge budget cuts which will result in an unacceptable number of employee layoffs.

Our warning to residents is to be prepared. Proposition 2 1/2 overrides is a phrase whose time has just arrived.

Thanks for Little League success

Letters

To the Editor:

As the President of the Cohasset Little League, I would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank the individuals and corporations that responded to our fund-raising petition for sponsorships and contributions.

Our Pony League Sponsors for 1989 were the following businesses: Spensley Chevrolet (Yanks) and Dean Witter Investments (Mets).

Our Major League Sponsors for 1989 were the following businesses: Leo's Exxon (Red Sox), Dean Witter Investments (Mets), Harbor Mechanical (Braves), Brewer and Lord Insurance (Athletics), and Mass 4x4 Asociation (Cardinals).

Our Minor League Sponsors for 1989 were the following businesses: Ed Goff Construction, National Abatement Services, Nu-Look Services, C. Spirito, The Good Sport, Foster-Gledhill Construction, Hancock Paint and Rockland Trust Co.

Our Farm League Sponsors for 1989 were the following businesses: Dean Witter Investments, Mark Batts Electrical, and Randy's Cohasset Service, Inc.

Other contributors included: Dick Farwell Construction, King Jewelers, Mitchell Mechanical, The Goddale Company, Lehr and Barnes Insurance and anonymous donors.

This year, largely as a result of our sponsor's and contributor's generosity, Little League Baseball will be active in Cohasset from the beginning of May to the middle of August. The first half of the season ended on May 31. The second half begins June 1, and the tournament season begins on July 1.

The Cohasset under 12 All-Stars will play in the Scituate Tournament, the North River Tournament, and the L.L. International Tournament in August. Cohasset will sponsor an under 10 All-Stars Team in the North River Tournament.

Truly yours,
John E. Kinchla,
CYAA President

No safe level of radiation

To the editor:

In 1954 the National Council on Radiation Protection published a handbook entitled "Permissible Dose From External Sources of Radiation" in which it said that it could no longer assume that there is a radiation threshold dose below which biological damage does not occur.

The facts are clear: 1. Ionizing radiation causes biological damage. 2. Ionizing radiation is invisible; it is impossible to see, feel or smell it. 3. Once exposed the individual finds it impossible to determine injury until illness develops. Then he/she may develop leukemia, thyroid disease and any number of other cancers.

Yet residents around the Pilgrim Nuclear Power Plant in Plymouth are exposed to planned and unplanned radioactive releases on a continuous basis. They also face the devastation of a probable accident.

The public, however, only hears the utility orchestrated public relations statement that there is no danger to the public and is lulled into complacency.

I believe there should be no denial of this invisible threat and that the Pilgrim Plant should be closed now.

A breakfast break before school begins

Jennifer Plante, a junior at Cohasset High School, and Laura Andrews, a senior, welcomed students back to school at the Student Council breakfast held last week outside the school.

Rebecca Tosca, a senior, Ben Chittick, and Marisa Gallant, had an opportunity to chat about their summer vacations before they entered the classroom for 1989-90.

There was a quite a crowd gathered last Thursday morning for the annual Student Council breakfast, as students celebrate the start of another school year.

Football forecast

As the Cohasset Skippers prepare to rebound from last year's 2-8 season, coach Phil Pisano will need a strong effort from all twenty-four players.

"We will have a good team, but we must stay healthy" Pisano said after his team's first test Friday night against Hull and Whitman-Hanson at the annual South Shore League jamboree in Randolph.

"We were victimized by the big play last year," Pisano added, as he explained how last year's record did not indicate the team's play. " We would be in the game until the end and then there would be a fumble, interception or penalty that would turn the game around."

Coach Pisano will need a strong effort both ways from co-captains Pat Conroy at full back and linebacker, Sean McCarthy at center and defensive tackle and Joel Whitman at guard and linebacker. He is also expecting offensive and defensive help from running backs Curt Ludlow, Mike Ellenger and quarterback Terry O' Leary.

"We should have a pretty good season. We have a lot of seniors and we are very closely knit," said co-captain Pat Conroy. "Basically everybody is going both ways," the tired fullback/linebacker said.

Coach Pisano plans to strictly use a multiple back offense and will rely heavily on the skills of Ludlow, Conroy and O'Leary. The front line will be the key to Cohasset's offensive success.

Both Conroy and Coach Pisano feel that East-Bridgewater and Norton are the teams to beat in the small school division of the South Shore League.

Ironically, the Clippers open their 1989 grid iron campaign at East-Bridgewater. And as Coach Pisano said they will have their "hands full."

South Shore Hockey Assn. News

The South Shore Hockey Association will begin its seventh season this week. The S.S.H.A. officially changed its name from the former Weymouth Pops Hockey League, at its recent board meeting. The name change is to reflect the make-ups of its players and sponsors.

The S.S.H.A. is an over 30, no-check league formed in 1981 by a group of former Weymouth Youth Hockey coaches. The league has grown from its original two teams to six teams and has become very competitive, but always emphasizing camraderie and sportsmanship.

The league has played in Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and now Quincy for the past two years.

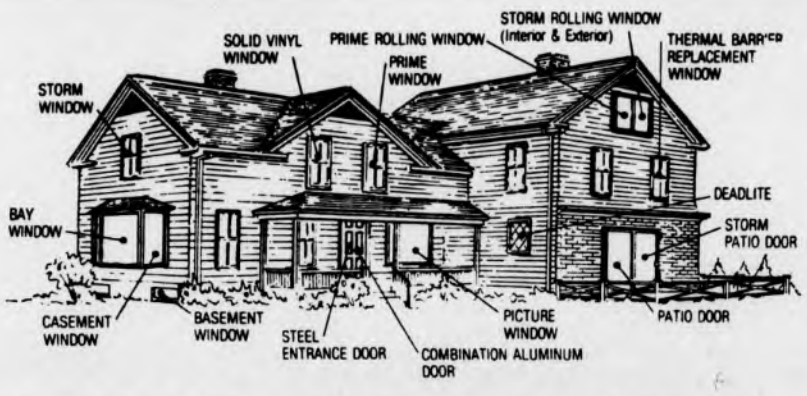
Starting its third season at the recently refurbished Quincy Youth Rink, the Roman Garden Restaurant Team of Quincy, last year's playoff champion, promises to be the favorite again. The defense pairing of brothers Dick and Don Ethier will be tough to go around as usual. The Sullivan Tire Team of Norwell lead by Rocky Rothwell will be right up there leading his unknown players to numerous victories.

Bare Cove Travel Team of Hingham, very stingy in giving up goals with Mark Selbert in net, has the most powerful B line in the league. The team to watch out for is Gulph Construction of Scituate with league founder and commissioner Joe Fell leading their "Russian Style" attack.

Never to be counted out is Gardens Pub of Quincy who have a tendency to peak-out too soon. With all of its players back from the operating room, and with a new innovative goalie pairing, the championship could be within reach.

Lastly, but not to be counted out, is the newly restocked Varmints Team of Quincy. Captain Bob "Iron Fist" Leger promises to surprise all the other teams.

All games are played every Sunday starting at 6:40 p.m. There is no admission and the public is welcome.



Anyone interested in further details can call Jim at 337-1325 or Joe at 871-5937

Summer reading party

"Asian Adventure," the Summer Reading Program at the Paul Pratt Library, concluded Friday, Aug. 18 with a field trip to the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

Participants in the program enjoyed a guided tour of the Museum's Asian collection, followed by a picnic in the courtyard. Children also enjoyed a specially decorated dragon cake, and fortune cookies to take home.

The winners of the "Name-the-Dragon" contest at the library were announced. First prize went to Emily Collins for her entry, "Ching Wing." Second and third prizes were won by Liz Myers and Andrew Kinch.

During the program, 88 students read over 1300 books. Thirty-one students received a gift paperback of their choice for reaching their grade level reading goal. These gifts were donated by the Friends of the Library, who also sponsored the field trip and party. Each reader will also be awarded a summer reading certificate. Students who will receive a certificate are:

Jill Magner, Tammy Maitland, Brie McKenney, Cara McKenney, Martha McLoughlin, Alyssa McNamara, Katie Medinger, Bobby Meehan, Dawn Meehan, Jennifer Meehan, Andrew Mercurio, Peter Minnar, Robby Moody, Alanna Murphy, Liz Myers, Joseph Nicynski, Ronnie Nicynski, Ben Peterson, Eileen Ridge, Katherine Ronan, Meredith Ronan, Aaron Sawchuk, Ryan Sawchuk, Ian Simons, James Simons, Kathy Smith, Ben Smoot, Jessica Stevens, Adrienne Sullivan, Kerry Sullivan Susan Thompson, Megan Waal, Jamie Watts.

Also, Holly Brennock, Alison Hickey, Sasha Pinegar and Jonathan Pinegar.

New this year was a program for "Almost-Readers," those younger children who enjoy being read to, or are just beginning to read. Fourteen children participated in this program, and they will also receive certificates. Their names are: Katherine Ainslie, Sean Connolly, Steven Coyne, Kristen Devine, Holly Dinsmore, Justin Drybanski, Emma Gardner, Benjamin Kinch, Daniel Kinchla, Brian Lewis, Ross Lieb-Lappen, William Moody, Beth Smoot, Amanda Watts and Timmy Baird.

The library would like to express its thanks to the Friends of the Library and all of the parents who helped make this program a success.

This was the first new member of the first grade to depart the school bus last week as school began for the students of Cohasset.

Latin students win awards

Mr. O'Neil congratulates those Latin students in Cohasset who won awards in the competitive National Latin Examinations. Students winning awards were: Will Adams, Kathleen Colburn, Nathaniel Bowen, Alyson James, and Tropher Henderson.

Support for parents

The Social Service League will sponsor a discussion and support series for parents of pre-teens and teens to be held the second Monday evening of each month during the school year.

The major theme for the year is common adolescent behavior. A video made by WCBH entitled Cries for Help will be presented each month. It is a series of short programs designed to help adult caregivers learn about their teenager. This series received professional acclaim when it was shown at the 1988 American Medical Association National Congress on adolescent health. Topics of concern and young people that will be discussed include peer pressure, communication, befriending, self esteem, pain, anger, drugs, family and sexuality.

The facilitator for the discussion group will be Carolyn Housman LICSW, Cohasset Social Service League.

The meeting this month will be Monday, Sept. 18 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the home of Ann Hublef, 38 Forest Avenue. All are welcome.

For information call 383-0771.

Little League success

The Cohasset Little League acknowledges the managers and coaches within our program for their dedicated efforts to teach baseball to the children.

The Little League had over 275 children ages 8 to 15 playing on 21 teams in four divisions, Farm League, Minor League, Major League and Senior League ball.

Despite the rain, we played on.

Managers and Coaches in the Farm League were: Brian Nohe, Emmett O'Brien, Ernie Grassey, Mark Connolly, Jay Caron, Mike McWilliams, Chuck Peterson and Jim Kinch.

Managers and Coaches in the Minor League were: John Smoot, Ed Goff, Kevin Lewis, Buddy Bilton, Kevin McCarthy, Bob Moody, Rob Gaughen, Gerry Buckley, Bill Baird, Rick Towle, Bob Gledhill, Peter Laney, Ray Hanian, Bill McAuliffe, Stan Walsh, Paul Verrochi, John Whorisky, Jerry O'Sullivan and David Leahy.

Managers and Coaches in the Major League were: Brian Fahey, Jim Magner, Dick Stevens, Roy Fitzsimmons, Dave Leahy, Bob Devin, John Williams, Mark Batts, Bill Higgins, Rick Kondrat, Brian Rossi, John Norris and Kevin O'Connor.

Managers and Coaches for the Senior League were: Rich Henderson, Steve Endris and John Conroy.

Over 300 games were played. Special thanks should go to Kevin O'Connor our umpire coordinator who did an outstanding job.

Highlights from our concluded season have been:

SemiFinalists in the Scituate Senior League championship. Participation in the International Senior League Tournament;

Expansion of our Major League program to five league teams. Reduced roster size and more playing time for all children;

An Age 9/10 Tournament team participated in the North River and the Dean Witter/Hingham Tournament;

An Age 11/12 Tournament team participated in the North River and the Little League International Tournament.

Boating skills and seamanship

The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary, Flotilla 1207, sponsored by the Cohasset Harbor and Recreation Departments, will conduct a six-lesson Boating Skills and Seamanship Course, mandatory by law, for all 16 year olds and under who plan to operate a craft of 25 horsepower and over propulsion.

The course is open to all ages and will be held at the Audio-Visual Room at Cohasset High School, beginning Sept. 27, at 7:30 p.m., on consecutive Wednesday evenings.

Registrations will be accepted by calling the Cohasset Recreation Department Office at: 383-6791, prior to Sept. 22.

Further details may also be obtained by calling either the Scituate Coast Guard Station at 545-3801 (days), or Donald Ladd at 545-6144 (evenings).

Pre-school story hour

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is currently accepting registrations for the fall series of Pre-School Story Hour.

Sessions will be offered at 10 a.m. Thursdays and Fridays, beginning Oct. 12. Each series will run for six weeks. Children must be 3-1/2 years of age.

To register, sign up at the Children's Room of the library, or call 383-1348.

School news

Recreation soccer begins

League soccer for grades 3 through 8 will begin this Saturday, Sept. 16.

Coaches will call team members by Friday morning in order to let players know game time and field.

If, for any reason you have not heard from your team coach by Friday morning, please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791, either Friday, or early Saturday morning.

Soccer Clinics for grades K, 1, and 2 will begin Saturday morning, Sept. 23, at the predesignated times, by grade:

Kindergarten, 9 to 10 a.m., First Grade, 10 to 11 a.m., Second Grade, 11 to noon.

Tyara Martin, 5, arrived early for her first day of school. She was a little apprehensive, so mom, Paula, and her little brother, Anthony, came along with her as she started classes at the Osgood School.

An urgent request

The Osgood School is in desperate need of a small, serviceable refrigerator. If you can donate one for a good cause, please call Irene Colwill at 383-6117. (Some money may be available).

PSO annual fall meeting

The annual fall meeting of the Cohasset Parent School Organization will be held Thursday, Sept. 21, 7:30 p.m. at the high school cafeteria.

The meeting provides an opportunity for parents to meet Stephen Hart, Superintendent of Schools; Mary Ellen Gallagher, Jr., Sr. High School principal; Kenneth Ekberg, Deerhill principal; and John Creamer, Osgood School principal. It is also an opportunity to become acquainted with school programs and current issues facing our schools and student population.*

Mark your calendars so you won't forget to attend!

*If you have a student in the Cohasset School system, you are automatically a member of the P.S.O. So please come and participate.

Minister: Gary A. Ritts; Secretary: Muriel Wheelwright; Office Phone: 383-0345; Parsonage Phone: 383-1422; Office Hours: Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to noon.

Children's Choir Director being sought: Under the direction of the Christian Education Committee and in consultation with music director, Robert Leavitt, the person will work with our elementary age children. Committee to interview soon. Call or send resume to: Children's Choir Search Committee, care of the church office. Hopes are for this new program to begin in October.

More new plans posted in Bates Hall including a model, all intended to spark further discussion and suggestions as to the possibilities for the remodelling project — finalization target date is Annual Meeting (January 28, 1990). Stop by and take a look, then share your thoughts and ideas with any one of the trustees. These are ONLY preliminary sketches. Let's all get involved.

Baptized on August 20th: Mrs. Charles (Helen) Donaldson, her son, Patrick and daughter, Hayley; during the regular service of worship.

Youth Director being sought: To program and lead our youth group programs from 7th through 12th grades. Two applicants to be interviewed in the next two weeks. We will keep you posted.

First Parish services

Rev. Edward T. Atkinson, Minister,
Parish House (617) 383-1100,
23 North Main Street.

From the Parish Committee Chair:

My family and I spent the last two weeks of August camping on a beautiful site overlooking a pond on Cape Cod. My brother-in-law (who is not a camper) asked me what I liked about camping. I didn't answer him seriously at the time, but I've thought about it a lot since. It isn't just the swimming and being outdoors and sailing and biking and toasting marshmallows over a campfire. The deeper enjoyment is the change in family dynamics when we are all embarked on an adventure together, and the sense of being away from everday concerns for an extended period. This vacation has left me feeling restored — and ready to deal with the frantic schedules and myriad demands on my time that come with September.

I hope each of you had an enjoyable summer, and I look forward to seeing you as we begin a new church year. Save the afternoon of October 22nd for a special celebration of the 20th anniversary of Ed's installation at First Parish. Details will follow shortly!

The Parish Committee is pleased to announce the appointment of Jacqueline Beauregard-Clark as new Director of Religious Education. Jacqui is a long-time member of First Parish, has taught in the church school, worked with the Junior High youth, taught the Human Sexuality program, and is a teacher by profession. We look forward very much to working with her.

— Debbie Eaton

Parish News:

The Music and Worship Committee will meet on Monday, Sept. 18 at 8 p.m. in the Parish House.

Outreach News:

The Homeshare project is progressing well. The rough plumbing and electrical work are in. Soon we'll be looking for volunteers to help with the finish work and prepare for our first family. A sofa bed has been donated. We are still looking for two roll away cots.

Music Notes:

Dear Singers and Ringers,

There is one major change this year. For the first itme ever, Choir Rehearsal will be on Thursday night, rather than Wednesday. This is a permanent change, due to my new job as accompanist for the Fine Arts Chorale, which meets on Wednesday night. I hope this will not be a major inconvenience, but rather a hopeful sign that we will not have so many conflicts with school activities and church meetings as we have in the past.

First Choir Rehearsal is Thursday, Sept. 14 at 7:45 p.m. We have a few old faithful pieces for the beginning of the year, then Ed's Celebration on October 22, plus the Vivaldi Gloria on December 3 to prepare for.

As always, please encourage all available people to come join us for music and fellowship.

Ringers: We need to get started early this year so we can play our piece by October 22. First Rehearsal will be Sunday, September 17, 12 noon sharp. Please try to be there; call me if you cannot make it.

Religious Education News:

With the coming of autumn, we, each one of us, embark on new beginnings and take steps forward to grow, to unite and to learn about ourselves and others.

With the arrival of the particular September, as I assume the position of Director of Religious Education, I want you to know I do so with enthusiasm and great respect for the children and families of the First Parish.

I have met with the Religious Education Committee. We are here for you. We will begin our church school program on the 17th of September. In the interim if you have any questions, concerns or talents to share, please call me at home 383-6055.

I look forward to meeting with you and your children and to sharing the growth that happens when we unite. We welcome you.

—Jacqueline Beauregard-Clark

Rev. John J. Keohane, Pastor, Jean Lennon, Coordinator of Religious Education. Rectory: 383-0219; Office: 383-0630, Tuesday and Friday, 9 to 12. Kathleen Keyes, Organist, 545-5058.

SUNDAY MASSES:

7, 9:30, 11:30 a.m.; Saturday, 5 p.m. Daily Mass: 7 a.m., Saturday, 8 a.m., followed by Novena & Rosary. Sacrament of Reconciliation: Saturday from 4:15 to 4:45 p.m.

BAPTISMS:

Christina E. Pinkus, Sheelah K. Scott.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION:

Registration next weekend, Sept. 16 and 17, after all Masses, in the Desmond Conference Room.

Next Sunday is Catechetical Sunday. The theme for this year is "Know and Share the God of Mercy." We welcome the opportunity of expressing appreciation to all who participate actively in the catechetical mission of the Archdiocese. These persons fulfill a truly valuable and essential role in the Church.

Teachers needed at all levels. Please call the office if you can help. Many Teacher Training Programs are available.

The choir is actively seeking new members. There are no try-outs. All are welcome. Please join us. Practices will begin in October, every Thursday in the choir loft at 7:30 p.m. For information please call Kathy at 545-5058 or Ann at 383-0401.

Piano instruction offered

Priscilla D. Daniels, teacher of pianoforte, is continuing piano instruction at her Beach Street home.

Daniels is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, magna cum laude. She has been teaching in Cohasset for 25 years, and has previously taught in Swampscott, Norwood and Lincoln. She is a member and past president of Alpha Chi Omega, National sorority, and Pi Kappa Lambda, honorary professional society.

While emphasizing the importance of consistent practice habits, she strives to communicate a genuine love of the fine arts through the medium of the piano.

LDS homemaking

Daughters ages 8 and up are invited to the Sept. Homemaking meeting September 14 at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 379 Gardner Street in Hingham at 7 p.m.

The girls and their mothers will have a choice of attending two of the four classes offered.

The mini-classes are: Basic skin care using common household products; making dessert pizza; painting on fabric such as sneakers, tote bag or t-shirt; or how to start a family history. Refreshments will be served.

Programs at Faith Nazarene

Fall activities will soon begin at the Faith Church of the Nazarene.

Wednesdays at 10 a.m. will be Ladies Bible Study led by the Pastor's wife, Martha Wilson. This meets in the parsonage living room at 258 Rockland St. in Hingham. Ladies of all ages are invited.

Mothers of Pre-Schoolers (MOPS) will be meeting in the church sanctuary at 9:30 a.m. beginning September 19. MOPS will start this fall by discussing the book, Raising the Curtain on Raising Children. The Mothers will also be making unique and beautiful crafts for their home and to use as gifts. The pre-schoolers, children age birth to age 6 will be involved in their own exciting program called MOPPETS with excellent child care workers.

Rick Smith, an Eastern Nazarene College student will be teaching the teen Sunday school class. Rick is from Pennsylvania and brings a new dynamic and understanding to this class.

Classes for all ages start at 9:45 a.m. with worship service at 10:45 a.m. Pastor Larry Wilson encourages all to visit with us.

Call 749-7614 for information or transportation.

Respect Life Walk Oct. 1

Local participants from St. Mary of the Assumption Parish's Pro-Life Committee will attend the Respect Life Walk in Boston, Oct. 1.

This three-and-a-half mile walk, sponsored by Massachusetts Citizens for Life, benefits 43 organizations in Massachusetts that support pregnant women and children.

If you would like a ride, if you can offer a ride, of for more information, call 925-5323. First aid and sanitary facilities will be available for the walk.

Among the organizations that will benefit from it are Friends of the Unborn of Hull, Por Cristo, Birthright, Democrats for Life and Fr. McDonough's ministry.

LDS family home evening

The September 17 sermon subject at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Hingham, will focus on the Mormon program: Family Home Evening.

Bro. and Sis. Buzz Mormann, members of the congregation, will discuss the purposes and benefits of Home Evening and how it has worked with their family of four. During family night, a council may be held in which parents and children discuss personal goals, plans, and needs to enable the family to grow in unity and love. The principles of the gospel are taught, and activities and refreshments are often enjoyed.

The worship hour begins at 9 a.m. under the direction of Bishop Bradley K. Johnson, and is followed by Sunday School classes for adults, teen-agers and children.

Campaign begins to elect Hussey to state senate

August 27, the Committee to Elect Don Hussey to the State Senate held a rally-fundraiser at Don's home in Hingham. The District includes the Towns of Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, and Weymouth.

Approximately 250 family and friends attended the backyard barbeque overlooking Hingham Bay.

Anyone wishing to join in this effort are encouraged to call 749-5117 or write Committee to Elect Don Hussey, 94 Station Street, Suite 445, Hingham, Ma. 02043.

FOR AN IDEA OF HOW DIRTY YOUR ORIENTAL RUG IS, RUB THIS AND LOOK AT YOUR FINGER.

Oriental rugs are constantly picking up various types of soil. Some are greasy and some are gritty. But they all can eat away at your treasured possession.

For your Oriental rug to retain its beauty and value, it should be cleaned at least once every three to five years.

At Grillo Oriental Rug Cleaning, we carefully examine each rug, then give it the most suitable treatment. Sometimes that means gentle machine-washing, other times it means our 'Art-Safe' hand-washing. And our exclusive equipment and methodology enable us to remove the deep-set grit that others miss.

Furthermore, unlike harsh commercial cleaning, our individualized, museum-quality care is always safe, always effective.

For more information, or to have your rug picked up, call (617) 871-6500. Outside this area code, call 1-800-649-7707.

New owners try new ideas at Children's Exchange

The Scituate Children's Exchange, Inc., a familiar storefront in North Scituate Village, is under new ownership, with a new appearance and some innovative shopping ideas.

Irene Volpe of Cohasset and partner Martha Cook of Scituate bring together a blend of business knowledge and a keen understanding of early childhood. Cook, a former employee of the True Value hardware store in Scituate Harbor, has the retail experience, while Volpe, a former special education teacher in Cohasset, knows what attracts the eye of a child.

Irene Volpe and Martha Cook, the new owners of the Scituate Childrens' exchange, help out a couple of young customers, Jessica and Emily Cann of Cohasset.

(Staff photos/Dave Sullivan)

The Childrens' Exchange has always been and will continue to be a consignment shop for childrens' clothing and infant equipment. That is an important portion of the business, Cook explained.

But in addition, there will be new attractions within the Country Way store. The Childrens' Exchange is the only local dealer of Unicef items, including stationery and cards for all events.

The store is now carrying a line of personalized birth announcement stationery which can be made available to anxious parents in a matter of days.

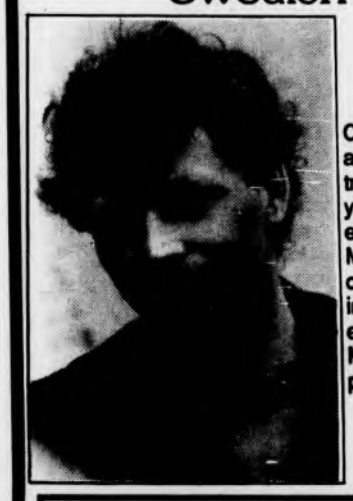
The owners will prepare specialized baby gift baskets for new parents, in colors of blue or pink. The baskets, which will be made up in any price range, include such necessities as infant safety products, cotton blankets, screen printed bottles, toys and booties.

There will be a heavy emphasis on handmade items, Volpe said. And the store will also feature a line of new dancewear.

Personalized gift bags for childrens' birthdays will be created by the store owners specifically for busy parents. "It's just another service we can provide for our customers," Volpe explained.

"It's a whole different place to shop," she said. "There's not another store around here like this."

"We're very serious about the need to recycle," Cook explained. "That's a major reason we got into this business - we're helping to recycle clothes."



In addition, that "recycling" theme will be carried to a community bulletin board inside the store where community news and parent information and services will be available.

What they intend to create is a local business that serves the needs of parents, while providing a comfortable atmosphere for both adult and child.

Health professionals launch fitness corporation

Two health professionals have formed a company that stresses the importance of good nutrition, exercise and healthy living.

But a sense of humor is just as important, they say.

Patricia Messing, a nutrition consultant, and Normandie Nigh, a fitness expert, decided about a year ago to combine their specialities and they formed a complete fitness package. "Fit for Success" is the result of their combined efforts - a program that appeals to a broad scope of people - from career professionals, to athletic coaches to youth groups.

"It started out on an individual basis," Nigh explained. "The company developed simply because of the demand." Corporations are spending more time and money on "employee wellness," she noted, and many company officials, particularly those who follow healthy lifestyles, are increasingly interested in maintaining the health of their employees.

As the former international aerobics manager for Reebok, Nigh, director of the company, is well acquainted with the corporate desire to maintain healthy, productive employees.

"Fit for Success" offers a one-hour presentation for companies and individual organizations. Messing begins their "on-the-road' program with a discussion about healthy eating habits, bringing along special props and a sense of humor. For instance, she demonstrates with an oversized pastrami sandwich that the calories consumed in that meal are equal to four turkey sandwiches. "There's a lot more calories, but not more taste in such a big sandwich," she explained.

"I want to give them useful information so they can make healthy changes in their life," she explained. "But it's important to bring across the message in a fun way, so they leave with a good impression of nutrition and exercise - that it doesn't have to be a drudge to change your lifestyle."

Following Messing's presentation, Nigh brings the crowd to its feet with a few simple stretching exercises and some words of wisdom on the need to stay fit.

Their program has already been presented to Colonial Gas and Dow Chemical, Ocean Spray, Johnson and Johnson, and Haemonetics.

In addition, Nigh is presenting a low impact aerobics show which begins September 19 on Continental Cable. The program will air every Monday and Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. on Channel 53. Nigh hopes to expand the half-hour format to an hour, to include a 30-minute talk show on nutrition with her business partner, Messing.

The nutritionist has also been producing two-minute "Fit Tips" for the local cable station.

The company is expanding its entrepreneural efforts with a weight control and fitness program specifically designed for teens. In addition, Nigh is now involved in creating a youth fitness program designed for kids six to 16 years old.

Bob Devin, vice president of sales and marketing for the young company, is also deeply involved in this effort.

Fitness expert Normandie Nigh and nutritionist Patricia Messing have formed a new company based in Cohasset called, Fit for Success.

"It's something we're spending a great deal of time on," Nigh explained. Her focus will be on school and recreational sport coaches, providing them with ways to train young children for specific athletic programs. The right exercises and stretching movements will lessen the risk of sports injuries, she noted, a fact that is unknown to volunteer coaches in many communities.

Through corporate sponsorships, Fit for Success hopes to bring this message to the schools and to private sports organizations. "We need to get more kids aware of the need to stretch before they participate in sports," she noted. "Basically, it's the same simple five-minute stretch I teach the adults at the conclusion of our health talks."

Their message is simple, yet fun, Messing explained. "We want people to come away with the right information, useful information to change their lifestyle and have fun doing it. Most people aren't interested in making drastic changes in their lives. But we show how they can do it moderately. It won't hurt, and they'll be successful. That's our goal," Messing emphasized, "to show how to live well and have fun doing it."

The offices of Fit for Success are located at 115 Ripley Road in Cohasset Village. The telephone number is 383-2515.

Entries needed for art exhibit

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset is requesting entries for the annual Blue Ribbon Exhibition which runs from October 13 through November 10.

Entries may be dropped off at the art center, Friday, Oct. 6 from 12 to 4 p.m. or Saturday, Oct. 7 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The Blue Ribbon Exhibition offers artist members of the South Shore Art Center the opportunity to enter one work. Both the Bancroft and the Dillon Galleries will house the unjuried exhibit.

Members have the privilege of entering two specifically member-designated exhibits a year: the Blue Ribbon and the Members Exhibit at the Festival held every June on Cohasset Common.

The works range from watercolor, pastel, oil, wood carvings, charcoal drawings, photography and clay to mixed media. Ribbons will be awarded in each category.

For more information, call the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548 weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Choral arts underway

The Harbour Choral Arts Society, comprised of over 80 male and female voices from all over the South Shore, is in its third season.

Ken Clinton, the group's director and founder, noted that new voices are always welcome into the chorus. No auditions are necessary; just a sincere desire to be a part of what many people consider to be a first-rate singing organization.

The fall season will get underway Monday, Sept. 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the Lutheran Church of the Cross, Route 139, near the intersection with Route 53 in Hanover. New members are cordially invited to attend the first session.

This year the group will be preparing a Christmas concert using a wide variety of choral music. Included in this season's concert will be "Alleluia" from the Brazilian Psalm of Jean Berger; "Thous Must Leave the Lowly Dwellings" by Berlioz; "Hodie Christus Natus Est" by Francis Poulenc; "O Magnum Mysterium" by Vittoria; "The Three Kings" by Healey Willan; and the familiar carol, "I Saw Thee Ships." In addition, the concert's main attraction will be "Christmas Cantata" of Daniel Pinkham. Special instrumental and vocal soloists will be featured.

Dramatic club board of directors

The newly-elected board of directors for the Cohasset Dramatic Club are, President, Bonnie Haley, Scituate; vice-president, Ron Massa, Cohasset; secretary, Karin King, Hull; treasurer, Don Freiter; Scituate. Other board members include: Daryl Drake, Belmont; Fran Hanks, Hingham; Don Massa, Cohasset; Gayl Varallo, Cohasset; Joanne Young-Nawn, Cohasset; Thomas Finegan, Scituate; Clark Young, Cohasset; and Sally Rossi-Langer, Scituate.

The scheduled theatrical productions are as follows: The season starts with the musical "The Music Man" by Meredith Wilson. A large cast will be featured in this musical about a con-man in a small midwestern town. The con-man promises the town to rid them of future trouble for the children of River City, by providing them with a real marching band. Of course, they need musical instruments and uniforms etc. etc. etc. . .Little does the con-man suspect that he may be the one being conned!

The winter show, an English farce called, "When We Are Married" by J.B. Priestly, is about a reunion of sorts. Three older married couples unite to celebrate their wedding anniversaries, only to discover that they may or may not be married.

The spring show will be David Mamet's "Glengarry Glen Ross," a dramatic story involving sleazy, real estate men buying properties from little old ladies, and the consequences that follow.

Other activities that the board is organizing includes: playreadings, holiday parties, fund raisers and club nite. If you or someone you know would like to get involved with any aspect of these productions, call Bonnie at 545-6485. The Club always welcomes new members.

Sons of Italy yard sale

The South Shore Lodge #1851 order of Son's of Italy in America, is having a yard sale Saturday, Sept. 23, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Son's of Italy Hall on the corner of Rte. 3A and Kilby Street in Hingham.

Tables are available at $15 each or two for $25. Call Libby at 383-0711 or Barbara at 383-0363.

Republicans to meet

The South Shore Republican Club will open its Fall season on Monday, Sept. 18, at the Norwell Grange Hall on Route 123, corner of Main and South Streets.

At 1 p.m., David Wilson, president of the Plymouth County Republican Club, will speak on the current activities of the club.

A light luncheon will be served at noon with members from Marshfield and Norwell serving as hostesses.

For further information call Pat Buckley (383-0340) or Ruth Hall (545-3777).

Archaeological Society meets

The North River and South Shore Chapters of the Massachusetts Archaeological Society will be sponsoring an hour-long talk at the South Shore Natural Science Center, Jacobs Lane, in Norwell on Monday, Sept. 18, at 7:30 p.m.

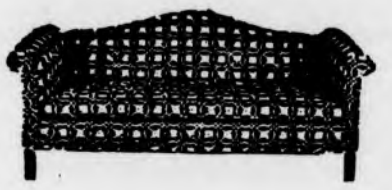
The meeting is open to the public free of charge. Speakers for the evening will be Curtis Hoffman, professor of anthropology at Bridgewater State College, and William Hallaren, a long-time local amateur archaeologist.

The subject of the talk will be on recent excavations at an important prehistoric Indian site on the Taunton River. This site may date from as early as 7,000 B.C.

Open auditions Sept. 18

The North River Community Players will hold open auditions for their next production, "The Nerd," a comedy in two acts by Larry Shue, on Monday, Sept. 18, at the North River Community Club, 513 River St., Norwell, from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

The play calls for four men and two women, ages 30 to 40, and one boy or girl, age 8 to 11. Production is scheduled for the last three weekends in November. For further information please call Ralph Barnes, director, at 878-5188.



Adult children of alcoholics

Screening interviews have begun for a new therapy group for Adult Children of Alcoholics, starting later this month on Wednesday nights in Norwell.

The 16-week, eight-member group is designed for those adults in beginning stages of examining the impact of a parent's alcoholism and grieving the related losses. The group has also been helpful in the past to those people raised by parents who were impaired by dysfunctions or trauma besides alcoholism, such as drug addiction, mental illness, depression, physical or sexual abuse, abandonment and religious fanaticism. Openings are also anticipated in coming months in two long-term, open-ended psychotherapy groups for Adult Children.

All the groups are offered at Centering Psychological Services, 148 Washington St. and facilitated by Rich Elliott, LICSW, who has been leading Adult Children groups since 1983. He can be reached to arrange a screening interview at 982-9004. Many health insurances are accepted.

Due to the intensity of the groups, those with active substance abuse problems or major mental illnesses will not be appropriate at this time.

Historical walking tour

The Cohasset Historical Society's third and final summer walking tour of Cohasset's most historical areas will be held this Sunday, Sept. 17.

The tour begins at the town's ancient "Burying Ground," the Central Cemetery, where walkers will gather at 3 p.m. Here, two and three quarters centuries of the town's history may be seen, starting with the "old slates" of its early settlers. Oldest of the Burying Ground's markers dates from 1705 and is that of Margaret Tower, wife of Cohasset's first arrival, Ibrook Tower of Hingham. From the old slates of Colonial days the original burying ground grew to hold generations of Cohasset families. Near the oldest section are marble and granite stones of later generations, forming a genealogical record of the town's early resident families.

The tour will visit both old and new parts of the cemetery. From there, a bus will depart to carry viewers to Old King Street, a 1670 highway originally planned as the town's "main street." There will be a commentary relating to the early homes and the history of this fascinating "ancient way."

The tour will proceed to Mill Lane, Beechwood, to visit the site of Mordecai Lincoln's early ironworks, one of the first industries in Cohasset. The Turtle Island site on historic Bound Brook has seen a succession of water powered mills beginning in the early 1700's. The iron foundry was followed by grist mills, sawmills and a tannery. The last water powered saw mill of Turtle Island ceased operation in the 1900's, and its foundations still remain visible.

Participants in the walking tour will hear a description of the Turtle Island mills at their original site. Refreshments will be available at the Mill Lane stop.

This Historical Society walking tour begins at the Cohasset Central Cemetery, corner of North Main Street and Joy Place, itself the early "road to the burying ground."

Chamber to host forum

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will host a public forum entitled "Cohasset Schools — The Next Five Years" at Hugo's Restaurant Wednesday, Sept. 20.

Superintendent Steven Hart and school committee members Barbara Bliss and Christopher Ford will answer questions solicited from the public during the last two months. Subjects to be addressed include regionalization, reorganization, administrative personnel and budgets, sports and user fees, teacher tenure, quality of our education now and in the future, computer literacy, and basic educational philosophy.

The program will begin at 6:30 p.m. and is open to the public, free of charge.

For more information on this program, contact the Chamber of Commerce at 383-1010.

Fall courses at art center

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, is offering a course schedule for both the adult and young artist.

Explore the world of art through painting and drawing, clay, printmaking, sculpture or even photography. Courses in all areas are offered at all levels for all ages.

Begin at the beginning with basic skills courses such as Introductory Drawing and Painting taught by David Tandy, or for those who have mastered the basics, try Intermediate and Advanced Watercolor taught by Murray Wentworth.

In the three dimensional studies areas, courses range from Handbuilding and Wheel In Clay To Modelling The Figure In Terra Cotta.

If photography has always been a secret wish to master, begin in the darkroom learning how to develop black and white film with Jim Smalley in Darkroom and Intermediate Photography.

The young artist courses range from learning primary skills at the Kindergarten and first grade levels to more specialized courses for grades 1 to 3 in clay and photography to courses for grades 4 to 6 in creative painting to creative photography.

For those students preparing to continue on to Art School, Susan Rodgerson will teach A Taste Of Art School: Drawing, Design, Painting and Portfolio Preparation.

For a complete list of courses and fall workshops, call 383-9548 weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Wildlife festival Oct. 21

The New England Wildlife Center, located on 19 Fort Hill Street in Hingham, is seeking artisans, crafters, carvers and retailers with wildlife oriented merchanside to exhibit and promote their wares at its First Annual Wildlife Festival October 21 (raindate October 22) from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

This event will feature live animal presentations, environmental organizations and children's activities as well as crafters' displays. We are also looking for performers (clowns, dancers, face painters, etc.) who can work within a wildlife theme.

Interested persons should contact Liz Gorfinkle at the Center, 749-5387, by September 30 to reserve exhibiting or performing space.

Boy scout registration

Registration for Pack 38 Cub Scouts and Troop 28 Boy Scouts will be held Thursday, Sept. 14 and Thursday, Sept. 21 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the Deer Hill School.

Tiger Cub (grade 1) $11.50 for registration and packet; Cub Scout (grade 2-5) $20 registration fee; Boy Scout (grade 6-12) $20 registration fee.

For further information call Earle Bestick at 383-1410 or Linda Farrag at 383-9519.

The first Cub Scout Pack meeting will be Wednesday, Sept. 27 from 7 to 8 p.m. at the Deer Hill School.

Republican club to meet

The South Shore Republican Club will open its fall season Monday, Sept. 18, at the Norwell Grange Hall on Rte. 123, corner of Main and South Streets.

At 1 p.m., David Wilson, president of the Plymouth County Republican Club, will speak on the current activities of the club.

A light luncheon will be served at noon with members from Marshfield and Norwell serving as hostesses.

For further information call Pat Buckley at 383-0304 or Ruth Hall at 545-3777.

Amateur gardeners luncheon

Tuesday, Sept. 19, the first meeting of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will be a luncheon at the South Yarmouth home of Aylsa Goodrich.

Members will meet at 11 a.m. at St. Anthony Church parking lot. Co-hostesses are Sil Trott, Betty Madden, and Dot Lincoln.

Box office sales at the South Shore Music Circus this year benefitted 37 cultural organizations throughout the South Shore. One such group is the South Shore Art Center which recently received a $57.500 donation from the music circus. Participating in the August 27th ceremony were: (left to right) Barbara Mandrell, who was performing at the theatre, Bruce Cameron, president of the South Shore Playhouse Inc., Chris Rifkin, president of the board of directors of the art center, Edward R. Kasses, executive director of the music circus, and Dick Weisberg, vice president of marketing at WNEV-TV, media sponsor of the music circus.

Congratulations!

Cohasset Chamber of Commerce news . . .

September 20, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will hold its Forum on "Cohasset Schools — The Next Five Years." The questions have all been received and passed on to the panel of Steven Hart, Barbara Bliss and Chris Ford. All that remains is for all of you to join us at Hugo's Restaurant at 6:45 on Sept. 20, to hear the answers from the people who decide the fate of our schools.

This may seem like a small matter to some of you, but it is not. With our new tax evaluations coming out, and all of the questions that will surround the issue of taxes and tax revenue in the coming year, one of the most important issues to be considered will be our school budget, and how the money allocated for it will actually be spent.

The majority of questions received by the Chamber of Commerce for this program are directly related to this issue. Administrative costs, regionalization, sports and user fees, teacher training, consolidation of schools, cost per pupil ratios, and the most asked question, administrative salaries. . .all of these issues are directly tied to our tax dollars. As more and more citizens of our community, and the state, become aware of how little we voters and taxpayers have to say about how our school money is actually spent, the more these questions arise and become issues in our community; and the more powerless we begin to feel. As most sociologists will tell you, powerlessness, or the feeling of it, leads ultimately to unrest and anger.

One of the best cures for this feeling might well be information. And that is what we at the Chamber are trying to provide with this program. We in Cohasset need to be informed about what is actually going on with our schools. We need to know not just what is proposed, on paper, for our tax dollars; we need to be kept informed as to what is ultimately done with this money. The proposed budget that we are given at Town Meeting is not cast in stone.

The School Committee may use the money allocated as they choose, in many cases, not just as the budget was presented at Town Meeting. Many other questions submitted to us for this program touched on that issue. Questions about school programs, extracurricular activities, educational goals, standardized testing, computer training and teacher tenure, are questions whose answers could impact greatly on future spending of those dollars that are lumped, on paper, into departmental or administrative budgets or allocations.

All of these questions have merit. And all of the answers that we hear on Sept. 20 could well impact on the quality of our lives and those of our children, for years to come. So please join us on Sept. 20 at Hugo's Restaurant, at 6:45 p.m.

Start to take an interest in your future and the future of your town.

Results: Over the past year and a half Hallmark 100's Scituate and Cohasset Offices have been number one in sales in the combined Cohasset-Scituate marketplace. An expanded Hingham office recently opened at 35 Station St.

Experience: Only fully experienced sales associates are associated with Hallmark 100. The average Hallmark 100 associate has 13 years of experience as a real estate professional.

Independent: Hallmark 100 associates are true independent contractors. They are responsible for their own expenses and they make their own decisions!

Professional: Only salespeople and brokers with outstanding records of professionalism are considered for the Hallmark 100 team.

Integrity: is our "Hallmark". We place a great premium on honesty and we will be honest with you about the value of your home. An overpriced listing hurts our associates, who pay for their own advertising, and it hurts the homeowner whose home gets "stale" on the market and eventually sells for even less than if it had been priced properly from the beginning.

Teaching is still fun, but they worry about future of education

After months of concern about school department cuts and the eventual layoffs of teachers, the head of the Cohasset High School English department says that the atmosphere is good as a new school year begins.

"I wouldn't say that there is a big cloud of negativism at all," said William Kite, a CHS English teacher since the fall of 1975 and English department head since 1979.

"People are getting on with the business at hand — which is teaching," said Kite, 44, a resident of Marshfield. "The atmosphere is good."

But Kite isn't quite as optimistic about the overall outlook for education.

"In the next 10 years, I predict a real crisis in education in general," he said. "In the next five years, there will be a desperate need for new teachers."

Kite said that the average age of teachers in Massachusetts is about 47. When those teachers start retiring, Kite said he doesn't know where the system will find new teachers to take their place.

College students aren't being encouraged to go into teaching, according to Kite. He gives his daughter, Ann, as an example.

We won't be getting very many young people in the profession. We are headed for a shortage.

Bill Kite, English teacher

"My daughter, a high school senior, was interested in going into educations, but she has been advised by a professor not to go into it. He told her, whatever you do, don't major in education, minor in it but major in something else.

"Young vitality is important," Kite said "Our only resource is the young."

His daughter still intends to pursue a career in

Selectmen name drug committee

Selectmen this week appointed nine members to the newly-formed commission on drug and alcohol abuse. Their first meeting is scheduled for September 26.

In addition to the nine members, all of whom submitted their names for nomination, selectmen appointed three ex-officio members and seven "resource" people with experience and expertise in the area of substance abuse.

The residents who were named to the commission on drug and alcohol abuse are: Patricia Baird, Wigmore Pierson, Atty. Richard Lee Bugley, Bob Whittaker, Keith Knowles, Jack Golden, Sarah Pease, Rita Strong and Priscilla Tebbetts.

The ex-officio non-voting members of the commission will be Police Chief Joseph Kealey, health board member Michael Sullivan, and Michael Gill, head of the school health education program.

Resource people who will be available to help commission members when requested include: Terry Duggan from the recreation commission, Patrolman William Oliver, Richard J. Quinland, Dr. Robert Williams, Bart Winn, a former police officer, Meg Coogan, Mary Oliver, a psycho-therapist at Lifeskills Healing Arts Center.

Two weeks ago, Selectman Martha Gjesteby suggested a commission be formed to look into the Safety concerns because of fewer buses, more walkers

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Getting to school shouldn't be hazardous to your health, but parents of Osgood School students worry that their children may be at risk.

Last spring, Cohasset residents defeated an override article to replace Cohasset's aging school bus fleet, despite an increase in the school age population. That action reduced Osgood from six buses and two mini-vans to four buses and one mini- van.

As a result, students in kindergarten through grade three are walking farther and sitting three in a seat. Parents say that youngsters are walking distances of up to one mile on streets with heavy traffic and no barriers between the sidewalk and the road. Most bus riders are no longer being picked up in front of their homes, but must walk to central "depots" to be picked up and dropped off. Some depots are as far as one-half mile from the home.

School officials are not required by law to provide bus service to children living within two miles of school. Superintendent Stephen Hart says elementary children are not being made to walk more than one-half to six-tenths of a mile.

As concerned as they are now, parents wonder what it will be like when the sun goes down early and the snowbanks are piled up all around.

The Parent Student Organization has had volunteer monitors riding the buses to assist drivers in making sure that the children get on and off the buses safely. Other mothers have supervised children at the bus depots to ensure safety. Still others are planning to serve as crossing guards.

Parents have nothing but praise for school and safety officials who have gone out of their way to make the transportation system as safe as possible given the limited bus capacity.

Supt. Hart has already shifted stops on some routes to increase safety. The police department will be vigilant about keeping cars from blocking sidewalks and forcing youngsters to walk out into the street.

Plans are also under way for the Highway Department to paint solid yellow lines between the road way and sidewalks, and to trim overhanging shrubbery. But ultimately safety is in the hands of the person behind the wheel.

PSO representative Rhonda Myers has been monitoring bus riders and walkers since school started. She expressed concern about how close to the capacity limit many of the buses are.

School bus capacity is 71 seated on three of the buses and 65 on the remaining full-size bus. That figure is based on three children per seat. Myers thinks that may not be reasonable or safe when children are

The news is good as students receive high scores in national test program

The Cohasset School Committee got a report card on last year's second, fifth, and tenth graders from the Educational Records Bureau, and the news was good.

In virtually every area tested by the aptitude and achievement tests, Cohasset students tested at a level at or above that of private schools and similar suburban schools. Areas of deficiency were statistically insignificant.

The school system opted to participate in the testing program to get a better assessment of the strengths and weaknesses in their program. The ERB is a more difficult test than most standardized achievement tests. "The state assessment test is not very useful to us. This is our tool for evaluating the effectiveness of our program," said committee member Kidder.

Participation in the program is based on meeting certain criteria. Scores are compared with other affluent suburban schools and private schools. This is Cohasset's second year using the testing service.

Kidder pointed out that Cohasset is not only doing a superior job of educating its students, but is doing it for a cost only two percent above the state average per pupil and lower than 40 percent of the school districts across the state.

Meanwhile, the combined efforts of staff, bus drivers, and parents were credited for a successful opening day this year.

While some bugs are still being worked out of the transportation system, Superintendent Stephen Hart reported that the first few days went off relatively smoothly, despite problems with an increased number of students and a decline in the number of buses.

"Everybody got into school and everybody got home. We didn't lose anyone," he said.

Supt. Hart did express a concern about overcrowding at the elementary level, particularly at Osgood School.

"We only have one empty classroom, but it's being used for our art and music program," Supt. Hart said. "And we have no cafeteria and an inadequate gym."

The possibility of a future realignment of grade levels was raised. The most likely configuration would turn

License given to restaurant

Although already in operation, the Aegean Fare was granted a common victualler's license by selectmen at their Tuesday night meeting.

Owner Michael Vallas has been operating the restaurant in Cohasset Village for the past two weeks without a license. It was only after Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt ate at the restaurant that he recalled the owner had never applied to the board for a license necessary to sell food at the establishment.

Vallas told selectmen when he received his health department approval, he asked the health agent if there were any more licenses he needed to obtain. Vallis said he was assured that was the only license required by the town.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle noted that Vallas, a Cohasset resident, has previously operated five or six restaurants, and that he "should know better" than to presume he didn't need a common victualler's license. Vallas noted that license requirements vary from town to town, but he apologized to selectmen for his oversight.

Robert Davenport of Sohier Street noted the town does not have any forms which outline the specific licenses an applicant must obtain and what boards must approve the application. "There should be forms telling people what to do. If you go to the board of health first, they may not always notify the other departments," he told the board.

Vallas told selectmen he has received approval from the fire department, the health department and the wiring and plumbing departments.

"People get confused with this permitting process," Selectman Burt Pratt noted, saying that the executive secretary should establish a written procedure for future license applicants.

The board unanimously granted the license.

Vallas requested that the license specify his hours of operation from 6 a.m. to midnight seven days a week. Selectman Rocco Laugelle wondered whether Vallas would actually operate those hours, but Selectman Diana Kornet objected to his question.

"There is nothing that says he has to be open those hours," she noted.

Vallas said he would prefer the times be specified so he would not have to return in the future if he wanted to extend the business hours.

The board voted unanimously to grant the license with the specific hours requested by the restaurant owner.

Clarification

In last week's edition of the Cohasset Mariner, it was stated that selectmen approved a request last year from Hugo's Restaurant to use the Government Island parking lot for overflow parking.

Although Paul Logue, owner of the restaurant, made the request last year, selectmen denied permission. Logue was scheduled to appear at last week's selectmen's meeting to review his suggested improvements for the parking problems along Border Street, but he was unable to attend.

Several residents of Border Street and Parker Avenue attended the meeting to voice their concerns about the parking situation in their neighborhood.

Tax bills by Oct. 27

The Cohasset Board of Assessors plans to have tax bills in the hands of property owners by October 27, 1989 for payment by November 27.

Success hinges on the actions of residents at Town Meeting and on the State Department of Revenue, according to the assessors. The tax rate cannot be set until the town decides on a final budget figure.

"We cannot send out even estimated tax bills until we have those numbers," said Chairman Jim Lagrotteria.

The Department of Revenue must certify and approve the tax figures before final bills can be sent. Preliminary figures sent to the Department show a total valuation of $950 million and new growth of $9 million.

Assessors are putting the tax levy on a fast track to avoid any further borrowing by the town. Currently available funds will run out in November.

Revaluation has increased traffic in the small second floor office dramatically. Some residents have spent hours poring over the ledger comparing their valuation against their neighbors'.

No action on appeals or abatements can be taken until final bills have been issued. Taxes are due and payable in spite of appeals. If a taxpayer prevails, a rebate would be made.

Not everyone has been displeased by an increase in valuation. Home equity loans are tied to valuation. The higher the valuation, the greater the amount that can be borrowed.

Assessors cancelled the September 28, meeting. They plan to meet again the night after town meeting to process the final figures for submission to the Department of Revenue.

Cohasset's week

Building inspector delays

Selectmen delayed the appointment of a building inspector when a candidate considered to be the most qualified withdrew his name because he refused to be interviewed in public.

Selectman Chairman Burt Pratt called the withdrawal, "most unfortunate," and noted that the candidate withdrew his name, despite pleadings by the executive secretary and himself to reconsider.

Last week, selectmen interviewed three candidates for the position in public session. They explained that a fourth candidate did not want to be interviewed before the media for fear he would lose his current employment. Selectmen said they would check with town counsel before deciding whether the state open meeting law could prevent them from interviewing the candidate in closed session.

According to a published report in Saturday's issue of The Patriot Ledger, selectmen interviewed the candidate in closed session last Wednesday without a legal quorum present at any time throughout the interview. An attorney for the Massachusetts Newspaper Publishers Assn. was quoted in the newspaper as saying the meeting was a violation of the open meeting law.

Selectman Pratt said the newspaper article prompted the candidate to withdraw his name from consideration, and that his employer found out that he had applied for the Cohasset position. However, the newspaper article did not specify the candidate's name, his current position, or the town where he is currently employed.

"It's unfortunate," Pratt said Tuesday night. "He was very qualified - he was at the top of 47 candidates. Greg (Doyon, selectmen's executive secretary) and I pleaded with him, but he withdrew because of that article. He was bothered by it." Pratt also noted that when the candidate's employer found out about the job interview, he offered the man additional job incentives to stay, which the employee accepted.

He asked Selectman Martha Gjesteby if she was correctly quoted in the article in which she stated that she was bothered by the closed interview session. Gjesteby denied she was bothered by the process.

Pratt also noted that Gjesteby told the candidate he would have to submit to a public interview before the board made its selection.

"That's the reason we do not have a prime applicant tonight," he charged.

Executive Secretary Doyon will review the list of leading candidates for the position and will make a second recommendation to selectmen, perhaps as early as next week's meeting.

Center receives licenses

Selectmen granted permission to the Community Center of Cohasset to hold its annual flea market fundraiser on Cohasset Common.

The event will be held September 30 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. In case of rain, the community center was granted permission to hold the event the following Saturday, October 7.

The community center was also granted one-day liquor licenses for the following dates: October 21 for the Chamber of Commerce auction; October 28 for the Call Fireman's Ball, and November 4 for the PSO Monte Carlo Night.

Selectman Burt Pratt objected to the licenses after he questioned community center director Judy Volungis about the profit gained from the liquor sale receipts. Volungis explained that the community center receives the liquor receipts while the individual organization gets the proceeds from ticket sales.

"The community center should not be in the liquor business. That's the way I have always stood on this issue," Pratt responded.

Cohasset students get good test grades . . .

Osgood into a kindergarten, first, and second grade facility. Grades three through six would be housed at Deer Hill School.

In other business, The Friends of Cohasset Sports turned over a check in the amount of $6,300 from the Crosby and Nash benefit concert.

This is the first installment in a $20,000 pledge to be used to keep athletic user fees at $50 per student per sport this year.

The new user fees haven't kept students from going out for fall sports. According to Superintendent Hart, athletic participation is up 20 per cent.

The high school is trying to get its Senior to Senior program off and flying.

Mary Ellen Gallagher, principal of the high school, is working with Kathy Bryanton and Dr. Alwin Merrill of the Council on Aging to coordinate the program which will match high school seniors with senior citizens for companionship and assistance with light chores.

The school also hopes to draw seniors into the classrooms to share their experience and expertise with students.

Pat Baird, president of the Parent Student Organization, told the committee that they were working on the Stop and Shop Apple Computer project. The PSO hopes to get all the residents of Cohasset, including the 5,000 families with no children in public schools, to turn in their Stop and Shop register tapes.

Tapes can be exchanged for computer equipment and software depending on the dollar value represented. "I won't settle for anything less than twenty Apples," said Baird.

Collection boxes are being placed at the community center, the schools, and businesses. Other ways of parting residents from register tapes are being brainstormed by PSO members under the direction of Janice Crowley.

In other business:

• Cynthia Lees was appointed instructor of instrumental music at Deer Hill School. Lees, a graduate from the University of Massachusett's music education program, was chosen from a field of 30 candidates. Lees was lauded by university faculty as the most outstanding student in the program, according to Superintendent Hart.

• Gina Brown was appointed to a position as cafeteria worker.

• Kathleen Ridge will be the new junior varsity field hockey coach.

• Members of the girl's soccer team will be allowed to travel to Martha's Vineyard for a game on a date to be announced.

• The following student representatives to the school committee were introduced: Anna Sandell, Sophie Redfield, Michelle Hartley, Tovin Haynes, and Greg Nourie.

The committee also met in executive session to discuss collective bargaining issues.

Parents worried about safety . . .

bundled into parkas and snowpants.

"What happens when the bus has to take a sharp corner or stop suddenly," she asked. Myers also noted that school buses do not have seat belts to restrain children in their seats.

Cohasset is under the limit only because many mothers are driving their children so they don't have to ride on crowded buses. Myers asks, "what happens if they can't continue? And what if new children move into town?"

Supt. Hart says that the capacity limits can be maintained, although the buses will have to make more than one trip in order to accomplish that.

All parties agreed that the ride may be a little too long for kindergarten students who have been falling asleep on the ride home. But if push comes to shove, the parents and administration say they need another first grade teacher and an art teacher before they need another bus.

The increase in walkers and parental transportation also means more pedestrian and vehicular traffic.

Because children of this age group are famous for darting into streets without looking both ways, the PSO is trying to institute a pick-up and drop off traffic pattern that would keep children from having to cross streets or busy parking lots. They are also asking residents to avoid the streets around Osgood School between the hours of 8:30 to 9 a.m. and 2:45 to 3:30.

"These aren't the days when you could walk two miles to school on a rural road and only see three cars," says Myers. "It only takes one guy backing out of his driveway fast or zooming down Sohier because he's late for work. We want residents to be extra careful out there."

Selectmen name drug, alcohol committee . . .

problems of drug and alcohol abuse on a local level. Since that time, several residents have contacted individual selectmen stating their willingness to volunteer on the commission.

Although selectmen Burt Pratt and Rocco Laugelle thought a 12-member board would be "too unwieldy," Selectmen Gjesteby, Diana Kornet and Ned Tebbetts argued that everyone who expressed an interest to volunteer should be placed on the commission.

"This is a big problem. I don't like to turn away people who have volunteered for a committee," said Kornet, who recalled a citizens' committee of more than 24 residents who studied the need for a health education curriculum in the schools.

Selectmen also specified that the commission should return by December 1 with a report on their findings. They also noted that anyone who would like to attend the public meetings of the commission are invited, and could provide the members with additional resources and information.

Selectmen extended their gratitude to Mr. and Mrs. Leo Fiori of Schofield Road for their donation of $1,000 to the committee. The donations, in $10 increments, will come from the proceeds of Fiori's Exxon service station located at the corner of Rte. 3A and Beechwood Street.

In addition, the school was notified that it will receive a $3,108 state grant from the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs for the local K-12 alcohol and drug education course.

More articles on Oct. 10 warrant

Two articles have been added to the October 10 special town meeting warrant.

Selectmen have postponed a decision whether to support article 10 in the warrant which will request that voters "amend line items of the budget adopted for the 1990 fiscal year under Article 4 by increasing or decreasing the amounts in the Fire Department salary and expense accounts.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt noted that selectmen cannot make a decision regarding this article until after impact negotiations with the fire department are completed.

Selectmen and the fire department union have been re-negotiating their new three-year contract following the override defeat which would require severe cuts in the budget. The greatest savings within the fire department would be in overtime costs but with a minimum manning clause in the contract, the only way that budget can be reduced now is through impact negotiations.

Article 17 in the warrant requests that the town "raise and appropriate, transfer from available funds or borrow money to pay the costs of engineering and design and development services for a new town cemetery."

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon explained that the article, which was approved by town counsel, allows the town to appropriate $44,000 from the Sale of Lots account or borrow the estimated $50,000 for the project with the principal and interest to be paid from that Sale of Lots account. "This article would be the borrowing authorization," he said, noting that the previous article requests that the town rescind its previous approval for the project.

Plans for a new town cemetery were temporarily shelved after the $50,000 appropriation for the project was defeated in the override election. Although voters decided at town meeting to go ahead with the project, they later refused permission to raise taxes to complete the project.

Since that time, the chairman of the cemetery study committee, Glenn Pratt, has talked with the town accountant and treasurer, and a $44,000 account was found from the sale of cemetery lots. Executive Secretary Doyon explained that the $44,000 account could be used for the capital project, as long as town meeting gave its authorization.

Doyon explained that the town accountant and town treasurer knew about the account, and suggested that the money could be used for the project. It is normally used for improvements to the cemetery, such as road paving and expansion of the cemetery.

He emphasized that voters would not be voting to raise taxes if they approved this article. It is simply giving voters another option, he said.

"If town meeting does not vote to rescind their appropriation, the town fathers have every right to go forward. But we are giving voters the opportunity to rescind that authority and take alternative action under article 17," Doyon said. "It provides us with an opportunity to appropriate the money from the sale of lots account, or pay for the principal and interest if we borrow."

Selectmen voted unanimously to support the alternative article 17.

Arts lottery deadline is Oct. 6

The deadline for the next distribution cycle of the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council is October 6.

Cohasset's allocation of funds from the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council is $1,694 for Arts Lottery and $312 for PASS.

Applications for grants are available at the Selectmen's office at Town Hall. Completed applications should be returned to the Selectmen's office, or to Karin Bartow, Chairman, 48 Sohier Street.

Arts Lottery funds support individuals or organizations dedicated to the arts and humanities. Funds may also be awarded to non-profit, tax-exempt organizations or public agencies whose purpose does not include the arts if they embark on an arts activity. Applications from public agencies, such as a public school, library or municipality, must demonstrate a new need, be a one-time expenditure, and be matched by other funds one-to-one. Projects must demonstrate benefit to the local community.

Funding is also distributed under the PASS (Performing Arts Student Series) program. The purpose of this program is to fund tickets to peforming arts events for public school children at the regular ticket price, or $5, whichever is less. Schools may buy tickets from participating arts organizations and then apply to the Cohasset arts Lottery Council for reimbursement. PASS rosters are available in each of the three Cohasset schools, or contact Council member Penny Redfield, 383-9286.

For further information or questions, call Karin Bartow at 383-0572.

Teachers happy to teach despite cloud of cuts education, he said.

"She will have a tough time," said Kite, who also noted stricter state requirements planned for people going into education.

"They are making it so difficult," he said. "It will take years for people to recoup the cost of their education. We won't be getting very many young people in the profession. We are headed for a shortage."

Things weren't quite as difficult for Kite when he decided to become a teacher. He grew up in upper state New York, and attended private schools.

"I got an excellent education, but I saw things happen which were very rigid," said Kite. I was idealistic and I thought I could learn about teaching and see if I could change it. Students should be allowed to express themselves along with learning the curriculum."

He earned a BA degree from New York State University in Albany where he also received a master of arts degree in literature. Then he taught for four years in a private boarding school in New York.

Kite moved form New York to Massachusetts when he decided to study at Harvard Graduate School for his EDM degree in education. After receiving his degree, he applied at school systems in the area.

"I loved the South Shore, and I found an opening in Cohasset," he said. "It wasn't easy getting a job then, there weren't many positions open. But there were more than today."

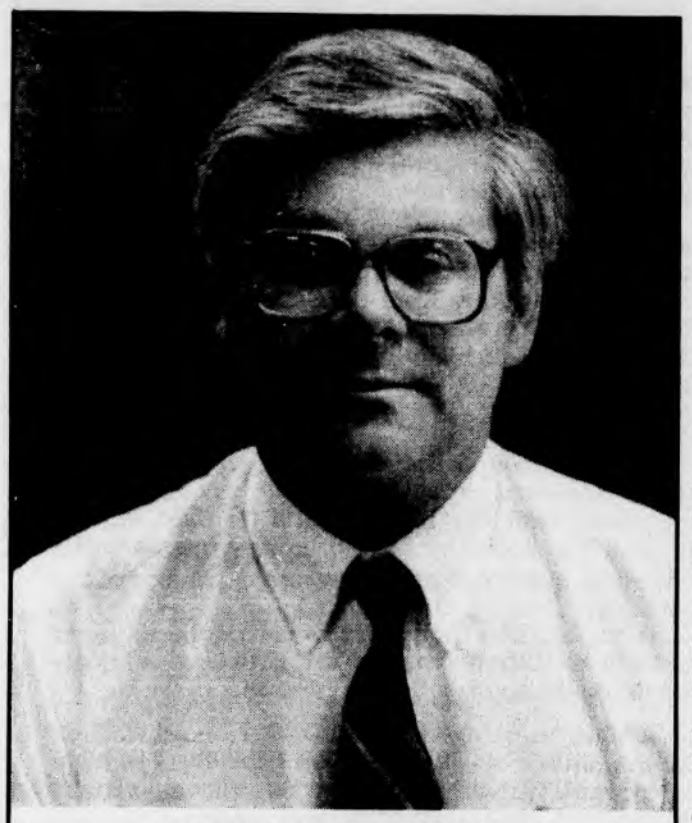
When he first came to Cohasset, he taught social studies, English and reading.

"I was given a great deal of freedom to develop a reading program," said Kite. "I enjoyed it very much. It was exciting."

Since then, he has taught every course in the English department at least once in grades 7 to 12

"That has allowed me to bring in new materials, maybe work in a team relationship, learn a different approach," he said.

The blending of three approaches to teaching is a strength of the Cohasset schools, according to Kite. He explained that grades 7 and 8 are taught in traditional ways, grades 9 and 10, with team teachers, and the upper grades with elective programs.



"Students get more choice," he said. "We blend in skills anyway. The program is very diverse.

"I'm constantly wearing new hats. I have no problems coming up with new ideas."

For example, Kite has developed a writing lab proposal using several Apple Macintosh computers networked to several printers. An English teacher would be available to oversee and work with the students on their projects.

Financing, however, can be a problem, said Kite.

"I submit a budget in November, and it is initially approved in December or January," he explained. "Usually part of it is reduced. Many times we go through several cycles of reductions.

English teacher Bill Kite

"You have to change your scale of priority. But we still manage. We have five word processers in the department for students and staff."

Kite is not unaware of tight fiscal situations which show no signs of improving.

"We all have had the fear that what we have built will be eroded," said Kite. "From my point of view, most of our programs are intact. I'm not afraid of what might come. Anything can happen, but we'll just do the best we can."

Kite has seen many changes during his career at Cohasset High School. For example, the student body has shrunk from 960 to 480 students.

"There has been a very real decline in enrollment," he said. "And the staff has been reduced as well. There were 13 people in the English department, now there are nine. Most of the positions were lost because of retirements, but in 1984-1985 there were layoffs."

There has also been a decline in the respect afforded to teachers, according to Kite, not just in Cohasset but beyond. In fact, his brother decided against a teaching career for that reason after six months in a school outside Boston.

"When I was a student in school, you didn't question authority," said Kite. "If I did something, I was the one to blame. Now, the actual authority of the teacher has been reduced. Kids don't feel they owe allegiance to their teachers — or to their parents.

"There is a crisis of trust. There are more people now who distrust the civil service role, and that's scarey to me. Anyone who tries to perform a social service role is held up to scrutiny.

"A lot of people believe that education is fat. They don't look at the job as paid by the hour. They say we are paid for 183 days, but I would gladly work 250 days.

"Because people are educated by teachers, they feel they have the knowledge to be critics. If anyone doesn't think teaching is difficult, they should come into the classroom for 40 minutes and try to hold the class's attention.

"Everybody works very hard. You aren't assembling a product for sale. You are educating young people to the best of your ability. That is only assessed over a long period of time. It's not like being a mason. There is a certain abstraction to the teaching process.

"Education itself never discourages me, but funding for it discourages me. People get what they pay for. If the financial situation doesn't straighten out, we are going to lose teachers to other parts of the country.

"One of the reasons that I came here was because this part of the country has been the best in education. But that status can be changed."

Kite said that Cohasset has been very supportive of education.

"I feel privileged to work here because of that," he said. "We have fared well, and been treated very fairly."

Kite said that if he had it all to do over again, he would still become a teacher. "What brings me back is the students," he said. "When you see how important it is to be there. . ."

In addition to teaching curriculum to students, Kite tries to "take students out over their head and let them sink or swim, but with support."

"I try to temper that with being as open as I can, and honest, and allow room for opinions, as well as to be consistent and fair," he said. "Students want to be educated. That's one of the terrific things about teaching.

"I try to get across a belief in themselves, that they have the ability to take on any project if they put their mind to it. They will have the ability to succeed with a project. I try to get them to trust their own judgement. Kids are very hungry for good examples.

"In my youth, there always was a wall between teachers and students, and that was wrong. Students should be able to express themselves.

"I want my kids to rise above me, to give me a better response than I've even thought of.

"We have come through a lot of hard times," said Kite, "but this is still a good environment in which to teach. It always could be better. But sometimes we fail to realize how lucky we are."

New fees for recycling transfer station

Cohasset's new Recycling-Transfer Facility (RTF) will open soon. The Board of Health has established a new fee structure to cover the costs of hauling to the SEMASS waste-to-energy plant in Rochester. These rates become effective once the RTF is operational.

FEE SCHEDULE

Commercial haulers, $50/ton; business and residential, vans, trailers and pickups, $20/load; 1/2 ton vehicles and up, $30/load.

(Rate for other than typical household refuse. Residents should be prepared to pay this rate when disposing of refuse from large scale cleaning of basements, attics, etc.) Appliances, $10/each; tires, passenger without rim, $.75/each; passenger with rim, $2/each; truck (17 in. up) without rim, $5/each; truck (17 in.up) with rim not taken.

Materials which will not be accepted by SEMASS and therefore not accepted at the transfer facility are: hazardous wastes, motor vehicle parts, agricultural farm equipment, marine vehicles, large casting equipment, rolls of carpeting more than twelve inches in diameter, fencing, wood in excess of four feet in length and two inches in diameter, cables, wires, etc.; non-burnable debris such as bricks, steel and concrete. Contractor construction debris is still not accepted. Brush may not be disposed at this time.

Use of the recycling area of the RTF is encouraged and allows for disposal of some of the items not accepted by SEMASS: metal wires, cables and fencing go in the metal pile. Some motor vehicle parts approved by the supervisor may be disposed. Newspaper, aluminum, cleaned glass, bottles and cans for deposit all have separate disposal areas.

The RTF will be open Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 7:30 a.m to 3:30 p.m.

Payment in advance will be accepted at the Board of Health offices, or checks payable to the Town of Cohasset can be rendered at the time of disposal to the landfill supervisor. Call the Board of Health for further information at 383-9900.

around town

□ Cohasset resident, Patricia G. Facey, was recently elected to serve on the Board of Directors of the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts. She will serve for the next two years as Vice President of Voter Service and Executive Director of the Scharfman Fund for the 70 year old statewide organization.

Facey has been active in the Cohasset League as President and a Specialist in Natural Resources and State Government. She has also served the state league as Voters Service Chair and V.P., Communications. A Smith graduate, she has also done much volunteer work for the town. She is presently a member of the Cohasset Structure of Government committee, and has been chairperson of the Cohasset Planning Board and the Massachusetts Foundation for Humanities and Public Policy. Facey has also served as member of the Cohasset Advisory Board and the Capital Budget Committee.

□ Congratulations go to Fran Muncey this week. Fran graduated from Wentworth Institute with a Bachelor in Mechanics English. He is working in Watertown for the US Army material testing.

□ Be sure to think of the Aegean Fare the next time you are looking for a new place to eat. It just opened recently, is located at 15 South Main Street (right in the Village), and is wonderful. They serve Greek entrees and pastries, sandwiches, subs and pizzas. The hours are 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. with takout service available. It is owned by Ted Vallas, whose family has lived in Cohasset for 20 years. Every lunchtime looks really busy, but service was grand when we were there.

□ Registration is now taking place for a "One Day Only" Cheering Clinic. This clinic is for girls in grades 4, 5 and 6. The Cohasset High Cheerleaders will be teaching cheers, chants, jumps, leaps and pyramids. The cost for this clinic is $15.00, with all proceeds going towards cheering sweaters and skirts. Each participant will receive a special cheerleading pin from participating in this clinic. If you are interested, contact Cheerleading coach Ruthann Sargent at 545-3058. Sign up early to insure yourself a spot!

Kate and Sarah deLima begin rehearsals for "Follies," a production of That New Theatre in Norwell which opens September 28 at the Cushing Center in Norwell. Both veterans performers have starring roles in the production.

□ The Cohasset High Cheerleaders would like to send out a special thanks to Bob Morgan for donating "Tretorn" sneakers to the whole cheerleading squad.

□ Happy Anniversary to Helen and Al Livingston.

□ Congratulations to Teim Brister and Julie Smith, Greg Steves and Katie Medinger, Kevin Gentile and Kathy Smith, and Gregory Boyne and Liz Corcoran, all winners of the Cohasset Recreation Department's New England Lawn Tennis Association sponsored tennis tournament.

□ Happy Anniversary to Ruth and Carlton Pratt.

□ Amy E. Hobbs was one of the lucky recipients of the Pilgrim Arena Scholarships, selected from over 70 applicants. She won by showing high academic ratings, excellent recommendations and participation in a wide range of extracurricular activities. Amy is attending Duke University.

□ Another September anniversary that will be celebrated is that of Muriel and Frank Wheelwright. Congratulations.

□ Happy birthday to Dot Lincoln.

□ The Cheerleading Clinic that was mentioned previously will take place on Monday, October 30 at the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gym from 3 to 5:30 p.m.

□ As you may know, it is the 75th anniversary of Stop and Shop, and as a thank you they are awarding computers (Apple) in return for pink Stop and Shop receipts. We all know how much money is spent up there, and the PSO is taking advantage of this great offer by saving the pink tapes (receipts). Save them to give your student, or your PSO representative. It is a great opportunity for Cohasset School Systems. Our schools have signed up to get Apple 11C Mono, $70,000 in tapes are needed, Apple 11C Color, $85,000 in tapes; MacIntosh Plus, $125,000l; Apple 11E Color, $125,000; Apple 11GS Color, $160,000; Imagewriter, $45,000; 5.25" Disc Drive, $25,000; selection of software, $20,000. All you do is donate your tapes, P.S.O. will do the rest. Save your receipts! Call Pat Baird at 383-6997.

□ Don't forget the Cohasset Community Bloodmobile that will be held September 26 from 2 to 7 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House.

For further information contact Chairman Alfred Odermatt, 383-1283 or 878-3854 or coordinator Corinne Cahill at 383-9265.

□ Happy anniversary to Roberta and Arthur Lehr.

□ If you have a small serviceable refrigerator, you can be of help to the Osgood School. Call Irene Colwill at 383-6117.

□ Finally, grand news from the Chatterton household. Our daughter Kim and her husband John became parents of a baby girl last week, on Sept. 11th. Kelsie Blair Litchfield is her name and she is beautiful (what else would a grandmother say) and we all love her. So, Kim is a mother, Clark and I are grandparents, and Mimi is a great-grandmother! John's Mom, Marge Litchfield, is bursting with pride too, as is John's grandmother, "Nana." Can you imagine how spoiled Kelsie will be with all of those relatives to dote on her?? Many generations will be on hand to do their share!

Fall course schedule at community center

Registrations are now being taken for many of Cohasset Community Center's fall course offering.

Pre-Schoolers:

Kodaly Music classes are available for children ages 12 months-3 years. Classes meet on Tuesday and Wednesday mornings for eight- week sessions. Tiny Tot Chef teaches rudimentary cooking skills and kitchen safety to children ages 3-5. Classes meet Wednesday from 9 to 10 a.m. for eight-week sessions. A special Parent and Tot Playgroup for Toddlers ages 24-36 months and an accompanying parent will meet on Mondays from 1 to 2:30 p.m. for eight weeks. Small children will enjoy crafts, free play, music, stories and making new friends.

Schoolchildren & Teens:

Judo lessons are new this fall for kids ages 7-16. Judo teaches self-discipline in a gentle way and also serves as an excellent fitness program. Class will be held on Saturday from 10:30 a.m. to noon. The first ten-week session starts October 16.

Children ages 6-8 will enjoy Cooking for Kids on Thursday from 4 to 5:30 p.m. Kids learn to follow simple recipes, review kitchen safety rules, and eat what they prepare. Each session is eight weeks.

4-H Babysitting Course is available to kids ages 10 and over who would like a background in the care and safety of young children. Class is held on Wednesday from 3:30 to 5 p.m. for four weeks beginning October 5.

SAT Preparation courses in English and Math will be given at Cohasset High School beginning the first week in October for five weeks. Classes are held from 7 to 9 p.m. with English on Monday and Wednesday and Math on Tuesday. Ingenue Charm Course offers girls ages 9-14 lessons in developing self-confidence, grooming, poise, wardrobe, exercise, and personality awareness. Class meets on Thursday from 4 to 5:30 p.m. for six weeks beginning October 5.

Health and Fitness:

Aerobics classes are held daily: Monday-Saturday 8:45 to 10 a.m., Sunday 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. and Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 8:15 p.m. The Wednesday morning class focuses on Body Sculpting: developing muscle tone through use of weights and large rubber bands. Sign up monthly for as many classes as you wish.

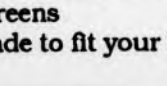
Fresh Start with Normandie Nigh is a program for people who want to start exercising but don't know where to begin, as well as people currently working out who want to get the most from their program. This eight-week course meets Wednesday from noon to 1 p.m.

Tai Chi for Beginners or Intermediates meets on Wednesday evenings for ten-week sessions. Upcoming Health and Fitness workshops include "The Food-Fitness Connection" Wednesday, September 27 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. and "Eat Smart for a Healthy Heart," Wednesday, October 11 from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

Adults Courses:

Getting Smart about Investing will meet on Monday from 7:30 to 9 p.m. for eight weeks beginning October 2. This course offers a complete overview of investment issues.

Assertiveness Training with Dr. Helene Lieb teaches assertiveness skills through group exercises. Class will meet on Monday from 7:30 to 9 p.m. for eight weeks beginning October 2.



Craft teachers for senior center

The Cohasset Council on Aging is looking for talented people who would be interested in teaching either a one-day workshop or several week-long courses for the fall/winter education courses.

Someone to teach tatting, needlework, wood crafts, ornament, cooking specialty items, using a microwave to advantage, anything of interest. The class could be held morning, afternoon, and the person teaching would be paid a fee (they would set the price). This might be a fun way for anyone to earn a few extra dollars.

The class could be a one-day workshop or it could run for 10 weeks. The next sessions start as follows: Fall 10/2 to 12/8; Winter, 1/9 to 3/17; Spring, 4/3 to 6/9.

If you are interested in any of the above, please contact the COA office at 383-9112.

Precious freedom

Freedom of expression remains as unpopular today as in the 18th century.

Since the Supreme Court ruled 5-4 in June that burning the American flag in protest may be a form of free expression protected under the First Amendment, the popular outcry has been loud and long.

Last week, the US House of Representatives voted overwhelmingly (380-38) to approve a law imposing fines and prison terms on those who desecrate the Stars and Stripes.

President Bush wants to go one step further and propose amending the Constitution to outlaw flag-burning.

A local veterans' group, echoing the view of former soldiers around the country, expressed "outrage" at the decision and called the court's majority "un-American."

But the right to express one's opinion, however unpopular, is one of the precious freedoms that make the United States great.

The brave men and women who sacrificed their lives for their country were not fighting for the American flag per se, but for the ideals Old Glory represents. Their heroism is not diminished merely because someone torches the flag.

The high court did not endorse flag-burning. The justices said, in effect, that citizens are permitted to say what they think, a right protected by the First Amendment of the Constitution.

We in the United States are among the fortunate few in a free-thinking society.

Institutionalized freedom of expression remains a radical idea from the 18th-century Enlightenment. The political ideals of the Enlightenment are still practiced almost nowhere on Earth two centuries after they were embodied in the Constitution.

Frenchmen like Voltaire and Montesquieu; Englishmen like Locke and Hobbes; and Americans like Jefferson and Franklin espoused ideas that are at odds with daily practice in most countries.

Perhaps torturing prisoners to obtain confessions is uncivilized and ought not be done, they reasoned (for this was the Age of Reason). Perhaps government repression of dissidents and religious minorities is wrong.

Perhaps people should be allowed to say and write what they think, even if it contradicts the party line.

These ideas still have not taken hold in China, for example, where the government massacres untold numbers of its own people and then denies it happened; nor in Iran, where members of the Baha'i faith are butchered mercilessly; nor in South Africa, El Salvador and Cuba, to say nothing of the twin horrors of Stalinist Russia and Nazi Germany.

In fact, only a very few peoples in the history of the world have enjoyed the freedoms we Americans sometimes take for granted.

A majority on the Supreme Court recognized the danger inherent in restricting any form of expression – even one as offensive as burning the flag.

They realized that to jeopardize the freedom of one – even a flag-burner – is to jeopardize the freedom of all.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, Supreme Court justice from 1902 to 1932, wrote, "But if there is any principle of the Constitution that more imperatively calls for attachment than any other, it is the principle of free thought – not free thought for those who agree with us, but freedom for those whose thought we hate."

People should be accurately informed

Letters

To the Editor:

A letter from Jane Simmerman published Sept. 14 alleges that there is no safe level of radiation, and distorts a statement from the National Council on Radiation Protection in support of her allegation.

Mankind always has lived in a sea of ionizing radiation from natural sources, including radon. There is no evidence that such amounts are harmful, and there is considerable evidence that it may even be essential to life. In some areas of the world the background level is very high, without any evidence of harm. In any case, the nuclear power cycle adds a tiny fraction of ionizing radiation to what we get in any case from natural background. And what we get from natural background is complemented by an almost equal amount that the average person receives from medical and dental radiography. So fear of radiation from nuclear energy is illogical.

The releases from nuclear power plants are easily detected and monitored because radiation monitors are very sensitive. The radiation exposure from the Three Mile Island accident subjected its neighbors to about the same increase in radiation as if they had moved to Colorado for a month, where the natural background is somewhat higher than in the TMI area.

Ms. Simmerman claims that the public hears only the statements from the utility industry. I suggest that the public tends to hear only the nonsense recycled ad naseum by the opponents of nuclear energy. Those who wish to be informed from an objective and competent source should consult a report prepared by the National Academy of Sciences entitled "The Biological Effects of Ionizing Radiation." Another valuable source is a report by the Council on Scientific Affairs of the American Medical Association entitled "Medical Perspective on Nuclear Power."

Council on Aging grateful for budget

To the Editor:

In last week's edition of the Cohasset Mariner an article on the Cohasset Council on Aging Annual Meeting indicated that the Council was going to fight for additional funding. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

While we had to settle for less money than we had requested in our original budget, we are very grateful to the Selectmen for the amount that was allocated after the final election in June.

We wish also, to acknowledge at this time, the continued support we have received from the Selectmen, Advisory Board, and the numerous other Town Boards who have been so generous in their support of the Council.

We also should acknowledge the many fine articles on the growth of the Council on Aging that your paper has covered.

Respectfully,
T. Gerard Keating

Supreme Court created in 1789

By Mila Bates Dixon
Mariner staff

Two hundred years ago Sept. 24, President George Washington appointed the members of the first U.S. Supreme Court. Two days later, all were confirmed by the Senate on voice votes.

Comprising the new court were Chief Justice John Jay, 44, of New York who had been Secretary of Foreign Affairs and the following associate justices: Scituate's native son, William Cushing, 57, who was chief justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court, and three founding fathers, John Rutledge, 55, of South Carolina, James Wilson, 47, of Pennsylvania and John Blair Jr., 58, of Virginia.

Of the five, Justice Cushing served the longest, 21 years.

Already a distinguished jurist when the Crown appointed him chief justice of the Supreme Judicial Court, he continued as chief justice after the Revolution, serving until President Washington nominated him for appointment to the infant nation's highest court.

Justice Cushing was born in Scituate March 1, 1732, the great-great-grandson of Matthew Cushing who with his wife, Nazreth (Pitcher) came from England to Boston in August 1638 and later settled in Hingham with their five children.

Their youngest son, John, was to become the founder of the Scituate Cushing family of distinguished statesmen, judges, lawyers, teachers and patriots.

In 1656, John, then 29, married Sarah Hawkes of Hingham. Six years later they moved to Scituate and settled in the Belle Neck farmhouse purchased from William Vassall who had moved from Greenbush to Barbados in the Caribbean.

A plaque honoring Supreme Court Justice William Cushing stands on Route 3A, Scituate, north of P.J.'s Restaurant.

John Cushing served as a Scituate selectman for many years, as a deputy from Scituate to the Plymouth Colony Court, appointed by the Crown's governor, and a few years later as an associate of the Plymouth Court and finally as assistant to this court, serving with the governor until 1692 when the Plymouth and Bay Colonies were joined to become Massachusetts Bay Colony.

John's oldest son of the same name was born at the Belle Neck house in 1662. When he was 40, he was appointed chief justice of the Superior Court of Common Pleas for Plymouth County.

He also served from 1710 to 1728 as a member of the Provincial Council which advised the British governor. He retired at age 71.

This Judge Cushing also had a son named John, born July 17, 1695, at the Belle Neck farmhouse. When he was 26, he was a member of the provincial legislature (council) from Scituate and later became judge of probate for Plymouth County.

Like his father, he became a judge of the Superior Court of Common Pleas, serving from 1747 until he resigned in 1772 at the age of 77. He returned to Scituate where he died in 1786 at the age of 91.

The third John Cushing was the father of William who was also born at the Belle Neck farmhouse. He was prepared for Harvard by Richard Fitzgerald, the town's Latin schoolmaster, and was graduated from Harvard when he was 19.

Following graduation, he taught grammar school in Roxbury for a year before beginning the study of law with Jeremy Gridley, a Boston lawyer.

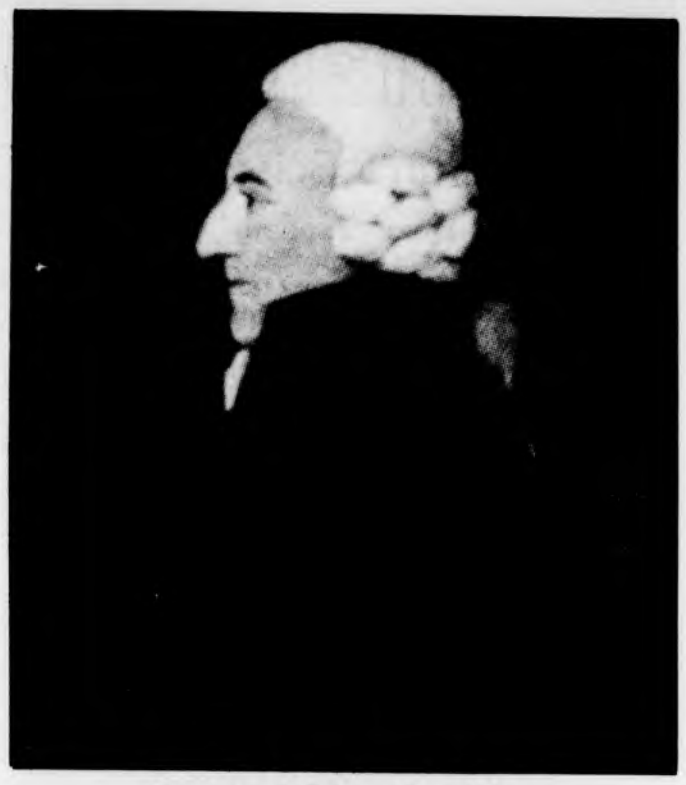
Cushing became a barrister in August 1762 and began his practice in Scituate. Soon afterward, he moved to Pownalborough, now Dresden, in Maine which was a territorial part of the Province of Massachusetts.

While there, Cushing was made a judge of probate for the newly created Lincoln County under an appointment from the royal governor of the Province of Massachusetts.

When his father, Justice John Cushing resigned from the Superior Court of Common Pleas for Plymouth County, his son William was appointed in 1772 to succeed him.

When the Crown reorganized the courts in 1775, John Adams became chief justice of the Supreme Judicial Court and Cushing, a justice.

Of all the members of this court, Justice Cushing was the only one known to be a patriot who remained; the others all left the court, most of them Tories who fled to Canada. When Adams resigned in 1776, Cushing became chief justice.



Twice during his term on the Supreme Judicial Court bench, he was importuned to run for governor of Massachusetts but declined both times.

He did agree, however, to accept his election in 1787 by his Scituate neighbors to serve at the Massachusetts Convention, meeting to adopt the new federal Constitution.

Cushing was elected vice president of the Convention but was called on to serve as president most of the session because of the illness of the president, John Hancock.

On Feb. 6, 1788, Massachusetts became the fifth state to ratify the Constitution. On March 4, 1789, the new Constitution went into effect.

After it went into effect, Chief Justice Cushing agreed to run for the office of elector from Massachusetts to vote for President and Vice President.

Justice William Cushing

His vote helped Massachusetts cast its 10 votes for George Washington for President and John Adams for Vice President.

Before leaving Massachusetts' high court to become an associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, Chief Justice Cushing in one of his last decisions upheld the Massachusetts Constitution abolishing slavery in the state.

After the Supreme Court was organized with John Jay as chief justice and Cushing one of the associate justices, the chief justice was away frequently and Cushing presided.

When Chief Justice Jay in 1795 resigned at age 49 to become governor of New York, President Washington asked Justice Cushing to be chief justice.

Cushing, however, declined because of ill health. He continued to serve on the bench for another 15 years until his death Sept. 10, 1810. He was 78.

He is buried in the family tomb on Belle Neck, once accessible by Old Country Way over the so-called Rotten Marsh to the North River.

The site, now accessible from Neal Gate Street, which runs between Routes 3A and 123, is atop a hill dominated by beautiful old trees; the tomb is surrounded by an old dry stonewall.

The burial plot itself is about 80 feet square. The tomb is almost in the center, and in front of it is a four-foot-square granite monument about six feet tall, topped by a pyramid-shaped capstone. On the face of the monument is one word: CUSHING.

Formerly owned by the Scituate Historical Society, the deed to the property was given to the state Sept. 10, 1955, the 145th anniversary of the jurist's death. Accepting the deed for the commonwealth at a special ceremony was Lt. Gov. Sumner Whittier.

Historians have called William Cushing "the most important man in the transitional period" when the 13 British colonies were becoming a new nation.

Natural science center fall offerings . . .

Enjoy the changing seasons with a canoe trip, a van tour to view the foliage, or a trip to search for migrating birds with naturalists from the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell.

FALL MIGRATIONS

Join master birds Bev and Myron Litchfield, Sunday, Oct. 1, 8:30 a.m.-noon, as they explore the coastline from Cohasset to Marshfield in search of shore birds, egrets, warblers, hawks, and other land and ocean migrants. Members/$4. Non-members/$6. You will visit a number of excellent birding locations. Meet at the Stop & Shop parking lot, Route 3A in Cohasset. Call the Science Center (617) 659-2559 for registration information.

MOVEMENT IN NATURE

This unique, 10-week program for children ages 6-8 years allows them to explore and develop their own special powers of creative self-expression, Mondays, Oct. 2, 16, 23, 30, Nov. 6, 13, 20, 27, Dec. 4, 11, from 3:45 to 4:45 p.m. Members/$75. Non-members/$90 per 10-week session. Dance instructor/performer/naturalist Alice Hibberd will help the children explore many facets of nature, including shape, force, space, time, and rhythm. They will express actions and patterns in nature, such as impressions of animals stalking, flowers blooming, and snowflakes falling. Animal specimens, live animals, taped music, and instruments will be used when appropriate. Children should dress in loose, comfortable clothing and sneakers. They must be 6 by Jan. 1, 1990. Call the Science Center (617) 659-2559 for registration details.

Scouting registration Sept. 21

Registration for Scouts will be held Thursday, Sept. 21 at the Deer Hill School at 7:30 p.m.

Tiger Cubs (1st grade) registration fee is $11.50; Cub Scouts (2nd-5th grade) is $20; and Boy Scouts (6th-12 grade) is $20.

There will be a Cub Scout Pack meeting September 27 from 7 to 8 p.m. at the Deer Hill School.

For further information, call Carol Bestick at 383-1410 or Linda Farrag at 383-9519.

Ladies in business meeting

New England Ladies in Business, 3 Brook Street in Cohasset, will hold its first meeting of the new season, Tuesday, Sept. 26 at 6:30 p.m. at Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant in Cohasset.

New members are welcome.

For reservations, call 383-2679 (days), or 834-6408 (evenings).

Summer museums still open

The Cohasset Historical Society's two summer museums at Cohasset Center will complete their 1989 summer seasons Saturday, Sept. 30. The Capt. John Wilson House and the Maritime Museum, both on Elm Street, currently are open each afternoon except Mondays, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

The Capt. Wilson House, an 1810 sea captain's home, contains an extensive collection of home furnishings, furniture, kitchenware, toys and artworks collected by the Historical Society from other old homes of the town. The house itself has the ambience of an early 19th century home and never has been "modernized." Here, one may see china and stoneware, early kitchen utensils, a Shaker washing machine, a hunting crossbow indigenous to the house, and many other items preserved from the town's past. Featured in a bedroom is a unique "corner clock," or grandfather's clock built into the corner of the room. 19th century Cohasset paintings adorn the walls of the Wilson House, showing scenes of the town from an age long past.

Adjacent on Elm Street, the Historical Society's Maritime Museum contains collections of memorabilia from the town's seafaring past. During the 18th and 19th centuries Cohasset was a fishing and shipbuilding community whose young men went to sea at an early age. Often they were numbered among the crews of the town's fishing fleets as well as the large mercantile vessels listing Boston as their home port. Some went on to become Masters and owners of vessels. The Maritime Museum's collections include models of 19th century sailing vessels, artifacts from the mackerel schooner fleets, shipwreck relics, carvings, navigational equipment, charts, paintings and prints relating to Cohasset's "Age of Sail." The story of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse is illustrated with artifacts and pictures.

Also on view is a collection of general historical from old Cohasset. Included are collections of stone tools of the early Indians, housewright's tools, a cordwainer's desk and tools, a school desk dated from the early 1700's, and an exhibit of apothecary's items from the 19th century.

These and many other unique historical items are on view at the Maritime Museum. Admission to the Society's buildings is $1.50 per building for adults.

Needlepoint classes to begin

Learn the art of Needlepoint on Fridays from 10 a.m. to noon. This class meets for eight weeks beginning October 6. A workshop in Cut-and-Pierced Lampshades will be held on Saturday, Oct. 14, from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Take home a beautiful finished lampshade.

To register or for further information, call the Cohaset Community Center at 383-0088.

Classes at community center

Cohasset Community Center will offer Judo lessons to children and adults this fall.

Judo is an ancient Japanese martial art. It teaches self-defense through self-discipline and control. Judo means "the gentle way" — there is no hitting, kicking or other aggressive moves involved. Judo is also an excellent way to stay in shape.

Paul Marchant has been involved in Judo since childhood. He has competed internationally, garnering medals and trophies form all over the world. He had his own Judo studio in Surrey, England and is a member of the British Judo Association.

Judo lessons will be held Saturdays for ten week sessions beginning Octover 16. Boys and Girls ages 7-16 years will meet from 10:30 a.m. to noon. Men and Women age 16 and older will meet from noon to 1:30 p.m. The cost is $60.

For further information, call Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088.

Flea market Sept. 30

Cohasset Community Center will sponsor a flea market on Cohasset Common Saturday, Sept. 30 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

There will be a selection of treasures: bric-a-brac, clothing, furniture, household items, and more. Items for sale in past flea markets have included childrens' toys, salesmens samples, and a brass bed.

Anyone can rent a table at the flea market. Scour the basement, attic or entire home for saleable items.

All renters' fees of $25 per table will be donated to the Cohasset Community Center Building Fund.

For further information call 383-0088.

Bird seed sale

The Science Center's first birdseed sale of the season will take place in mid-October. Reasonable prices on a variety of your fathered friends' favorite seeds. All orders must be prepaid by cash, check or credit card. Ordering deadline is Friday, Oct. 6, 4 p.m. Pickup days: Saturday, Oct. 14, 9 a.m.-4 p.m. and Sunday, Oct. 15, noon-4 p.m. Call the Science Center (617) 659-2559 for an order blank or more information or to order by credit card only, (617) 659-2559 or 659-7525.

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than one mile from the Route 3 interchange. Hours: 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Monday through Saturday; 1-4 p.m., Sunday and Columbus Day, Monday, Oct. 9. All programs require preregistration. Call (617) 659-2559 or drop by the Center for a complete list of autumn activities.

Cohasset book sale this week

The annual book sale of the Friends of the Cohasset Library will be held September 22 and 23, Friday and Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Thousands of used books for adults and children are available.

The Friends of the Cohasset Library, Anne Costello, President, are conducting the sale as a fundraiser for the library. All proceeds of the sale will be used to support library services.

LAST CHANCE; The (Fifty-Five) Alive/Mature Driving Course

Don't miss out! A new kind of driving course is being offered to all Cohasset Drivers 55 and older. This is a classroom, two (2) days, Sept. 20 and 27 for four hours each day of good instructions that will help you refine your driving skills and help develop safe defensive driving techniques. 55 ALIVE will teach preventive measures to use when you need them the most. How many years has it been since you have had a driving course? The Cohasset COA and A.A.R.P. will co-sponsor this very important program on Wednesday, September 20 and 27. 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. with lunch time break. The cost is $7 for the two-day course.

SPECIAL—USING YOUR MICROWAVE OVEN AT HOME—

You will enjoy using your microwave oven once you learn how to use it! You first must learn how to use it and also what you need to know in new ways of quick food preparation techniques. How much and how long does it take? Join us on September 28 at 1 p.m., when Cecilia Hanrahan will demonstrate quick and easy ways to use your big or small microwave ovens. Fast-fun recipes included.

AFS program schedule

Saturday, Sept. 23 at 4:30 p.m. there will be a potluck picnic at the First Parish House at Cohasset Common to officially welcome home Kristin Martin and Michele Rourke from their summer exchanges abroad and to welcome Carole Biaggi, our AFS student from Switzerland. Carol is living with the Richard Rourke family for the school year. The public is invited. Call 383-1654 for more information.

Thursday, Sept. 28, at 7:30 p., there will be an informational meeting for high school students and their parents who are interested in learning more about AFS Intercultural Exchange Programs. The meeting will take place at Cohasset High School. Applications are already being accepted for the 1990 summer programs and for the 1990-1991 year abroad programs.

AFS offers a number of foreign exchange opportunities for students age 15-19. A number of changes in the application process this year make the AFS exchange programs particularly attractive. Summer programs include the traditional homestay in one of 40 countries, a language study program, cultural study excavating artifacts and restoring medieval castles, work study in the United Kingdom, and an outdoor skills program with cave exploration, mountain climbing and kayaking in Australia and New Zealand. The academic year abroad program offers a unique opportunity for students to develop language skills as well as unique personal goals in one of 60 countries, including the Soviet Union.

For more information call Judy Dwyer at 383-1654.

Pat Tolini, chairman of The Friends of Cohasset School Sports, Inc., presented a check to Nancy Sandell of the school committee from the proceeds raised by a concert given by Crosby and Nash at the music circus. Participating in the ceremonies at this week's school committee meeting were: Supt. Stephen Hart, Larry Shultz, junior high school coach, along with four varsity athletes, Sophie Redfield, Anna Sandell, Robin Haynes, and Gregg Nourie.

Early release Sept. 21

September 21 will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools.

There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Junior/Senior High School, 12 p.m.; Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m.; Joseph Osgood School, 12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schools and food service will be available at the Junior/Senior High School.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff to review curriculum and prepare for accreditation.

Artist-of-the-month meeting

Parents interested in helping with the volunteer "Artist of the Month" art enrichment program are invited to an organizational meeting on Thursday, Sept. 28 at 9 a.m. in the Deer Hill Art Room.

The program is scheduled to begin Wednesday, Oct. 4 with the fourth grade classes only if volunteers are available to conduct it. Without volunteer support of only one and a half to six hours per year the program is unable to continue.

If you would like to participate but are unavailable to attend the meeting, September 28, please call Lee Jenkins at 383-0024.

High school fall musical

The music department is producing an All-School-Musical this fall - "Bye, Bye Birdie". Auditions are currently concluding for CHS students grades 7-12. Rehearsals will begin September 25. Performance dates are scheduled for November 9, 10 and 11.

School open house

Mark your calendars for the following open house dates:

Joseph Osgood School - October 3; Deerhill School - Sept. 28; Jr./Sr. High School - Oct. 4.

The Open House is an opportunity for parents to meet the teachers and visit their children's classroom.

Computer giveaway program

1989 marks Stop & Shop's 75th anniversary and they are celebrating a history of community service by offering Apple Computers, printers and educational software to our schools in exchange for cash register receipts from Stop & Shop.

Boxes to deposit cash register receipts are located at the Community Center, Senior Citizen Housing on Elm Street and each of the three schools.

Receipts are being collected on a school wide basis to benefit the entire system. So start saving those register receipts.

Cohasset's season opener at East Bridgewater

Staff photos by Joe Pitta

Cohasset cheerleaders did their best to encourage their team last Saturday.

Season's opener becomes a spoiler

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

East Bridgewater's Andy Dias scored 18 points in the first quarter and the Vikings never looked back, spoiling Cohasset's season football opener, 27-6, September 16.

Cohasset (0-1) could not stop Dias, who finished with 141 yards rushing in front of the home fans.

The lone Skipper touchdown came when Pat Conroy caught a 32-yard pass from quarterback Mike Ellinger, starting his first varsity game in place of the injured Noah Hill, who fractured his leg and is sidelined for at least six weeks, to make the score 18-6. However, the two-point conversion was picked off, then returned 102 yards by Brian McManus for a safety.

McManus added a 20-yard TD run in the fourth quarter to finish off the scoring.

"They (EB) simply outgunned us in the first quarter," said Cohasset head coach Phil Pisano.

"At the start of the second period, we made some adjustments on defense and, without a doubt, played much better for the rest of the game. If you wipe out the first quarter, we played them evenly for the final 30 minutes."

On Cohasset's 50-yard scoring drive, Curt Ludlow ran a successful sweep for eight yards, while Conroy contributed with two inside running plays (seven yards) to set up the 35-yard touchdown reception. Ludlow was involved with the pass pattern when he applied a downfield block, to whom Pisano referred to as a "textbook play," allowing Conroy to get into the end zone.

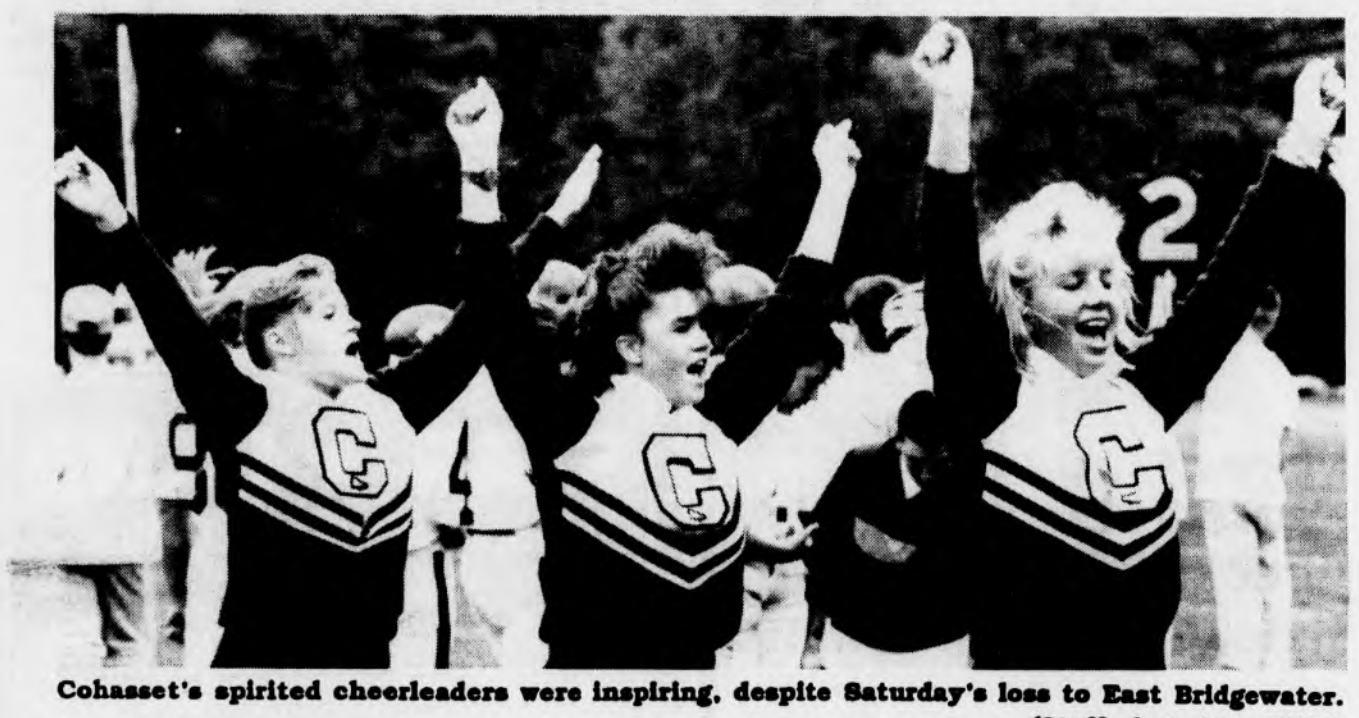
"We need some work on our special team coverage. We gave them good field position because of our inability to concentrate on kickoff and point coverage," said Pisano.

Dave Farrag had two interceptions for Cohasset. Other defensive standouts for the Skippers included Sean McCarthy, Joel Whitman and Conroy.

"Hopefully, with our improvement after the first quarter, we can grow on that and carry it over for the entire season," said Pisano.

The Skippers will travel to Haverhill this Saturday to face Whittier Tech. The game will be played in the morning (11 a.m.).

BOYS' SOCCER



Forward Jim Reidy netted four goals to lead Cohasset past Carver, 6-2 in South Shore League boys' soccer action September 16.

Linc Marsac added a pair of goals and three assists for the Skippers (1-1) while goalie Joel Reidy made 13 saves. Kurt Saunders and Bill Jones each scored for Carver (3-1).

GIRLS' FIELD HOCKEY

Laura Smart and Barbara Lagrotteria each scored three goals and Liz Deveney scored twice, leading Cohasset (1-1) to its 10-0 SSL field hockey victory over Norton September 15.

Cilla Goff had a goal and two assists and Marueen Long also scored for the Skippers, who put more than 30 shots on net. Smart also had two assists.

Cohasset's spirited cheerleaders were inspiring, despite Saturday's loss to East Bridgewater. (Staff photo/Joe Pitta)

Sentate candidate hosts a barbeque

State Senate candidate Don Hussey attended the Republican candidates meeting September 9, to meet with the ward, city, and town chairmen from across the state.

Also in attendance were the potential candidates for Gov. Lt. Governor, Attorney General, Secretary of State, and Treasurer.

Monday, Sept. 11, Hussey, a candidate for State Senate from the Norfolk-Plymouth District, was present at the Special Town Meeting held in Scituate. Hussey also attended the Duxbury Town Meeting the same evening. "People in both towns were quite upset with the lack of funds to support their schools", said Hussey.

Hussey attended a Region Five Republican meeting September 12 at the Bay Pointe Country Club in Wareham. The meeting was chaired by Polly Logan, regional director, and Tom Valle, regional field coordinator.

This meeting was held to introduce potential candidates and to discuss issues relative to the convention in 1990.

He also attended a gathering of Republican Leaders in Massachusetts September 10 at the home of Julie and Ted Guild in Cohasset. The guest speaker was William Weld, a candidate for Governor.

This week, Hussey travelled to Washington, D.C. for meetings with top Republican Leaders to discuss issues here in Massachusetts and to garner support for his bid for the State Senate from the Norfolk-Plymouth District.

He will be hosting a campaign barbecue at the home of Carol and Edward Lunt at 363 Lincoln Street in Duxbury, Saturday, Sept. 23 from 1 to 5 p.m.

Anyone interested in attending, call Hussey campaign headquarters at 749-5117.

Cohasset worship . . .

St. Mary's prayer group

A Respect Life Committee, which will focus on sponsoring prayer meetings, is forming in St. Mary of the Assumption Parish.

The first meeting, which will include benediction and evening prayer, will be at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Sept. 25 at St. Ann's Church. The prayer meeting will last about 30 minutes.

After the prayer service, an organizational meeting to formulate the Respect Life Committee's other goals will be held in the parish hall. One immediate goal would be to send a group of walkers to the Respect Life Walk that will be held in Boston Oct. 1

Other goals could be helping to support groups that work to support unwed mothers or the elderly.

The group's main goal is to foster, through prayer, a respect for the sanctity of life. The group plans to meet once a month, more if people want.

Also, the new fall Mass schedule is in effect. Weekend Masses are held at 4:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday mornings at 7, 9 and 11 a.m. Masses are also held at 9 a.m., preceded by the Rosary at 8:30 a.m., Mondays through Saturdays. All services are held at St. Ann's Church.

Program of faith at St. Paul's

"Crossroads", a Program of Inquiry into the Catholic faith will be sponsored by St. Paul's Parish in Hingham.

The program is designed to help people discern a call to experience Christ within the community of the Church. Inactive Catholics who want to take a new look at the Catholic faith, or people from other churches interested in exploring and learning about today's Catholic Church in a warm and welcoming environment are invited to come and listen.

The program, also designed for anyone who has not been baptized or has not been fully initiated in the Catholic Church with Eucharist and Confirmation, is based on the ancient Church Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults (RCIA).

The meetings will be held in St. Paul's coffee shop, located at 147 North Street in Hingham each Thursday at 7:30 p.m. beginning October 5. The program is open to anyone residing on the South Shore.

No reservations are necessary, but if you have any questions, you can reach Fr. John Reardon at 749-0587, or Edie Scott at 749-3995. Babysitting and Transportation can be supplied.

Obeying civic laws

The Latter-day Saint has an obligation to "obey the laws of the land, and to uphold, sustain, and support constitutional laws and wise leaders". Br. Tom LeCorchick, member of the Stake High Council, will discuss the responsibilities of Mormons to seek after the best in civic government both locally and nationally that the laws they must live by are just and proper.

Meetings at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Hingham, begin at 9 a.m. and continue with classes for all ages until noon. Local LDS bishop is Bradley K. Johnson of Hanover.

St. Anthony's Parish

Rev. John J. Keohane, Pastor, Rectory, 383-0219; Jean Lennon, Coordinator of Religious Education, Office: 383-0630, Tuesdays and Fridays 9 a.m. to noon, Kathleen Keyes, Organist, 545-5058.

SUNDAY MASSES: 7, 9:30, 11:30 a.m., SATURDAY: 5 p.m.
DAILY MASS: 7 a.m., SATURDAY: 8 a.m. followed by Novena & Rosary
SACRAMENT OF RECONCILIATION: Saturday from 4:15 to 4:45 p.m.
BANNS OF MARRIAGE: Danielle Eisenhauer - William Peterson; Nancy Tavener - Bruce Carpenter; Bob Gunville - Linda Thetonia.
COUNCIL ON AGING: Volunteers are needed on the first Tuesday of each month to help serve luncheon. Please call Rose Kierce at 383-0578.
BLOODMOBILE: Tuesday, Sept. 26, 2 to 7 p.m. at the First Parish House, 23 N. Main Street. Please GIVE THE GIFT OF LIFE. There is currently a severe blood shortage. Babysitting and transportation are available. Call Carol Riley, 383-6215 or Corinne Cahill, 383-9265.
CHRISTMAS VILLAGE FAIR: Can you make an outfit for a 13" doll? We have patterns — or you may use your own ideas.

Also needed: empty thread spools (any size or material) and guest size soaps.

For pick up please call June Simeone at 383-1545.
THIRD ANNUAL RESPECT LIFE! 5K Walk: October 1 (rain or shine) Boston Common (corner of Beacon Street and Charles Street) Registration: 1 p.m., starting time: 2 p.m. Please call Judy Fitzsimmons for information: 383-0567. Sponsor sheets available.
A FEAST FOR ALL REASONS The 10th Annual Meeting of the Quincy Crisis Center will be held on Friday, Sept. 22, at Broad Cove Ballroom in Hingham. Gourmet dinner at 8 p.m. $10. Call Judy Fitzsimmons, 383-0567.

Mormon conference for women

Mormon women of America will be able to see and hear the annual conference for women with a live broadcast (via satellite) from Temple Square in Salt Lake City. The conference may be viewed locally at the LDS chapel, 379 Gardner St. in So. Hingham, starting at 7:45 p.m. this Saturday (Sept. 23).

The public is welcome to attend.

Second Parish services

Minister: Gary A. Ritts, Office Phone: 383-0345; Secretary: Muriel Wheelwright, Parsonage Phone: 383-1422. Office Hours: Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to noon.

ALL-CHURCH ANNUAL CHICKEN BAR-B-QUE (in honor of our new comers of 1989): Sunday, Sept. 24, 3 p.m. at the Sailing Club (Bates Hall in case of rain). Sign up and tickets available at coffee hour beginning this Sunday!
NEW MEMBER SUNDAY Oct. 1. Call or speak with Rev. Ritts by Sept. 17 if you wish to become a church member.
CHILDREN'S CHOIR DIRECTOR BEING SOUGHT: Under the direction of the Christian Education Committee and in consultation with music director, Robert Leavitt, the person will work with our elementary age children. Committee to interview soon. Call or send resume to: Children's Choir Search Committee, care of the church office. Hopes are for this new program to begin in October.
YOUTH DIRECTOR-search committee has now interviewed three candidates and will begin second-round interviews this coming week. Members of the committee include John Campbell, Suzi Coley, Liz Martin, Craig Muir, Bryan Shultz, Matt Silvia, Brooke Anderson, Judy and Gary Ritts.
WORK DAY FOR SECOND CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH - WITH SOUTH SHORE HABITAT FOR HUMANITY at a home in Marshfield - Saturday, Oct. 21. Crew of 8 or so needed. We may also serve the following Saturday if we can muster the enthusiasm. "A family of seven - mother, father and five children ranging in age from nine years to 18 months — lives in this colonial-style home. Although structurally sound, the house needs major exterior renovations to the roof, siding and window casings. On the inside, major plumbing work will be necessary, along with replacement of many floors, walls, ceilings and insulation.
QUINCY CRISIS CENTER NEEDS FULL-TIME SECRETARY — (due to the state cutbacks, their secretarial support has been withdrawn). The position calls for basic clerical skills and a gentle/supportive personality to work with and share in Esther Sanger's significant ministry. Call the church office or the Crisis Center if interested.
FOR THE COMING WEEK: Sunday, Sept. 24: 10 a.m., Worship Service, Children in Church, Teacher Consecration, 3 p.m., Chicken Bar-B-Que.

Beechwood Church program

The Beechwood Congregational Church School invites all neighborhood children in grades K-8 to the annual pancake breakfast and Sunday School registration, to be held September 24.

The Sunday School provides basic Christian education and is open to all children regardless of denomination. Come join the fun and bring your parents and friends at 9 a.m. September 24.

Space is available in the choir. Rehearsals are Wednesdays at 7:30 p.m., or Sundays at 9:30 a.m.

The Harvest Supper & Auction will be held October 5 at 6:30 p.m. The dinner will be followed by an auction of harvest goods, baked goods, decorations etc.

For reservations call 545-1315. Tickets $6.99 children $3.50.

Hawaii travels set

Three nature centers from the South Shore and Cape Cod are planning a tour to Hawaii, Nov. 7-21.

Participating in the fifteen-day adventure is the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell, the Green Briar Nature Center, Sandwich, and the Cape Cod Museum of Natural History, Brewster.

The four islands to be explored are Oahu, Maui, the Big Island of Hawaii and Kauai. Each island has vast diffferences in geology and vegetation. From rain forests, coral reefs to active volcanoes, this isolated archipelago located 2400 miles from California has ever changing landscape. Approximately ninety-five percent of the plant and animal life are found nowhere else on earth. Hawaiian nature guides will accompany the travelers to key areas. According to the trip coordinator, Gwen Ferrini, the itinerary has been balanced to accommodate all levels of interest in nature.

Registration for the tour is open to the public. Space will be limited. Inquiries should be made promptly. For further information contact Gwen Ferrini, 80 First Parish Road, Scituate, 02066 or call (617) 545-3535.

THIS SMALL CAPE
Article #3

The objective of this two story family room addition was to create a large, comfortable living area for family gatherings and entertaining, as well as space for a master bedroom suite. The family room (26' x 16') is attached to the left side of the main house and is set back approximately one foot in a Captain's Cottage architectural style. This was done to incorporate the original house into the overall new design rather than to have the addition appear overpowering.

The new family room features:

- Plenty of windows including a Bay window to create a bright and open living environment and to highlight the scenic private lot.
- Wainscotting of vertical pine boards gives a warm country feeling while the off-white finish of the ceiling and walls lend a light and spacious effect.
- French doors leading to the Sunroom, can be left open during the warm weather months to create an even larger and brighter living space.
- Full basement for additional storage or future recreation room.

This addition has on its second level a Master Bedroom Suite which features a master bath; a large wall-to-wall closet and custom storage areas; cathedral ceilings and a custom bench seat located below a triple window gable dormer overlooking the rolling front lawn and tree-topped views.

Our next article will discuss Sunrooms and Farmer's Porches.

Citizens donate to town drug abuse committee

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The Fiori's always wanted to be more involved in their hometown. They sponsor Little League and youth basketball teams every year.

But town government was just a topic of conversation, an easy exchange with the people who have passed through their service station during the last 35 years.

"It seems we talk a lot about the issues, but we never really got involved," Robert Fiori explained.

Bob, his father, Leo, and brother, Leo Jr., own the Exxon station on the corner of Beechwood Street and the state highway. The two boys were born and brought up in Cohasset - products of the school system and graduates of the high school.

It wasn't until Mrs. Fiori read about the formation of a drug and alcohol abuse committee that her husband and sons decided this was the way they could help out their town.

"About two weeks ago my mother read about the new committee. We were looking for a cause, I guess, and this seemed about the best way we could help out," Bob said. The station owners approached selectmen and said they would like to donate at least $1,000 to help with the committee's work. Perhaps it could be used to finance a townwide survey on drug and alcohol abuse. The money, they decided, could be used in any way to help the town committee.

From October 1 to October 14, the Fiori's will take two cents from every gallon sold at the station. That money will be set aside for the town committee. Bob expects at least

Advisors OK cemetery plan

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The advisory committee will support a special town meeting article to revive plans for a new town cemetery.

As proposed by the cemetery study committee, article 17 in the October 10 town meeting warrant will authorize borrowing for the design of a new town cemetery. As chairman Glenn Pratt explained Tuesday night, the debt service from that short-term loan will be repaid through an existing town cemetery account. There will be no tax increase necessary to finance the design project, he emphasized.

But at least one advisory committee member was not persuaded. Arne Gjesteby voted against the proposal, saying he was not convinced that the project will not require future tax money.

"I'm afraid we will be spending more money on design and engineering and when it comes to spending more money, the town will not go for it," he said.

"Voters said they didn't want to use their tax money for a new fire station, and I'm hesitant to keep spending money on designs. We can't assume you won't be back again for money. We agreed that the cemetery was a good idea, but people out there don't want to spend their money on it."

Gjesteby said he was not assured that at some point, the actual construction of the 10-acre cemetery on Smith Place and Pleasant Street will not require additional tax money.

School officials defend their administration, budget costs

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The school committee was put on the defensive last week– arguing in support of the school budget at an educational forum sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber invited Superintendent of Schools Stephen Hart and school committee members Barbara Bliss, Chris Ford, Nancy Sandell, Ralph Kidder, and Russell Reidy to respond last Thursday night to a variety of questions from residents.

The tone was set early on when panelists were asked to justify what was purported to be an incredibly top heavy administrative salary budget.

Cohasset has one superintendent,three principals, and one assistant principal. An assistant superintendent was laid off following a failure to override a Proposition 2 1/2 article earlier this year.

"I don't know of any system that has fewer [administrative] positions," said Supt. Stephen Hart in defense of his budget.

School committee members Nancy Sandell and Ralph Kidder denied that Cohasset was administratively top heavy. Sandell said that five managers for 180 employees and 1200 students was reasonable. Kidder asked the audience to compare staffing patterns in the school to what you would expect in a local bank.

"A quality business takes leadership and management," said Kidder. "Education in Cohasset is a five million dollar business."

Several people suggested Cohasset could get by with one principal covering both elementary schools and eliminating the assistant principal.

Hart took exception to a contention that the assistant principal at the high school was unnecessary because all he did was "play with the student council." Hart said the assistant principal had responsibilities that included enforcing student discipline and attendance policies, serving as department chairman for several instructional departments, and a number of supervisory and

PSO prepares fight for budget

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

As in years past, the Cohasset Parent School Organization will be fighting for the continuing quality of Cohasset's schools.

Parents who have a child attending one of Cohasset's schools are automatically part of the PSO. No membership dues or fees are charged. The PSO relies upon donations and a variety of fund raising activities.

Unlike other communities, one unified organization covers all three schools.

President Pat Baird defined the mission of the PSO as supporting, supplementing, and strengthening education in Cohasset. She outlined the fundraising events to be held during the year in order to fulfill that mission.

Baird also told the crowd that the PSO would be registering as a political action committee again this year in order to fight Proposition 2 1/2's effects on the school budget. She asked the membership to get involved in town government for the sake of education.

At last week's PSO open house and general meeting, each member of the school administration spoke at length.

Supt. Stephen Hart explained to the audience how the school had managed to gain back some ground by overriding several of the Proposition 2 1/2 cuts. The final cut was $282,000.

Hart told the parents that the school committee and the administration tried to institute cuts with the least effect on the educational program.

The district cut $55,000 to $65,000 from the administraton budget, $40,000 from transportation, and $50,000 from the athletic budget. The remaining $130,000 came out of educational programs and staff.

Hart told the parents that the financial crisis is not going to go away. "We have only hit the first level of cuts," he said. "The next level will have a drastic impact."

He shared some good news with the parents about

Cohasset's week

Egan named building inspector

Robert M. Egan was unanimously appointed Cohasset Building Inspector by selectmen Monday night.

Egan, of Bradley Woods Drive in Hingham, is a former industrial arts teacher in the Boston public schools. He is currently a partner in a design and construction business. During an interview with selectmen two weeks ago, Egan said he and his partner would sell the business if he was appointed building inspector.

Egan will begin his new job next week at an annual salary of $27,102.

There were four finalists for the position which became vacant when Don Robbins resigned to take the building inspector's job in Hingham. Three of those candidates were interviewed during a public meeting two weeks ago. A fourth candidate declined a public interview and later withdrew his name from consideration after a newspaper article indicated that selectmen had met in private with the candidate.

There were a total of 47 candidates for the position.

Town accountant gets raise

There was high praise for town accountant Mary Matthews Gallagher this week from selectmen. They readily approved a merit increase for the town employee, raising her annual salary from $31,793 to $33,383.

Gallagher is expecting her first child and the due date is October 10 - the same day as the special town meeting. According to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon, Gallagher is still planning to attend town meeting, unless circumstances dictate otherwise.

In Doyon's view, Gallagher has performed, "exemplary. In the past year she has very much stabilized what has been an unstable situation in the past."

Selectman Diana Kornet said Gallagher has "made a very fine contribution" to the town, and Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she has been impressed with the data reports Gallagher prepares each month for the board.

Gallagher expects to be on a two-month leave of absence after her baby is born, Doyon said. In the interim, Nancy Cook will be in charge of the accountant's office.

Appointments made

Selectmen this week made two appointments to town committees. Susan DeMichele was named to the arts lottery council, and Charles M. Kane will fill a three-year term on the cable TV advisory committee.

Tebbetts for regionalization

Selectman Ned Tebbetts made a pitch to continue the town's pursuit of regional planning.

The town government structure committee is studying the possibility of regionalizing certain municipal services. They are inviting other area towns to join with Cohasset in this process.

Selectman Burt Pratt also noted that it's high on the agenda for the ten-town South Shore Coalition.

"I just want to be on the record that there is a potential for substantial savings with regional planning," Tebbetts said. "I personally support it - there is a sense of urgency to implement this. There are some objections (to regionalizing town services) by some town employees. But it musn't be held up by their objections."

Selectmen object to MBTA

Cohasset selectmen will write a letter to the MBTA voicing their support of the public bus transportation service in Hull. Although cities and towns support the transportation service with an annual subsidy, Cohasset receives no service and the MBTA plans to discontinue service in Hull.

According to figures released at last week's South Shore Coalition meeting, between 400 and 500 Hull residents use that service each day, Selectman Martha Gjesteby said.

The MBTA plans to cut off the service in mid-October.

Burglary suspects arrested

Cohasset police arrested three suspects in connection with a September 18 burglary at South Shore Nissan on Rte. 3A.

Police Officer David Cogill was in a cruiser at Cushing Plaza, responding to an alarm at King's Jeweler's. While he was waiting for the owner, he noticed some suspicious activity in the parking lot across the street at the car dealership.

According to the police report, Officer Cogill witnessed three persons breaking into a car in the lot. He radioed for help and Cohasset, Scituate and Hingham police responded.

A juvenile was arrested along with two adults, Carrie Toohey, 20, of Farrington Street in Quincy and Michael J. Ryan, 19 of Sea Street in Quincy. They were charged with breaking and entering of a motor vehicle, malicious destruction and possession of burglary tools.

One car in the lot was extensively damaged, according to police. The three suspects allegedly smashed the rear window of the car and ripped out parts of the vehicle, including the seats and radio, police said.

They were arraigned this week in Quincy District Court. A pre-trial conference has been scheduled for December 12.

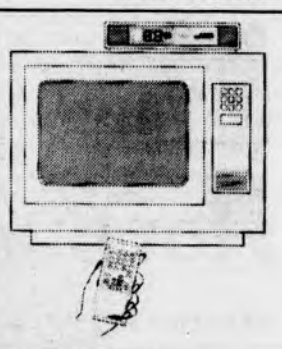
COMMUNITY TELEVISION UPDATE

Community Television is television FOR the community, BY the community. Did you know that, as residents of Scituate, Cohasset, Norwell, Hanover, Hingham and Hull, you have access to the equipment and facilities of Continental Cablevision to work on programs for cable channel 3 and 53? All you have to do is take advantage of the FREE television production workshops for proper certification.



WORKSHOP ORIENTATION AND OPEN HOUSE

This workshop and open house will acquaint you with Community Television, what we have to offer, and what you can do with this local communications tool.

October 3, 1989 7:30-10:00 PM @ Scituate Studio for Scituate and Cohasset residents.

October 10,1989 7:30-10:00 PM @ Norwell Studio for Norwell, Hanover and Hingham residents.

October 17, 1989 7:30-10:00 PM @ Hull Studio for Hull residents.

TECH TIP OF THE MONTH

Service Supervisor Michael Massmann says, If you can change the channel with the keypad on top of the converter box but not the remote control keys, the problem is very likely a weak battery in the remote control; just bring the remote control to your local office, and we'll replace the battery – for FREE!

EMPLOYEE OF THE MONTH

Peter LePage started in our Randolph system as the System Engineer in May of 1983. Peter was promoted to Director of Engineering for the Norwell system in August of 1986; as such, he is responsible for overseeing all technical operations for the six town system. Congratulations, Peter!

School officials defend administrators, budget administrative functions.

School Committee Chairman Barbara Bliss fielded a question suggesting that staff and overhead costs could be reduced by adding a second story to Deer Hill School and selling off Osgood School.

Bliss said that option was considered by the School Facilities Committee in the 1970's. It was rejected because Deer Hill's foundation was too weak to support a second story. She said that no addition of any other type was possible unless a new sewer system was built.

Even if the two elementary schools were merged in some fashion, the savings would be minimal. Heat, electricity, and teacher salaries would not be reduced. Since no money is currently available from the state for new construction, all costs would have to be picked up by the town. It is unlikely that the $60,000 savings from eliminating one principal would offset the capital outlay necessary to build a facility to house kindgergarten through grade six.

Regionalization was also raised as a money saver.

Nancy Sandell said no other towns are interested in regionalizing with Cohasset at the present time. The lack of interest stems from the cost of building a facility large enough to house a new regional school.

In a twist on the regionalization theme, panelist Russell Reidy said it might be a better solution for school systems like Cohasset to share teachers with other towns. Teachers of highly specialized, advanced courses would circuit from town to town where class sizes couldn't justify full-time staff. Reidy also mentioned that videotaped lectures might be part of the future of education.

Institution of user fees in the athletic program roused considerable comment as well.

Someone submitted a question asking if athletes would be able to demand equal play for equal pay, but most people were more concerned that would-be athletes would be excluded because of inability to pay.

School Committee Vice Chairman Chris Ford assured the audience that the school had made arrangements to cover hardship situations in a way that would not be embarrassing for needy students. He also pointed out that participation in fall athletic programs was up 20 per cent over last year.

That was the good news. Ford and other members of the panel hastened to say that user fees for other extracurricular activities is a very real possibility in the future. These programs might be in jeopardy given the funding problems faced by the school system, they said.

Committee member Ralph Kidder reminded the audience that Proposition 2 1/2 gives towns a choice in what they fund in education and how they fund it. And, he said, it puts that choice squarely on the shoulders of the people who come out to vote.

Regionalizing sports programs is not a solution to the user fee problem because MIAA rules do not permit it. School committee members agreed that it could be explored for the future.

A question about school population and the reliability of projections for the future elicited the information that a 1969 study had forecasted an enrollment of 3,000 students. That is more than twice the actual enrollment.

The school system has gotten more conservative in its calculations and short range projections have been right on target. Supt. Hart said the era of shrinking enrollments is past. He believes Cohasset will experience small annual increases.

The trend is already showing up in the early elementary grades. Last year there were 93 kindergarteners. This year there are 105 students in the first grade.

This seemingly small increase means that Osgood School needs another first grade teacher to keep within the teacher/pupil ratio. So far it is an unmet need.

Even if the system could afford the additional teacher, there is no place to house another class at Osgood. The only classroom space is being used by the music and art programs. Space at Osgood is being pushed to the limit: there is no cafeteria and an inadequate gymnasium.

Hart suggested that it might be necessary to realign the elementary grades by shifting the third grade students to Deer Hill School.

Concerns about the expense of educating students yielded to questions about the quality of education.

School officials were on safe ground. Independent evaluations of Cohasset students have found them at high performance level. Not only are the brightest students meeting or exceeding the standards set by those of affluent suburbs and private schools, recent test results show that Cohasset's "C" students perform at an even higher level than those of other towns or private school students.

Although committee members were agreed that more could and should be done to motivate students to reach their full potential, test results may have soothed residents concerned about the loss of the gifted student program.

The teacher for this program was lost as part of the $282,000 cut made necessary by Proposition 2 1/2.

Questions about the computer curriculum gave rise to a discussion about when and how computers ought to be introduced into the school.

Superintendent Hart stated that an isolated computer in each room for the sake of having a computer was not an efficient or productive way to achieve computer literacy. He suggested that computer labs with comprehensive computer instruction program was preferable.

Committee member Chris Ford also pointed out that there is no money in the budget to purchase additional equipment in order to increase computer literacy. He called on the Chamber to get involved in the Stop and Shop "Apples for Students" program and to help identify other resources in the community.

Tenure and teacher salaries also came in for comment with teacher contracts up for negotiation in 1991.

Some members of the audience said teachers could live on the existing salaries. The sentiment seemed to be that teachers shouldn't be looking for cost of living increases in tough times.

When asked if the schools were being asked to do too much, committee member Kidder replied simply, "Yes, but who else is going to do it?"

Studds opposes commuter fare hike

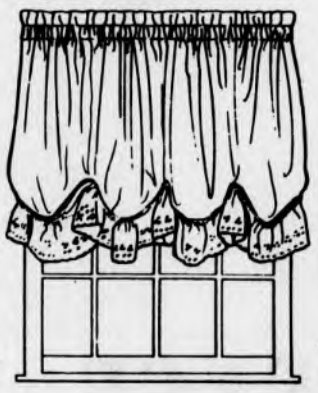
Congressman Gerry Studds is opposed to a proposed increase in the Hingham commuter boat fare.

Here is what he said in his weekly newsletter:

"Since the mid-1970s, residents of South Shore coastal communities have enjoyed the option of commuting to Boston by boat from locations in Hull and Hingham. The Hingham service began with a single boat making one 45-minute trip to Boston in the morning, returning in the evening. As traffic on the Southeast Expressway worsened, the commuter boat became increasingly popular. With the help of a state subsidy, the service has grown to the point where five vessels now offer 19 round trips daily plying the waters between Hingham and Boston in half an hour.

"To the credit of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) — which operates the service — fares have not risen since 1984, when they were set at $3 per ride or $27.50 for ten rides. Recently, the MBTA sought public comment on its proposal to boost fares to $4 for one trip and $34 for ten rides — a 25 percent increase. This past week, I wrote to Frederick Salvucci, head of the state's transportation agency and MBTA Chairman, to express my opposition to an increase of this magnitude.

"In my letter, I wrote that: 'I do not fault the MBTA for proposing, after five years, to raise ticket prices. Operating costs have risen and must be offset by either an increase in the state subsidy or higher fares, or both. A combination of additional state assistance and increased fares is, in my view, an equitable balance. Such a method reflects the appropriate role of government in supporting mass transit, while requiring transportation users to pay their share.'



"I observed, however, that a 25 percent increase — especially for those who can barely afford the current fare — would send sizable numbers of boat riders back to the congested highway or the crowded Red Line. I noted that the suggested monthly cost of $136 compares very unfavorably with the cost of riding the Red Line from Wollaston — less than $50 per month including parking. Many boat riders have chosen to pay the price for the less stressful, faster and more reliable aquatic commute. There is, however, a certain point beyond which many cannot afford the luxury.

"Finally, I observed that, with imminent Central Artery construction forcing expressway drivers to seek alternatives, a reasonable commuter boat fare is needed to make it a viable choice. State transportation planners, I cautioned, should not treat the Hingham boat as a service only for the well-heeled, and should avoid establishing a fare structure that discourages moderate-income commuters.

Drug and alcohol abuse committee begins task

$1,000 will be raised in those two weeks.

"The better we do, the better the town will do," he explained. "I really think this could be beneficial for everyone."

The notion that this is a good public relations campaign is not lost on the station owners. "We can feature it as kind of a promotional thing for Exxon, while at the same time, we're helping out with something we all feel is very important," Bob noted.

"I have neighbors with young kids in schools. They tell me about what's going on - it's amazing to me," he continued. "One person I talked with is in the tenth grade and she said she has friends who have been drinking since the eighth grade. It's about time we try to do something, and we're happy the town is getting involved. Hopefully, with programs like this, we can help get things squared away."

At the suggestion of Selectman Martha Gjesteby, the committee was formed last week. Nine members were named to the committee, along with three ex-officio members and seven "resource" people with expertise in the area of drug and alcohol abuse.

At their meeting Monday night, selectmen created a formal task for the committee which includes: determining the extent of the alcohol and drug abuse problem in Cohasset - a. types of substances abused, b. populations affected, c. comparison with regional statistics for other towns.

The committee will also determine and produce a directory of resources and programs, both public and private, that are currently in place to deal with various aspects of the problem - a. prevention, b.treatment, c. law enforcement, d. support groups.

An interim report will be prepared for selectmen by December 1. The committee will also produce an action plan and list of recommendations to selectmen by February 1.

"There are plenty of things to donate to," Bob noted. "But we wanted to do something for our town. And I really think this problem is something the town has to deal with. We have to place more emphasis on Cohasset's problem with drug use, and we thought it was time for us to help."

First committee meeting

At its organizational meeting Tuesday night, Jack Golden of Bound Brook Lane was elected chairman. Priscilla Tebbetts will serve as the clerk of the drug and alcohol abuse committee.

Golden, a member of the board of directors for the South Shore Council on Alcoholism, received a letter this week from Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt's office. The letter described an array of services available to the Cohasset committee from the DA's office, including: consulting in community action planning, police training, teacher training; and prevention training for teaching staff, community groups, clergy and public health personnel. The office would also be a classroom resource, as well as providing consulations with elected and appointed leaders within the community.

Golden explained that grant money is available for the committee's project, and noted that donations such as the Fiori's will assist the committee in its efforts. There are skilled rehabilitation experts from the Council on Alcoholism who have offered their assistance to the committee, Golden added.

"The town as a whole supports this committee 100 percent. That's going to be necessary," Golden said, explaining that in order to meet the December 1 report deadline, the committee must meet every Tuesday evening at town hall.

According to information from the district attorney's office, cocaine and marijuana are the drugs of choice in Cohasset. At next week's meeting, Golden said, he will have booklets distributed to the committee members, outlining the drugs available on the streets of Massachusetts. "They have statistics that will surprise you," he added.

At its next meeting, the committee will invite local officials, such as the police chief, the superintendent of schools, and the school principals to discuss their concerns regarding drug use in Cohasset.

Chamber of Commerce news . . .

TAXES, TAXES, TAXES . . . . . the evaluations, or reevaluations, are out; and once again the main topic of discussion around town is becoming taxes. How much, what for, too high, can't do it, how dare they, etc., etc., etc. Questions concerning Prop. 2 1/2 are popping up again, showing mainly how little most of us really know about the workings of that much talked about law. Talk of budgets, services, schools, town government, all these issues crop up again and again whenever property taxes are discussed among friends and neighbors. What never seems to be brought up in these discussions, is the amount of money, tax money, that is brought into the Town coffers each year by the assessments on BUSINESS properties. Maybe now is the time.

Each year hundreds of thousands, actually over a million, dollars are brought into Cohasset tax revenues by assessments on commercial properties. The downtown area, Tedeschi Plaza, Cushing Plaza, Jonathan Livingstone Seagull Plaza, are the most visible. But what about those properties that most of us never really think about? The office buildings, small business offices, restaurants, gas stations, car dealerships, real estate offices, etc. . . . All of these businesses pay real estate taxes to the Town. The Stop and Shop Plaza, when fully completed, will pay an estimated tax in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. These businesses, whether large or small, visible or not, shoulder a huge amount of the tax load for the town of Cohasset. And they take very little back. Buildings used for business do not add to the school system or budget. They tend to use far less water, sewage treatment, or police and fire department time. They do not add to the cost of snow removal. Their lots are privately plowed. Their trash is not dumped free at our landfill. And they provide needed services to our residents.

So the next time you have a chance to SHOP COHASSET, give it a try. Remember, it is more convenient, more friendly, and, in the long run, far more cost efficient for all of us.

PSO listens to school news

student performance as measured by the Educational Records Bureau. Cohasset has been part of the ERB program for two years.

The testing program administers an achievement and aptitude test developed especially for suburban and private schools. Regular tests measure students against a standard set so low that the test results don't give the school the kind of information necesssary to evaluate the students and the curriculum.

The results of the tests given to the third, fifth, and tenth grades reveal that Cohasset is doing an excellent job. The school system is particularly proud of the fact that its lower level students are doing better than other suburban and private school students.

John Leary, Director of Student Services, praised the PSO for their "heroic efforts last spring trying to restore the cuts," but confessed that he didn't want to experience the budget cutting process again.

He told parents that the staff was back rejuvenated and ready for a new year.

Although the guidance department suffered the loss of a guidance counselor, they had regrouped and reorganized. The career counseling program and the peer counseling program were not cut.

Leary, formerly Director of Guidance, is now responsible for the special education programs as well.

The high school suffered a wide range of cuts according to principal Meg Gallagher.

Gone are: two physical education teachers; one home economics teacher; one guidance counselor; one special education teacher; two science classes; two business classes; one math lab aide.

Gallagher explained that the loss went beyond simply the loss of a person or a class. "We've lost many special efforts and attentions that build self-confidence and self-esteem among our students," said Gallagher.

She also reassured parents of junior and senior high students that the remaining staff was back enthusiastic and committed.

Kenneth Ekberg, principal at Deer Hill School, told parents of students in fourth through sixth grade that cuts were less direct in his school. Reductions are mostly in repairs, supplies, and capital outlays. Lost staff members include the enrichment teacher and a math aide.

The good news is that the school was able to find an outstanding replacement for an instrumental music teacher who opted to leave education altogether.

Although the population is up at Deer Hill, pupil/teacher ratios are still 22 or less to one.

The joint is jumping, according to the principal at Osgood School.

Jack Creamer regaled the crowd with tales of life in noisy buses and bustling halls filled with kindergarten through third grade students.

Creamer also told parents that he worries about the overcrowding on the buses and in the first grade classrooms. "It is very difficult or impossible to provide the individual attention that children need," said Creamer. "It is an issue now and it will be an issue next year."

Barbara Bliss, chairman of the school committee, summed up the feelings of staff and parents alike.

"We care about quality education for Cohasset," Bliss said. "We think this town can afford it.

around town

❑ Robert (Bob) Beggan has joined the Cohasset office of the Jack Conway Company as a sales associate, according to manager Mary Ellen Neagle.

Beggan received a Bachelor of Science Degree from Boston State College and has experience as a sales representative for a Peabody corporation. He has completed the eight day intensive training course for new associates sponsored by the Jack Conway Company.

A longtime Cohasset resident, he has served on the recreation commission, is a coach of the Coastal Youth Soccer League and serves as a host family for the METCO program. He and his wife Carol are the parents of three children.

❑ Happy birthday to Rosilla Trott.

❑ Congratulations to Topher Henderson, Alyson James, Will Adams, Kathleen Colburn and Nathaniel Bowen, all Latin students who won awards in the competitive National Latin Examinations.

❑ Congratulations to Sharon Weber, who is joining the South Shore Conservatory faculty. She will direct the dance programs that take place at the conservatory, and has many plans underway. For the children in the Introduction to Dance class, she is planning a program for parents and friends for the holiday season based on "The Night Before Christmas." Call the Conservatory at 749-7565 for more information.

❑ If you are involved in the Arts, this one's for you you! It is time for the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council to distribute grants, and they have $1,694 for Arts Lottery and $312 for PASS (Performing Arts Student Series). It is available to individuals or organizations dedicated to the arts and humanities. PASS is to fund tickets to performing arts events for public school children at the regular ticket price of $5. Applications are available at the selectmen's office or by contacting Karin Bartow, chairman, at 383-0572.

❑ Happy anniversary to Elaine and Bob Hubbell.

❑ Tom Hudson, co-owner of Century 21 Atlantis Realty Inc., has announced that real estate professionals Bill Kleinz, Fred Toppan and Pam Byrnes were recipients of the Cohasset firm's Annual Service Award. In recognition of a year's service to the office, they received their award on August 17.

❑ The Cohasset Community Center is planning to hold a Flea Market on the Common on Septembert 30, with the renters fees ($25 per table) going to the Center's Building Fund. Anyone can rent a table, and there is certainly a lot of "action" around the Common, so it would be worth your while. We could probably all fill one table with saleable items from our homes, or get together with your friends!

Onlookers take photographs while workers begin to raise several bells during renovations at the carillon at St. Stephen's Church.

For more information, call 383-0088.

❑ Make it a point to stop at the high school to see the art works of Cecilia Candia, who is the artist of the month for September. Cecilia is in the 10th grade, and is one talented gal! She plays guitar, trombone, saxaphone and recorder, draws, photographs, paints and makes pottery! To top it all off, she is in all honor courses at CHS! Stop and see her work, it is inspirational (as is the artist!).

❑ Doesn't the Common look beautiful? The next time you see members of the departments that made it all possible, tell them what a great job they did. They deserve all the praise they can get!

❑ Susan and John Carr will certainly remember Saturday, Sept. 23, as will their guests, Sharon and Steve Weber. They went to a luncheon at the Park Plaza Hotel, and George Bush was there. It must have been a nifty experience, what a fine place to have lunch with the president! Mike Dukakis was there too, but all was peaceful in that department! Guess they didn't discuss the Massachusetts economy!

❑ Congratulations to Edwin and Susan Brown, who had a baby girl on September 8 at South Shore Hospital.

❑ Lisa Shumaker, daughter of Jim and Susan Shumaker, has been awarded the Elizabeth Cary Aggassis Certificate of Merit from Radcliffe College, and the Harvard College Award for the Academic year, 1988-1989. Lisa is a junior at Harvard this year and has been accepted into the Undergraduate Teaching Program at Harvard. Lisa is very pleased to have her brother, David, join her this year as a freshman at Harvard.

❑ Irene Volpe has been appointed to the board of directors of the Scituate Children's Exchange Inc. of Scituate. The store specializes in handmade crafts, maternity clothes and children's clothes.

❑ Everyone has been talking about substance abuse, both townwide and nationwide. It certainly is nice that our town has formed a group to assess the drug and alcohol problem in town, here's hoping a lot gets accomplished. Hats off to Leo Fiori of Leo's Exxon, who has pledged $1,000 to meet any expenses of the new drug committee. That is committment, and Leo is to be commended.

❑ That is the news for this week, please call me with your latest venture!

FOR AN IDEA OF HOW DIRTY YOUR ORIENTAL RUG IS, RUB THIS AND LOOK AT YOUR FINGER.

Oriental rugs are constantly picking up various types of soil. Some are greasy and some are gritty. But they all can eat away at your treasured possession.
For your Oriental rug to retain its beauty and value, it should be cleaned at least once every three to five years.
At Grillo Oriental Rug Cleaning, we carefully examine each rug, then give it the most suitable treatment. Sometimes that means gentle machine-washing, other times it means our 'Art-Safe' hand-washing. And our exclusive equipment and methodology enable us to remove the deep-set grit that others miss.
Furthermore, unlike harsh commercial cleaning, our individualized, museum-quality care is always safe, always effective.
For more information, or to have your rug picked up, call (617) 871-6500. Outside this area code, call 1-800-649-7707.

Advisors back plan for new town cemetery

The proposal for the design of a new town cemetery was approved at two town meetings, but the request to fund the project by taxation was defeated in the Proposition 2 1/2 override election.

Since that time, Pratt explained, his committee has worked with town officials to find available money for the project that would not require tax dollars or an override. What they found was a $44,000 Sale of Graves account which town counsel determined could be used to fund the engineering plans.

The committee is suggesting the town borrow a short term loan with the interest paid from the Sale of Graves account. Then, as money is brought in from the sale of graves in the new cemetery, the loan will be paid in full. If selectmen decide to hike the cost of grave sites, more money will be put into that account which will aid the construction project, he said.

Although no tax dollars will be used, Pratt noted that town meeting approval is necessary to begin the design project.

What was not made clear at Tuesday night's advisory committee was an explanation for article 16. That warrant article requests that town meeting rescind their previous authorization to borrow $50,000 for the design of a town cemetery. Selectman Diana Kornet said that was simply a "bookkeeping" article, which became necessary when voters defeated the tax override to fund the project. But advisory chairman Jane Goedecke said other selectmen feel that residents should have the opportunity to vote once again on the question of funding a town cemetery plan.

"Selectmen are trying to protect themselves politically from any backlash," she said.

Although advisory committee members agreed the article to rescind the previous borrowing authorization would likely confuse voters at town meeting, they decided to support the proposal.

Study committee chairman Pratt agreed, saying he intends to bring up article 17 prior to article 16 on the floor of town meeting.

The advisory committee did not vote on article 12 which requests that the town begin an expansion of the Beechwood Cemetery to accommodate about 540 grave sites. Although the expansion plans were drawn by the cemetery committee's consulting engineer, Pratt said it was only a "stop gap' measure within the town's least popular cemetery.

However, Pratt said the committee would support the proposal since there are currently only 160 grave sites available in the town. Pratt said the committee intends to pursue other "stop gap" measures to expand the number of available sites in all of the town's cemeteries.

The advisory committee did not vote on article 12 since they did not know the cost of the cemetery expansion.

Water commissioner Ronald Goodwin informed the advisory committee that there would be no proposal to raise water rates at the special town meeting. A second article requesting the purchase of Lily Pond Estates by eminent domain will also be withdrawn from the October 10 warrant, he said.

Goodwin explained that town counsel is attempting to set up a negotiating session with the water commissioners and the owners of the 11-acre property. Until that meeting is held, Goodwin said the commissioners will not propose any action.

Regarding a proposal to raise water rates, Goodwin said that article is related to a third article which would transfer a water department surplus to the town's general fund. Right now, the commissioners and selectmen disagreed on the amount to be transferred to the general fund.

According to selectmen, the water department owes the town's general fund about $365,000 for the construction of the water treatment plant. For the first time in recent memory, the water department ended this year with a surplus.

Town Accountant Mary Matthews Gallagher informed selectmen that the surplus is $72,000. Executive Secretary Greg Doyon told the advisory committee. Selectmen have said about $40,000 of that should be transferred to the general fund.

But Goodwin noted that this year, the department will likely suffer a deficit because of the decreased water useage during the rainy summer. He argued that it would be better to transfer a smaller amount from the water revenues now, rather than forcing a transfer back to the water department later this spring.

Advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke suggested that selectmen and water commissioners first agree on the department's surplus, before deciding how much can be transferred into the general fund. She noted that a greater general fund total will reduce the amount of money to be raised by taxation or by overrides for future town projects.

Advisory committee members did not take any action Tuesday night on a warrant article request by Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle to purchase a $16,500 brush chipper. Laugelle told the committee the current 19- year-old chipper will not last through the winter.

Godecke noted that until they can add up all warrant articles requiring money from the town's $272,000 free cash account, the committee cannot vote on certain requests.

It appears that special town meeting articles will total more than $100,000 from that free cash account. But, she explained, there is more than $14,000 available from a previous year's lottery account. And town counsel is investigating the use of previously-appropriated money for the Cohasset-Hull sewer connection to pay special legal counsel costs incurred during the negotiations for that project.

Our responsibility

Last week, we published an article in which English teacher William Kite talked about his profession and its future. He obviously loves his career, but like many others, he worries about the future of public education.

Cohasset can still retain bragging rights to a quality educational system. But many people are concerned whether that tradition will continue. How much longer can any school system withstand constant budget cuts without lasting effects?

In last week's article, Kite says that college students today are not being directed into careers in education. They are told to major other fields - an area where the jobs are more lucrative and plentiful.

Today, he says, there are few vacancies for teachers. Those with the least experience are the first to go when cuts are made in the budget. But often times, those teachers are the ones with the greatest enthusiasm for their job - who make up in intelligence and spirit what they lack in years of service.

The future of public education is uncertain now. The brightest college students must often prepare for a career that will be more stable than teaching - a job where years of experience will be assured. Other students, particularly in the math and science areas, opt for a career in the private sector - employment that is often accompanied by an enticing paycheck and aspirations along the corporate ladder.

We should all worry about the future of public education. Where are the monies to come from? Where will the children whose parents cannot afford private schooling be educated? And where else will our children experience the rich diversity and abundant exposure to many kinds of people who comprise our public schools?

For all of us who have graduated from public schools across this country, to simply sit back and watch its demise would be unconscionable.

But promises for a brighter future must not be words alone. If it takes additional tax dollars to build a solid educational system, then that is what we must do. Certainly we cannot maintain a successful system if we continue to reduce the money necessary to support it.

As taxpayers of this town we are committed to financially supporting those services we feel are essential to the quality of life in Cohasset. Certainly, there can be no quality to that life if we allow our public schools, always a source of pride in this community, to degenerate. Without good schools, good teachers and community support, there is no value to the property within any community.

Melissa Thatcher, Candice Buckley, and Alexis Zerendow sneak up on some friends outside St. Stephen's Church where renovations of the carillon began this week.

Thanks for Eagle Scout project

(This letter was sent by the conservation commission to Christopher McElroy, 59 Windy Hill Rd.)

Dear Christopher,

The Town of Cohasset Conservation Commission is the most grateful recipient of 9 of the dozens of used 4- and 5-drawer metal file cabinets that you sanded and painted for the Town of Cohasset for your Eagle Scout Project. The cabinets were at least 3rd hand, as papers under some of the drawers showed (J.J. Henry's, Fore River Ship Yard, etc.) and in addition several were very rusty.

Our Commission had over 20 cardboard cartons of papers, but no files to store them in when we were to move from 43 Elm Street to the reconstructed Town Hall, and your assistance not only made our move from 43 Elm St. much easier to accomplish, but additionally helped to preserve essential records that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Secretary of State's Office has advised us that we must retain.

We know that you put in many hours, and even painted more file cabinets than you originally contracted for. It was a tedious task, and we really appreciate the work that you did.

The Commission requests that you also extend our thanks to any of the Troop 28 members, who may have assisted you in this worthwhile project, especially in a time when the Town due to Proposition 2 1/2 constraints and declining revenues from the State had little to spend for office equipment.

Our secretary thanks you most of all!

Sincerely,
Jeffrey C. Waal, Chairman

Public listens to recycled nonsense

A letter from Jane Simmerman published Sept. 14 alleges that there is no safe level of radiation, and distorts a statement from the National Council on Radiation Protection in support of her allegation.

Mankind always has lived in a sea of ionizing radiation from natural sources, including radon. There is no evidence that such amounts are harmful, and there is considerable evidence that it may even be essential to life. In some areas of the world the background level is very high, without any evidence of harm. In any case, the nuclear power cycle adds a tiny fraction of ionizing radiation to what we get in any case from natural background. And what we get from natural background is complemented by an almost equal amount that the average person receives from medical and dental radiography. So fear of radiation from nuclear energy is illogical.

The releases from nuclear power plants are easily detected and monitored because radiation monitors are very sensitive. The radiation exposure from the Three Mile Island accident subjected its neighbors to about the same increase in radiation as if they had moved to Colorado for a month, where the natural background is somewhat higher than in the TMI area.

Ms. Simmerman claims that the public hears only the statements from the utility industry, I suggest that the public tends to hear only the nonsense recycled and naseum by the opponents of nuclear energy. Those who wish to be informed from an objective and competent source should consult a report prepared by the National Academy of Sciences entitled "The Bio- logical Effects of Ionizing Radiation." Another valu- able source is a report by the Council on Scientific Affairs of the American Medical Association entitled "Medical Perspective on Nuclear Power."

Speed reading course at community center

The Cohasset Community Center is offering a fall speed reading course, to be held Thursday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m., beginning Oct. 19. It will continue for three more Thursdays, ending Nov. 16. There will be no class Nov. 2.

Designed to meet the academic needs of high school juniors and seniors, college students, and graduate students, this speed reading course will place equal emphasis on rate of reading and reading comprehension. One meeting will be devoted to textbook strategies and organizational skills in reading.

Materials used in class are assigned on an individual basis, with rate-and-comprehension practice and counseling follow-up conducted on a one-on-one format. Each person works at the appropriate level for him, as determined by personal goals decided upon at the bginning of the course.

Victor Sanborn, Professor of Professional Reading at Arthur D. Little's Management Education Institute, for 14 years, will be the instructor.

Beach clean-up Sept. 30

Cohasset will participate in the Massachusetts portion of national beach clean-up Saturday, Sept. 30, from 10 a.m. to noon.

Volunteers will clear Sandy and Rocky beaches, quantify their findings, and contribute to the final comprehensive report on beach debris by the Center for Marine Conservation's National Marine Debris Data Base in Washington, D.C.

To volunteer, please contact Sharon Becker, 383-1971.

Cohasset is host to rowing race

By Mike Ellis
Mariner correspondent

The second annual Minot Light round-about, a five-mile ocean row in Alden racing sculls, was held Saturday, Sept. 16 off Sandy Beach.

All Alden owners were invited to race or cruise a triangular course from the beach to Minot Light and back.

Unfortunately, the threatening skies combined with large surf from the Carribean hurricane season mandated an alternative sheltered inland course in Little Harbor. After watching an unsuccessful scull attempt from Cohasset Harbor to Sandy Beach, the race committee was convinced that an inland course was indeed necessary.

Rowers from far and near launched their Alden shells from Sandy Beach during this month's Minto Light round-about.
(Photos by Lynne Layman)

Over 17 competitors from the New England area participated in the competition, from 18 year-old Peter Schwab to Jim Hallett, age 74. A staggered time handicap was assigned to each competitor in order to accommodate the differences in age and boat rig.

Boston oarsman Peter Schwab sped around the course with the best overall time, earning the right to the Francis Haggerty Memorial Trophy, which was presented to the male and female rower with the fastest overall time.

Fran Haggerty is remembered, among other things, as a pioneer of ultra-thin plywood for racing shells, and manufactured many of the lightweight craft in his Cohasset Colonials shop next to the Sailing Club. Jane Ellwood received the Haggerty Memorial Trophy in the women's division.

Jack Hubbard, a Little Harbor regular in his Cohasset Comet and one of the event organizers, finished the 4.6 mile course around the perimeter of the harbor with the best adjusted time - once the handicap was figured in. Jack was the prime mover behind the race. "I've rowed in a number of these races in the area, and I wanted to do something to introduce people to Cohasset," he said following the race.

Marge Martin and Julie Hogeveen, both of Cohasset, competed in the women's double competition during the Minot Light round-about.

Event co-organizer Paul Mogan from Shoreline Oar and Sail in N. Scituate put the race together under the auspices of the US Rowing Assn. All competitors were USRA members. Shoreline Oar and Sail also generously provided sculls for those without a boat that wished to compete, and offered a clinic to both beginning and experienced scullers the morning of the race.

A post race dinner and awards ceremony was held that afternoon in the Unitarian Parish House, where all competitors and their families were treated to a lasagne dinner. After the banquet, the annual meeting of the Alden Owners of America was held.

Cohasset falls to Whittier in non league action

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Whittier Tech quarterback Ed Janurin was a one-man wrecking crew as he led his club to a 14-6 victory over visiting Cohasset High School in non-league football action September 23.

Janurin, a converted tailback, finished the game with 252 total offensive yards, 130 in the air and 122 on the ground. He also scored the game's first touchdown, a five-yard keeper in the first quarter.

"We just couldn't stop him," said Cohasset coach Phil Pisano after Saturday morning's loss. Because he ran for well over 100 yards, we had trouble stopping the pass, too."

The Skippers' only score came thanks to defensive back Mike Ellinger, who intercepted a pass and returned it 55 yards for a second-quarter touchdown.

Trailing 14-6 in the fourth quarter, the Skippers (0-2) put together their best drive of the day. Highlighted by a 17-yard run by Terry O'Leary and a 15-yard pass from Ellinger to John MacDonald, Cohasset drove 55 yards to the Whittier 20-yard line. The drive came to an abrupt halt on a fumble with seven minutes left.

"The whole team played much better in the second half, defensively," said Pisano, whose club played shutout ball after the second quarter.

The win evens Whittier's overall record to 1-1 on the year. It was the first meeting ever between the Haverhill school and Cohasset.

"Once again, I am pleased and encouraged with our never-say-die attitude," said the seventh-year coach. "We made adjustments after the first period and played some of our best football. As the season goes on, we are hoping to gain confidence after each game, thus becoming a formidable ballclub at the end of the year.

SCORING SUMMARY

3rd: No scoring.

4th: No scoring.

BOYS SOCCER

Senior Jim Reidy had two goals and an assist and Linc Marsac (also a senior) added a goal to lead Cohasset over Abington, 3-2, in South Shore League Small School's Boys' Soccer action September 22.

Parking for soccer clinic

Kindergarten soccer clinic parents (9 a.m.), and second grade clinic parents (11 a.m.) should park their vehicles in the parking area through the main gate. It parallels the first base line of the Barnes Little League Field for Saturday soccer clinics.

Grade 1 soccer clinic parents should plan to park at 10 a.m. in the outfield entrance of Barnes, in left field, outside of the fence.

This distribution of vehicles will ensure safety, and easier access/exit for all parents. No vehicles will be allowed to park on North Main Street.

Parents who stay to observe clinics are requested to either sit on the bleachers, or stand outside the fence.

Local skater wins medal

Marisol Perry won the Silver Medal in the Preliminary C2 Class Bronze Medal in the Pre-Intermediate Ladies Figures class at the Boston Open figure skating competition. Competitors came from all the New England States and from as far away as Pennsylvania.

Marisol, age 13, is the daughter of Judy Perry of Hugh Strain Rd. Marisol is in the 8th grade at the Cohasset High School.

The Boston Open is sponsored by the Skating club of Boston and sanctioned by the United States Figure Skating Association. The three-day competition took place on Sept. 15 through 17 at the Skating club of Boston's arena at 1240 Soldiers Field Rd., in Brighton.

Hockey association preseason ends

The South Shore Hockey Association finished its preseason with some high scoring games.

The defending champion Roman Garden defeated Garden Pub 6-3 with Dave McNulty scoring his 3rd HatTrick of the pre-season. Dave is a real sharpshooter and is dreaded by all the goalies when he is allowed to set up in front. Mike Delaney needed to catch his breath a couple of times and ended up in the penalty box. Also scoring for Roman Gardens was J. Riley, Jack McCarthy and Dick Ethier. Mike O'Connell, Fred Cobban and Bob "set-up" Brodeur tallied for Garden Pub.

Bare Cove Travel showed up early for its game against Sullivan Tire, but fell behind 2-0 early. Bare Cove tied the score by the end of the first. Sullivan was able to score 4 goals in the second, but allowed Bare Cove to score 3 for a 6-5 lead. That was it for Sullivan Tire for the night as Bare Cove tightened up its defense. Lavanchy, Nihtila and Tom Chisolm scored 2 for Bare Cove. Peterson, Reilly and Laphante rounded out the score. Sullivan Tire, with a strong support from the spare players had Dan Begim and Ray Gollome scoring 2 goals each.

Also scoring for Sullivan Tire were Rocky Rothwell and Marty King. Captain Carl Nantel was quoted as saying that his team would have a major turn-over of players for the new season.

In the last game, Jos Fell scored twice to lead Gulph Construction to a tough 6-2 victory over the rebuilding Varmints. Gulph jumped to a 2-0 lead after the 1st period, thanks to goals by Malley and Settino. Varmints tied it up in the second with scores by John Morgan and Walsh. Charlie Enwright and Fell came to life after that by leading Gulph to a 4-2 lead. Ed Settino and Fell again scored to ice the game. Gulph goalie Rick Swanson, with his "Terry Sawchuck" moves, stonewalled the Varmints for the remainder of the game.

One could smell the intensity of the new season coming after visiting the locker rooms. The regular season gets underway Sunday at the Quincy Youth Hockey Rink.

Candidates' corner

Hussey visits D.C. officials

State Senate Candidate Don Hussey, along with members of the Republican State Committee, traveled to Washington, D.C. September 18.

While there, he met with Republican Lee Atwater, Chairman of the Republican National Committee; Jeanie Austin, Co-Chairman, Senators Robert Dole, Connie Mack and Don Nichols and Ron Kaufman, Deputy Assistant to the President and Deputy Director of Presidential Personnel.

Hussey talked with Kaufman about the United States Educational Summit which will be held at the end of this month.

Hussey, who is interested in education, plans to attend if his schedule permits.

He also had brief meetings with Mike DeLand, Secretary of Environmental Affairs concerning the immediate need for recycling solid waste.

He also had a tour of the White House, the executive Mansion and the Pentagon.

With many hands we should be done by noon.

Commended students named

Mary Ellen Gallagher, principal of Cohasset Junior/Senior High School, announced that Juliana Chittick, Suzzunne DeCruz, Zachary Hochkeppel and Matthew Silvia have been named Commended Students in the 1990 National Merit Scholarship Program. A Letter of Commendation from the school and National Merit Scholarship Corporation, which conducts the competition, has been presented to these outstanding seniors.

About 35,000 Commended Students nationwide are being honored for their outstanding performance on the 1988 PSAT/NMSQT, which ranks them in the top five percent of more than one million students who entered the 1990 Merit Program by taking the qualifying test. Commended Students scored slightly below the level required to continue in the 1990 competition for Merit Scholarships, but they have shown exceptional academic promise.

An official of the Merit Program stated that "to be designated a Commended Student in this extremely competitive program is an attainment deserving of public recognition and is a credit to these young people and their schools. Commended Students were included in a Merit Program service through which they could be referred to two colleges or universities of their choice. We hope that the referral service and the recognition they are now receiving will enhance the higher education opportunities of Commended Students and increase their motivation to use their abilities to the fullest. The continued educational and personal development of academically talented students will benefit the entire nation."

Donations for computers

The Parent School Organization wants to harvest a bumper crop of Apples for Cohasset students, and Stop & Shop's Apples for Students program is their orchard.

The PSO invited Susan Grieb, manager of consumer information and coordinator of the Apple computer giveaway for Stop & Shop, to explain how to get the computers at its general meeting and open house held September 21.

Cohasset isn't the only community taking Stop & Shop up on its offer. Grieb told them that 1600 schools in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and Poughkeepie, N.Y. had signed up to participate in the first 11 days of the program.

But there's no competition between schools—Stop and Shop has no limit on the number of computers schools can claim. According to Grieb, Stop & Shop expects to spend "millions and millions" on the program.

Stop & Shop began the program to celebrate its 75th anniversary. Grieb told the crowd that the company wanted to do something very special and very different than the usual sales promotion or Hawaiian vacation giveaway.

"We're really proud of our 75 years of service to communities," said Grieb. "We wanted to celebrate by supporting the education of our youth."

Schools participate by collecting the special pink register tapes being issued by the stores between September 10, 1989 and March 10, 1990. Depending on the dollar value of the register tapes, schools can exchange them for computer equipment or software. Schools have a whole menu of choices: an Apple IIe system with monitor, disk drive, and software can be had for $125,000 worth of tapes; an ImageWriterII printer for $45,000; and so on.

Grieb shared some of the creative strategies other communities have adopted to get shoppers to turn in their tapes.

One community is throwing a big Halloween dance. Admission is by register tape only.

Another school painted red footprints leading from the store to the collection barrel in the school's front yard.

No school has claimed the first computer yet. But Grieb, dressed in red from head to toe, expects to be inundated with pink tape very soon.

Residents may send their Stop & Shop register tapes to any Cohasset school or drop off their tapes at local businessses and organizations which have agreed to help collect tapes. They include: The Library, The Community Center, The Town Hall, The Senior Citizen Center and the Rec. Center at the Senior Citizen Housing, The Cohasset Tennis Club and all The Cohasset Churches.

Mrs. Baird says, "We welcome any organizations or parents who are interested in volunteering their services to help us reach our goal for computers."

For more information, contact Patricia Baird.

PSO board members Gary Ritts, treasurer; Retta Dwyer, secretary; Patricia Baird, president; and Monica McKenney, vice president gather for their annual meeting.

Reception for librarian

The Osgood School has a new librarian. She is Charlene Williams. We, the library staff of the Cohasset schools, would like to invite parents and friends of Osgood School to an informal reception to welcome Mrs. Williams to Osgood, Thursday, Sept. 28 at 2 p.m. in the Osgood Library.

If you would like to join us please call the High School Library at 383-6100, extension 33.

As in the past, volunteers are always welcome in the library. If you would like to volunteer some time, please contact Susan McFadd or Janice Batts at the above mentioned number.

Osgood School open house

Open House will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 3 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. The teachers will briefly describe their classroom programs as follows: 7:30 - Kindergarten and First Grades; 8:15 - Second and Third Grades.

Please join us as we introduce ourselves to you and share with you some of the specifics of our program. It is always an informative, fun-filled evening as you explore your child's learning area. We look forward to seeing you on the third.

School open house dates

Don't forget to attend Open House at your schools so you can meet the teachers and visit the classrooms.

Dates are as follows: Deer Hill, Sept. 28; Joseph Osgood, Oct. 3; Jr./Sr. High School, Oct. 4. All events begin at 7:30 p.m.

Temple observes High Holy Days

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

All over the world Jews are preparing for a holiday period so important that it is called the High Holy Days or the Days of Awe.

The period begins at sundown Friday, Sept. 29, with Rosh Hashanah. It ends 10 days later with Yom Kippur.

Most commonly referred to as the Jewish New Year, Rosh Hashanah is the anniversary of the creation of the world. A time of new beginnings, it finds Jews wishing each other a long and sweet life.

But unlike the secular New Year, it is not a time for cutting loose and whooping it up.

Rabbi Stephen Karol of Temple Sha'aray Shalom in Hingham characterizes the holiday as "a good time to look into our lives and evaluate what we have done or left undone."

Referring to a prayer that begins "Now is the time for turning," Rabbi Karol finds it fitting that a holiday celebrating creation comes in the fall of the year rather than in the spring.

"We see all these changes in nature. So now is a good time for us to think about changes we ought to make in our lives."

One of the traditions of Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur requires Jews to ask those they have wronged to forgive them.

Another tradition teaches that if a person honestly seeks forgiveness, it must be given.

Otherwise, it is said, the world would be filled with hate and all would die.

"It's most important to realize that a lot of things happen that are within our control," said the rabbi. "This holiday gives us time to reflect on that and what we can do about those things."

Traditional honey cake

At Rosh Hashanah it is customary to serve a traditional honey cake or lekach .

Here is a recipe for the traditional honey cake from The Complete American-Jewish Cookbook:

3 1/2 cups sifted cake flour
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup sugar
6 eggs, well beaten
1 cup honey
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1/2 cup raisins
1/2 cup chopped nuts
1/4 cup chopped citron
1/2 teaspoon allspice
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
2 tablespoons brandy

Mix and sift flour, baking powder and baking soda. Add sugar gradually to eggs and beat until light. Stir in honey and oil. Add raisins, nuts, citron, allspice, cinnamon, cloves and brandy.

Mix in flour, beating vigorously. Pour into cake pan lined with greased paper. Bake in slow oven (300 degrees F) one hour. Invert pan until cake is cold.

For a more economical cake, substitute four eggs plus 1/2 cup hot coffee or hot tea for six eggs, and dilute honey with hot liquid before combining.

Community center fall classes . . .

The following classes will be held this fall at The Cohasset Community Center.

CHILDRENS' COURSES

PRE-SCHOOL GYMNASTICS

Cohasset Community Center offers pre-school gymnastics classes for girls and boys ages 4-5. The program consists of warm-ups, floor exercises and use of gymnastic equipment including balance beam, vault, and uneven bars. Boys meet on Wednesday from 1:30 to 2:20 p.m. and Friday from 1 to 2 p.m. Girls meet Tuesday from 2 to 3 p.m. Classes run monthly and will continue throughout the year. Cost is $20 per month.

Also, there are currently spaces available in the boys' Tumble Tots program where 3-year-old boys learn simple gymnastic movements on the floor and equipment to develop body control, coordination and confidence. This class meets Monday from 11:15 to noon and noon to 12:45 p.m. Classes run monthly at $15 per month. Early registration for all gymnastic classes is recommended. Call the CohassetCommunity Center at 383-0088.

TODDLER PLAYGROUP

At Cohasset Community Center's Parent and Tot Playgroup, children ages 24-36 months and their Mom or Dad will enjoy crafts, free play, music, stories and making new friends. This group will meet on Monday from 1 to 2:30 p.m. for eight weeks. To register or for further information, call 383-0088.

PRE-SCHOOL MUSIC CLASSES

Cohasset Community Center offers Kodaly Music Classes for children from 12 months to 3 years old. Kodaly's special method of music education is based on young childrens' innate sense of the rhythms inherent in language. Classes meet on Tuesday and Wednesday mornings for children ages 12 to 18 months, 18 to 24 months and 2 to 3 years. Each session runs eight weeks and costs $35. To register or for further information call 383-0088.

CRAFTS FOR KIDS

Cohasset Community Center is offering a unique Crafts course for kids ages 6-12. Children will learn fabric painting, stenciling and make fanciful T-shirts with sequins and stones. Class meets on Tuesday from 4 to 5 p.m. Call 383-0088 to register.

CHARMING TEENS

Cohasset Community Center offers Ingenue Charm Course for girls ages 9 to 14. Young ladies acquire self-confidence through positive attitudes toward developing their best qualities. The course includes hygiene, grooming, poise, exercise, proper use of make-up and wardrobe and personality awareness. This class will meet on Thursday from 4 to 5:30 p.m. for six weeks beginning October 5.

ADULT COURSES

AEROBICS

Cohasset Community Center offers Aerobics classes on Monday, Thursday and Saturday from 8:45 to 10 a.m., Sunday 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., and Tuesday and Thursday evenings 7 to 8:15 p.m. Classes offer a comprehensive workout which stresses cardiovascular fitness, muscular strength and flexibility with as little impact on the joints as possible. Participants do movements which are comfortable for their own fitness level. Sign up for as many classes as you wish and pay monthly.

BODY SCULPTING

Cohasset Community Center offers a class in Body Sculpting on Wednesdays from 8:45 to 10 a.m. at $16 per month. Participants utilize hand and floor weights and large rubber bands to tone and build muscles and increase strength, endurance and definition.

BALLROOM DANCE LESSONS

Places are still available in Ballroom Dance class for couples or individuals who have previously had a beginners course or equivalent experience. Classes meet on Monday from 7:15 to 8:15 p.m. for 10 weeks. For further information call Cohasset Community Center.

INVESTMENT COURSE

Cohasset Community Center offers "Getting Smart About Investing," a complete overview of investment issues including Stocks and Bonds, Mutual Funds, Real Estate, Portfolio Design, Financial Planning and more. Class will meet on Monday from 7:30 to 9 p.m. for eight weeks beginning October 2.

COMPUTER FOR BEGINNERS

Cohasset Community Center offers "Computer for the Novice," a hands-on, individualized introduction to the skills necessary to operate a computer. Class meets on Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m. for 10 weeks at Cohasset High School starting October 5.

North River canoe trip

Set aside Saturday, Oct. 14, for our canoe trip up the North River. The foliage should be out for a scenic paddle. We will meet at the church at 9 a.m. and be back around 4 p.m. Young and old are invited for a beautiful day.

Evening coffees continue

Parishioners continue to meet in small groups in one another's homes through October 15 for coffee and dessert. The discussions have celebrated much that is good and offered wonderful dreams and visions of what may be. When you get your invitation in the mail, by all means plan to attend. You can be part of the future of St. Stephen's. And through the simple gifts of our time, our talents and treasure we can turn some of our dreams into reality.

Making the Bible "user friendly"

An in-depth, comprehensive Bible Study class began Tuesday, Sept. 26 at 8 p.m. The class will meet each Tuesday in the Bartow Room

The Kerygma class is designed to help us become familiar with the Bible so that we can see it as applicable to our day to day life. In other words we hope to make it "user friendly."

Office help needed

Shirley Fitzgerald, a volunteer at the A.I..D.S. Action Committee, 131 Clarendon Street in Boston, called to let us know that there is a need for office help. If you would like to volunteer some of your time or would like more information, you may call her at 545-2952.

Wellspring update

Joan Cellini, director of Wellspring in Hull, conveys her heartfelt thanks to everyone at St. Stephen's for our ongoing contributions. The center, which serves as a source of clothing, food and counseling for the needy, is always in need of additional supplies. Children's clothing would be very appreciated, as would canned goods for their pantry (peanut butter, tuna and "meals in a can"). Dan (383-2151) is our Wellspring coordinator and would be glad to answer any questions. Food and clothing can be drooped off at the church, but should be labeled for "Wellspring."

NE Home at the flea market

Saturday, Sept. 30, the Weymouth Chapter of Friends of The New England Home for Little Wanderers will sponsor a table at the Flea Market to be held on Cohasset Common in Cohasset, sponsored by the Cohasset Community Center, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Proceeds from the sale of items offered at the Friends' table will benefit The New England Home for Little Wanderers, which currently offers 13 residential, day treatment and community programs for children and families in need, including counseling and special education services. Although The New England Home for Little Wanderers is based in Boston, it has facilities for its children in Walpole, Waltham, Dorchester, Jamaica Plain, Norwood and Watertown.

Clay workshops at art center

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, will offer two new courses in clay beginning in October.

These two courses will be slightly shorter than the usual eight-week courses.

FANCIFUL AND FUNCTIONAL FORMS IN WHITE CLAY will be taught by Syma, a well-known sculptor, Mondays from 7 to 10 p.m. beginning October 16. The course will last for six weeks. Using handbuilding and wheel throwing, students will mix traditional techniques with playful variations to create forms in white stoneware. Experiment with effects of underglaze colors, acrylic paints and alternative methods of decorating.

Raku taught by Judy Rossman, who is currently exhibiting in the Bancroft Gallery, will meet for four Saturdays from 12 to 3 p.m. beginning October 21. Students will use handbuilding and wheel techniques to create pieces that explore the ancient Raku firing process. The first two sessions will be held at the Art Center and the second two sessions will be held at Rossman's studio in Scituate.

For a complete listing of workshops and courses, and to register, call weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 383-9548.

Stress management

Saturday, Sept. 30 from 9 a.m. to noon, the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham will offer a one day workshop called "Cool It — Stress Management For Everyone."

Aline Benoit, a professional clarinetist with a degree in psychology, will conduct the workshop. It is open to teens and adults whether they are musicians, speakers, actors, athletes or businessmen. It will teach skills and strategies to manage stress, self doubt and performance anxiety.

"We all have to 'perform' at some time in our lives," explains Benoit, "and anxiety can strike in a classroom, on a stage or in the office. Psychological barriers are the greatest block to satisfy personal success. We need to learn how to relax, deal with pressure, and prepare efficiently to achieve success."

After Aline Benoit graduated as a musician from the Eastman School of Music, she continued her studies in an area that had always intrigued her, the psychology of performing. At Lesley College she received a master's degree in Holistic Counseling Psychology. Since then, she has been a busy teacher and free lance clarinetist. She lives in Hingham with her husband, Peter Hadcock, who plays clarinet in the Boston Symphony, and their son Brendon.

To sign up for this workshop, contact the Conservatory office at 749-7565. Benoit will offer another workshop in November.

Wildlife center festival Oct. 21

The New England Wildlife Center, located in Hingham, MA. will host a Wildlife Festival Saturday, Oct. 21, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The celebration will feature live wild animal presentations, live music, local artists, and crafters. There will also be children's activities, raffles, and a wildlife T-Shirt contest. Food will be available.

Admission is $3 for adults and $1.50 for children. Children under three are free. Rain date will be Sunday, October 22.

For more information on the T-shirt contest and directions, please call 749-5387.

Video Hi-Fi Party

Continental Cablevision will carry a one-hour music special "Video Hi-Fi Party," featuring a potpourri of New England bands videotaped in various Boston locales.

The program was produced by Access Producers, including Jeff Spencer, now Continental's Hingham Program Director, and includes rock, blues, and rhythm and blues selections. It will be shown on channel 53 at 9:30 p.m. on Oct. 3 and Oct. 10.

Nutritionist at MOPS meeting

The Mothers of Pre-Schoolers (MOPS) at Faith Church of the Nazarene will hold a special meeting Friday, Sept. 29 at 9:30 a.m. with Dr. Brenda Braaten.

Dr. Braaten is an Assistant Professor at Framingham State College who teaches Biochemistry, General Chemistry and Nutritional Biochemistry. Dr. Braaten will be talking to the MOPS about nutrition and our children. Dr. Braaten holds a B.S. from Pt. Loma Nazarene College, a M.A. from University of Kansas and a Ph.D. in Nutrition from Tufts University. She will be presenting nutritional information and teaching the mothers how to prepare a nutritional snack for kids.

As always, the MOPPETS (children age birth to 6) will be involed in their own program of stories, songs and plays attended by experienced child care workers.

The MOPS schedule will revert to Wednesday meetings on October 11 at 9:30 a.m.

The MOPS meets at Faith Church of the Nazarene, 258 Rockland St. in Hingham. If you need further information or transportation, call 749-7614.

Decorator guild meeting

The Scituate Gourmet-Decorator Guild will begin its' 1989-90 season on Tuesday, Oct. 10 at 8 p.m. at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church on Country Way in Scituate.

"Autumn Pleasures" is the meeting's theme and the versatility of pumpkin will be demonstrated in some unique recipes and seasonal decorations.

Membership to the club is still open. Meetings are held each month from October to May and the fee is $20 for one year.

Details of future meetings and activities are available at this meeting.

Gulf Assn. annual meeting

An illustrated presentation of the history of the Scituate/Cohasset Gulf will be featured at the annual meeting of The Gulf Association. It will be held at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 11, at the Unitarian Parish House on Cohasset Common.

David H. Wadsworth, Executive Director of the Cohasset Historical Society, will describe The Gulf's rich past and its important contributions to early life in Scituate and Cohasset. A brief annual report will be given and an outline of plans and programs for the coming year. Refreshments will be served.

Independent Living

Continental Cablevision will be re-airing the award-winning documentary "Independent Living Options for Elders on the South Shore" on Oct. 3 and 10 at 6 p.m. on Continental channel 53, covering Hingham, Hanover, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Cohasset.

The Community Television program was produced by members of A.A.R.P. chapter 1139, who also produce the popular weekly program "Senior Spectrum," seen on channel 53 on Tuesday nights at 7 p.m.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT NORFOLK, DIVISION 85P2347 c1

To Lydia M. Kanzler of Cohasset, in the County of Norfolk, the Massachusetts Department of Mental Health, the Massachusetts Attorney General's Office, and to all persons interested in the estate of Lydia M. Kanzler, a person under Conservatorship.

A petition has been presented to said Court by John R. Wheatley of Needham, in the County of Norfolk, and John Clark Wheatley of Elwood, in the County of Norfolk, as Co-Conservators of Lydia M. Kanzler, requesting this Honorable Court for authorization to set up residence, establish an estate plan, and to make certain gifts for reasons more fully set out in said petition.

If you desire to object thereto you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the first day of November 1989, the return day of this citation.

Witness, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this nineteenth day of September, 1989.

Public hearings on wetlands protection

Three public hearings will be held in the next two weeks on proposed amendments to the Wetlands Protection Act which spell out new procedures for collecting notice of intent filing fees.

Under the new procedures, the applicant must send to the state Department of Environmental Protection 50 percent of the filing fee in excess of $25 directly to the state.

Applicants must attach photocopies of the check — sent to the DEP lock box, Box 4062, Boston MA 02211 — along with the new notice of intent fee transmittal form to the regional office.

Under this new procedure, communities no longer will be responsible for submitting monthly payments to the DEP lock box.

This new procedure will be instituted no later than Nov. 1.

Copies of the proposed regulations may be requested from Christy Foote-Smith, acting director, Division of Wetlands and Waterways, DEP, 1 Winter St., Boston 02108 or call (617) 292-5695.

140th anniversary of St. John shipwreck to be observed

In October of 1849 an Irish "famine ship from Ireland's west coast met a tragic end on Cohasset's shore.

The brig "St. John," of Galway, dragging its anchor during an autumn storm, smashed into the submerged granite ledge called The Grampuses perhaps a mile offshore from Windmill Point. Owned on the seafaring island of Lettermullen in Ireland's Galway Bay, "St. John" on that voyage carried a full complement of passengers and crew bound for Boston. Most were from the Counties of Galway and Clare, and of them, 99 souls perished at the Grampuses while only 23 survived.

It was Cohasset's worst, and most tragic shipwreck during an era when many large ocean-going vessels were lost on the treacherous rocks and ledges called the "Cohasset Rocks." Among survivors were the "St. John's" Captain Oliver and First Mate Isaac Cummerford. Of those passengers and crew who perished, about 45 were never identified. Their remains were buried in a common grave at Cohasset's Central Cemetery, where in 1914 the Ancient Order of Hibernians placed a 20-foot Celtic Cross of granite to memorialize the tragic event of a half century earlier. Today, nearly every year, Cohasset's Maritime Museum is visited by several persons from Galway or the island of Lettermullen, for the story of "St. John's" grim end is as well known to the people there as it has become here. Of those who survived the wreck at the Grampuses little is known; Capt. Oliver apparently disappeared and, as one source noted, "was never seen again in the Galway area." First Mate Cummerford enlisted in the U.S. Navy soon afterward.

This year the Cohasset Historical Society will mark the 140th anniversary of the sinking of "St. John" with a special program to be held Saturday, Oct. 7 at its Maritime Museum, Elm Street in Cohasset Center. At this special event, beginning at 3 p.m., Society President Charles Fink will present an illustrated talk upon the subject of the sinking of "St. John". Artifacts and documents relating to the shipwreck will be on view at the museum.

School administrators say students are sober

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Representatives from the school department told the drug and alcohol abuse committee that Cohasset students are basically a clean and sober group.

High school principal Mary Ellen Gallagher told them that in her four years at the Junior/Senior high school she had not seen any students in the halls drunk or stoned. Her teachers had not had kids nodding off in class because they had just been in the bathroom smoking marijuana.

"It's not like it was ten years ago," said Gallagher. "A student who was obviously drunk or stoned would be shunned by his or her peers today."

See related letter page 11

Committee members expressed surprise that there was not more widespread drug and alcohol abuse being reported because, they said, "this is where it starts nowadays."

Police Chief Joseph Kealey supported the school officials statements. "People's imaginations are running away with them," he said. "They're saying there are drug dealers in the halls. But we've only been called in once in the last four years."

The school representatives did not mince words about widespread experimentation with alcohol and drugs.

"The majority of our students by their junior or senior year have experimented with alcohol. The majority have abused alcohol from a physical standpoint at least once," said Mike Gill, head of the health curriculum for the school system.

To a large extent, drug and alcohol consumption by students is conducted off school premises.

Legion officials ask town to restore money for veterans

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Fifty flags representing American Legion posts throughout the United States colorfully encircled the veterans' memorial park at Cohasset Harbor.

Yet, there was a dark cloud hanging over Sunday's installation ceremony for the officers of the George Mealy American Legion Post 118.

For people to say this town can't afford $1,800 to honor its veterans, it's just a disgrace to these men and their families.

Stephen Wigmore, Commander, George H. Mealy Post

Following the brief ceremony, Commander Stephen Wigmore urged the Legion's officers, families, friends and neighbors to attend the special town meeting. His purpose was to solicit support for article 26 - a proposal that will reinstate the money to continue the town's Memorial and Veterans' days observances.

That money was eliminated from the town's operating budget last spring when town officials were under pressure to cut costs.

The Legion, the major contributor to the town's veterans' days observances, wants that money reinstated. They asked selectmen to place an article in the October 10 special town meeting warrant, putting $1,800 back into the town's "celebrations" account.

Without that money, Wigmore says, the annual tributes to Cohasset's war veterans may end.

"And if there are no more parades, the first ones to squawk will be the members of the advisory committee," he said at Sunday's installation service. The advisory committee recommended last spring that the celebrations account be closed after the override was defeated and large budget reductions were made throughout the town.

The money was eliminated from the town's operating budget after the general override was defeated. The revised budget was then brought before the May 31 adjourned town meeting and was approved without question, Executive Secretary Greg Doyon recalled. "There were no questions at that meeting regarding the celebrations budget," he remembered, "although I'm not sure everyone was aware that the account had been closed out."

Advisor Arne Gjesteby was one member of that committee who supported the elimination of the celebrations account.

Selectmen decide to raise fees for harbor boat owners

All Cohasset residents benefit from the harbor, town officials believe, so the cost of maintaining it will now be shared by all.

Selectmen voted Monday night to raise a series of harbor fees, while the harbor committee looks into the legality of charging a user fee for every vessel moored in Cohasset Harbor.

The move was made in an effort to create a self-sufficient harbor operation.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby suggested the board was unfairly singling out the harbor budget, and questioned the budget calculations presented by the executive secretary.

Chairman Burt Pratt explained it was a starting point and other budgets, including the landfill operation, will be reviewed in the future. "This is the first major budget we are trying to put in line so it will be self-supporting. We've got to start somewhere," he said.

As a result of their vote Monday night, mooring fees will be increased from $4 per foot to $5, one of the highest in this area, and the fee for persons on the mooring waiting list was hiked from $5 to $10 per year.

Special town meeting set for Oct. 10

Cohasset's special town meeting is set to begin Tuesday, Oct. 10 at 7:30 p.m. with about 27 articles, none of which will affect the town's tax rate this year. The meeting will be held in the high school auditorium.

The original purpose of this meeting was to delete some appropriations approved by the annual town meeting. Reductions were necessitated by the defeat of the full budget override.

There are, however, a number of other articles within the warrant, including a provision to approve the design of a new town cemetery. Despite receiving approvals by two previous town meetings, support to finance the project by a tax override was defeated. Since that time, a study committee devised a way to complete the design project without adding to the tax rate.

After months of impact negotiations, selectmen and the fire department have approved a revised contract which reduces the year's overtime total to $36,000. Town officials agreed to a $9,500 clerical account for the department along with the purchase of a computer. Selectmen said about $10,500 will have to be taken from the town's free cash account to cover those expenses, but there will be no further impact on this year's tax rate.

Most of the items requesting appropriation approval will be funded from the town's $272,000 free cash account. The total amount of

Street light shutoff

Selectmen decided to shutoff 49 street lights located on accepted streets throughout the town. Another 20 to 25 street lights are scheduled to be disconnected on private ways.

This should save the town about $4,500 each year in payments to Eastern Edison Co.

Selectmen will immediately notify the electric company about the disconnections. They do not know at this time when the lights will be switched off.

The list of scheduled disconnections was comprised by Executive Secretary Greg Doyon, who travelled throughout the town at night, deciding which areas could be darkened and what lights should remain.

A resident may pay $7 per month to Eastern Electric Co. to keep one of these lights from being disconnected. Arrangements must be made by the resident with the electric company.

A list of the disconnected street lights, pole numbers and street names is currently posted at town hall.

They include: Atlantic Avenue, poles 9, 62; Beach Street, 4, 10; Beechwood Street, 3, 27, 54, 70,. and 90; Black Horse Lane, 3,7; Border Street, 15; Cedar Street, 42,47; Chief Justice Cushing Highway, 11, 12, 20; Cushing Road, 6, 12; Doane Street, 13, 19, 21; Elm Street, 12; Green Street, 1; Hammond Street, 51; Highland Avenue, 14; Hugh Strain Road, 2; Hull Street, 11; James Lane, 3; Jerusalem Road, 3,7, 14; King Street, 7, 13, 44; Margin Street, 1, 19; Nichols Road, 5; N. Main Street, 48, 54, 73, 6; Parker Avenue, 6; Pleasant Street, 3, 14; Ripley Road, 9, 18; Sankey Road, 2; Smith Place, 6, 8; Sohier Street, 3, 32, 51; S. Main Street, 42, 115; Spring Street, 4, 8; Summer Street, 42; Woodland Drive, 2.

Congratulations Mary!

Town Accountant Mary Matthews Gallagher is usually better with numbers but nobody is going to blame her.

Mary, who was expecting her first child October 10, gave birth ahead of schedule. Meredith Jane Gallagher was born Friday, September 29. She weighed five pounds, 12 ounces.

Selectmen have extended their best wishes to the town accountant and her husband, John. Mary is now on a two-month leave of absence.

Sergeant vacancy listed

Selectmen will request a new eligibility list from Civil Service because of an anticipated vacancy within the police department for a sergeant.

There is a three year-old list which now includes the names of Officers Richard Abbadessa and Lawrence Ainslie. According to the executive secretary, there is now another officer eligible to take the examination.

Although the state does not require that Cohasset selectmen fill the vacancy from an updated list, selectmen felt a more current list would be in order.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby opposed a new list, saying she did not prefer that method of selection.

It is expected that Sgt. Richard Barrow will retire from the police department next year.

Violations to be investigated

Selectmen did not outline a specific course of action, but they promised King Street resident Harry Ritter that something will be done about the violations at Cohasset Imports.

Ritter attended Monday night's selectmen's meeting to issue a verbal complaint about the zoning bylaw violations at the business located across the street from his home. Although owner Peter Capazolla now has a permit to have 20 cars on that lot, he frequently has many more, Ritter said.

Capazolla did not attend the meeting.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon said he went to the site one day and counted 28 cars on the lot. In addition, Doyon noted, Capazolla has not filed a notice of intent with the conservation commission although he paved an additional area on the lot which is adjacent to wetlands.

Ritter said the paved area creates a parking lot three times as large as the original parcel. "I'm trying to protect the equity in my house," Ritter told selectmen. "How the hell can I do that when I have to look at three acres of used cars? When's it going to stop?" he asked. Ritter said he has previously issued several complaints about the situation to town officials.

Ritter asked that selectmen take some action against the violations, such as revoking his license to sell and repair the vehicles.

Selectman Burt Pratt said that during a previous meeting with Capazzola and his attorney, selectmen ordered the property owner to keep the numbers of cars on the lot to 20. "The board decided he was doing nothing wrong," Selectman Rocco Laugelle said. "I disagreed. I've seen 30 to 40 cars there at a time." He recommended that selectmen take immediate action to ensure that Cohasset Imports does not exceed its license restrictions.

"The licensing rests squarely on our doorstep," Pratt agreed. "Next time, we should move to revoke the license. It's a problem we've got to get onto."

Selectmen vote to raise harbor fees . . .

Clearly the most controversial point of the night was a recommendation to establish a user fee for all boats.

Town counsel will investigate the legality of creating a user fee to be paid annually by every boat owner moored in the harbor. This would affect those with a town mooring, and the 93 boatowners who also pay for private marina services, such as the Figuereido's, the Salt House, and members of the yacht club who own a boat.

Hull has established a similar fee, according to harbor committee chairman Fritz Pfaffmann, whose committee supported the user fee concept. For years, he noted, 52 yacht club members have paid user fees to the town, but Pfaffmann doubted they would continue the practice unless the remaining 41 boaters joined this year.

Members of the committee argued that those boats moored at private marinas are accorded the same harbor services from the town as those boats on town moorings. Pfaffmann suggested that a user fee could be charged on a per-foot basis, or perhaps it could be based on the value of the vessel.

"How can you collect fees from boats paying a very high fee for private marinas? How can you squeeze any more money from these people?" Selectman Pratt questioned.

"I can't see charging these people any more money," Selectman Laugelle said, noting that most people at private marinas would prefer to have town moorings, but they must first spend years on a waiting list.

It was suggested that perhaps the private marinas should be assessed more for their facilities. Town Counsel Richard Henderson explained that those facilities are assessed a real estate tax based on the value of their waterfront property. As commercial waterfront properties which generate income, they are assessed accordingly, he noted.

Other suggestions were made, including a recommendation from Selectman Pratt that commercial fishermen be charged lower mooring and user fees than pleasure boaters. "You're just imposing another tax of people who have to make their living on the harbor," he noted. His suggestion was not supported by the board.

The members of the harbor committee agreed the budget should be self-supporting, but recommended the costs be shared by everyone. Like an excellent school system, the maintenance and operation of the harbor should be supported by the entire town, not simply by those who use it, Pfaffmann said.

The committee endorsed the user fee concept, and recommended that the reaffirmation fee be established. He also suggested that perhaps waterfront businesses, such as Hugo's Restaurant and Kimball's By The Sea, be charged an extra annual fee by the town. "If it wasn't for the harbor, they wouldn't have the business they do," he stated.

Selectmen explained that those tax payments are matters to be reviewed by the assessors.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby suggested that the real estate value throughout the town is directly related to a number of amenities, including the harbor. "We should all pull together, not apart," she stated.

Town Counsel also suggested that a system of fines could be created by the harbormaster for services he provides boaters who use Cohasset Harbor. For instance, he suggested, if the harbormaster discovers a boat obstructing travel within the harbor, that boat could be fined $100.

The harbor committee decided to go along with a $5 mooring fee, but only if the user fee was also established. Selectmen said the committee could work with town counsel in establishing that fee.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon originally suggested a $7 per foot mooring fee, particularly since people are willing to pay up to $100 per foot for private marinas. With a higher mooring fee, waiting list and reaffirmation fees, the harbor operation would net $55,000 to make it a self-sufficient budget, Doyon stated.

Selectman Ned Tebbetts calculated that a $5 mooring fee would bring in $14,000 less than the $7 per foot rate, but the user fee could make up half that deficit. "I'm willing to see the town absorb the extra $5,000 because the town benefits as a whole from the harbor," he said.

Although Selectman Diana Kornet agreed with a recommendation from the executive secretary to establish a "reaffirmation" fee of $5 for those 240 persons who wish to continue on the waiting list, the remaining board members would not go along with the suggestion.

"I don't know how you could charge for that," Selectman Rocco Laugelle said, noting that reaffirmation now requires the person to notify the harbormaster in writing. "That would be ridiculous. I'll be damned if someone has to pay $5 to sign his name."

"It's highway robbery to pay to say, 'yes, I want to wait 20 years to get a mooring,' " Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt added.

ABCC hearing on license slated

The state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission will hear an appeal of the town's refusal to transfer a retail liquor license from the Cohasset Central Market to Cohasset Plaza on Rte. 3A.

The hearing will be held in Boston on October 12. Local developer Donald Staszko requested the license transfer last month for a liquor store he is planning to construct at his Rte. 3A plaza. His request was unanimously denied by selectmen.

Last February, selectmen revoked Central Market's liquor license because the store had been closed for nine months. The license was revoked despite an offer by Staszko to purchase the Main Street business from owner James Finucane of Marshfield. Finucane appealed the selectmen's decision, and the ABCC ruled that the owner should be given an extension of time to sell the business.

In the meantime, Staszko attempted to lease the store from Cohasset Savings Bank, but the bank refused the offer.

Peter Logan, owner of Cohasset Liquors on Rte. 3A, is opposed to the license transfer, saying there is no need for another liquor store within the town. He attempted to intervene in the October hearing, but his request was denied by the state agency.

Chiropractic for Health

EXERCISING CAUTION

Repeated movement in an unnatural position in the pursuit of fitness can have just the opposite effect. For instance, many exercisers stretch to touch their toes with knees in a locked position and a bouncing motion. This exercise puts a strain on the lower back that can result in pain. Instead, the knees should be allowed to bend slightly, and the exerciser should remain in a bent-over position without bouncing for three full breaths. Leg lifts that are performed while the exerciser is lying on his back and simultaneously raising both legs presents another problem. This exercise can lead the pelvis to rotate. It should be eliminated from the exercise program. Instead, turn to the chiropractor for a list of safe back-strengthening exercises and performance procedures.

In today's exercise conscious society, the science of chiropractic is of even greater importance. From dealing with existing problems to serving as a preventive measure, helpful hints and procedures can be provided that will enhance the well-being of the individual. For the chiropractic exam that can make a difference to you, call SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC. Located at 80 Front St., Scituate Harbor. Tel. 545-7388. By appt. Early morning and late evening appts. Workers Comp cases, VISA, M/C and most insurance plans accepted.

❑ The American Academy of Medical Administrators in Southfield Michigan will honor Hugh C. McEwan of Mission Viejo, California at the 32nd annual Conference and Convocation, October 12-14.

The status of 'Diplomate in Health Care Administration' will be conferred on him in recognition of his many significant contributions to health care delivery in North America and his unique role as Founding President of the Academy.

Mr. McEwan, a resident of Cohasset for most of his life, was educated at Boston and Harvard Universities. During World War II he served as an officer in the Army Medical Administration Corps. Among his many military awards is the medal for the European, African, Middle Eastern Campaign with a bronze star for each of the battles of Northern France, Rhineland, and Central Europe. He has the rank of Major, Medical Service Corps, USAR Ret. He is a Fellow of the Academy and has held management positions in Veterans Administration hospitals in Massachusetts and in Pennsylvania. He was Executive Director of the Judge Harry K. Stone Child Guidance Clinic and the Old Colony Association for Mental Health serving southeastern Massachusetts.

❑ Congratulations to CHS 11th grader Melissa Christoffel. She was awarded a second place in the recent Scituate Art Association's "Let's Draw the Lighthouse" contest. And, the same week placed third overall in the Annual Heritage Days Photography Contest.

❑ Edwin Ç. and Susan (Paladino) Brown of North Main Street are the parents of a girl who was born September 8 at South Shore Hospital.

❑ Happy anniversary to Aylsa and Earle Goodrich.

❑ Cohasset won't be the same without Connie Parker here! Connie is moving to Florida next month, and we wonder what the town history will be like without her! She certainly has been dedicated to the Lothrop House and all of the Museums; she must know every gown that is old and in Cohasset. Good luck to you Connie, and Godspeed. You will be missed.

❑ Happy anniversary to William and Rebecca McArthur.

❑ Ozzie Ingram has to be one proud grandfather these days! His granddaughter, Janet Hatfield, was ordained a minister in the United Church of Christ in Hillsborough, New Hampshire. She will be Associate Minister at the First Congregational Church of Santa Barbara, California.

Laura Johnson hops aboard Engine 4, a restored antique fire truck, during last weekend's flea market sponsored by the Cohasset Community Center.

❑ Here's hoping that Beverly Burnside is feeling better!

❑ Gerard E. Reed III, graduate of Northeastern University 1989, a dean's list student, received a BS degree in Civil Engineering. He has accepted a job with Luke Dudek Civil Engineers in San Diego, California. He will be working on the environment, such as wastewater, flood control, water conservation and many other areas. He will start on October 1, 1989. Classmates, let Jerry know if you will be going out to San Diego. I am sure he would love to see you!

❑ Blood Chairman Al Odermatt and Coordinator Corinne Chaill wish to thank the 106 people who went to the Cohasset Red Cross Bloodmobile held at the First Parish House, 23 No. Main Street, on Tuesday, September 26 from 2:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. 93 pints of blood were donated. A thank you also to the many volunteers who contributed to the success of this Bloodmobile, not only on the day of Sept. 26, but all the work that was done prior to it. The next Bloodmobile will be held on January 30, 1990.

❑ If you have noticed that one of Cohasset's "VIPs" is among the missing lately, you are so right! Dorothy Bates is in South Shore Hospital, recovering from surgery. We hope that she is home as she reads this, and feeling super! Can you imagine what would happen if all of Mrs. Bates' former students sent her cards? Her poor mailman would wind up in South Shore undergoing back surgery! Here's to a speedy recovery for a wonderful lady.

❑ There is a group of men around town that deserve your praise the next time that you see them . . . Bob Magner, Jack Lynch, Paul Fiori, Bernie Mulcahy and Clark Chatterton did it again folks! As you know, they run an annual golf tournament to raise money for the Jimmy Fund's cancer research, and this year they made $11,000! The tournament was played at the Hatherly Golf Club, which closes for the day to let the tournament take place. Trophies (in honor of deceased residents) are given at the end of the day. The John Carzis Low trophy went to Jack and Dave Twohig, Jack and Rich Moylan and Brian Geaney. The Jack Moylan trophy for low net was won by Ed Goff, Dick Bunstein, Rich Evans, Peter Berg and Paul Verrochi. The Marsha Litchfield Most Persistent trophy went to Bob Cicotte; the Patricia Litchfield most enthusiastic golfer went to Jake Powers; David Patrolia won the Ed Lynch trophy for getting the ball closest to the pin on the second drive; and, Earl Love won the Fred Troy most improved golfer. Our own selectman, Rocky Laugelle, won a special award for the "most conservative golf attire." He donned flourescent hot pink for the occasion. There was a raffle held after the dinner, and it was a huge success. That's all thanks to the team of Polly Litchfield, Jean McAuliffe, Marge Ritter, Izzie Salvador and Martha Conley (if you ever need a crew of good workers, they are it! Unbelievable!) Again, we salute all that helped to make the event so successful!

❑ We hope that Linda Maynard, who had surgery recently, is home and recovering at a rapid pace! Get well soon, Linda.

❑ Christopher McElroy is working toward being an Eagle Scout, and the Conservation Commission reaped the benefits recently. Chris sanded and painted file cabinets for them to use in the new office at the town hall; without his help they would probably still be using the cardboard boxes used to move the records in! Christopher, we salute you.

❑ Another get well message, this time to Beverly Burnside. Here's hoping that your recovery is a speedy one!

❑ Happy Birthday wishes go to Sue Fone this week. October 8 is her big day, so be sure to give her a hug and a kiss and a big birthday greeting when you see her! She surely is one of Cohasset's finest!

That is all the news for this week. Please call me to let me know what is new in your family!

School officials to look at reorganizing grade schools

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

A population explosion in the Cohasset first grade has forced the school system to hire an additional teacher.

Over the summer, 16 students were added to the first grade rolls pushing classroom sizes to 26 or 27 students in the four existing classes. District policy calls for classes of 20 students at the early elementary level, according to the school committee.

Money for the position was carved out of the $35,000 budgeted for an unfilled curriculum enrichment position. That position has been made part-time in order to fund the new teacher.

Osgood School Principal Jack Creamer has been actively recruiting applicants for the position and the interviewing process is underway. He hopes to have someone on board by mid-month.

"I'm looking for someone with credentials in early childhood education who has also had experience teaching at the first grade level," Creamer told the school committee Monday night.

Students have already been selected for the new classroom. Kindergarten and first grade teachers identified a group of students from each existing class representing a broad range of abilities. Parents were asked if they would consent to the transfer. So far 18 students have signed on for the new room.

School officials expect a steady increase in the number of students in the early elementary grades. This kindergarten class is larger than the current first grade population that is devouring every bit of classroom space available, Creamer explained.

If the trend continues, the Osgood School will be strained beyond its capacity, Supt. Stephen Hart explained.

The school, built in the mid-1920's, has no more classroom space available. It has no cafeteria and an antiquated gymnasium located in the basement.

"We do need to do some planning for next year," said chairman Barbara Bliss.

The most likely solution would be to transfer the third grade to Deer Hill School, making Osgood a kindergarten through grade 2 facility.

The committee also began reviewing the resolutions to be voted on at the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Association of School Committees.

The Association will consider 15 resolutions at the meeting to be held in early November. Subjects range from increasing the number of years a teacher must be employed before becoming eligible for tenure to changing MIAA regulations to permit interdistrict sports teams.

The committee decided against taking binding votes on each resolution.

"Let's look for consensus," said Chairman Bliss. "Basically we will support a resolution, but not to the extent that it adversely affects Cohasset."

A resolution seeking change in the way non-English speaking children are educated was discussed at length.

Under current law, the presence of a single child for whom English is the second language obligates the district to establish a bilingual education program for that child.

Many school districts are looking for more flexibility in developing programs for children whose primary language is not English. There are philosophical, educational, and political debates on the merits of transitional bilingual education versus total immersion approaches.

Committee member Ralph Kidder is doubtful about the effectiveness of total immersion approaches.

"The sink or swim, make them all little Americans is a leftover educational argument from the past," he said. "Older kids who are not literate in their own language have trouble when dropped into an all English-speaking class."

Kidder went on to express the fear that making bilingual education a local option "leaves the door open for people to do all kinds of abusive things. Or good things. It could go either way.

Supt. Hart also expressed reservations. He informed the group that Cohasset has had relatively little experience with bilingual education programs, although recently the district did have a child enter elementary school who spoke a very rare Polynesian language.

"We couldn't find anyone in all of Massachusetts qualified to teach the child in his native language," said Hart. The state Department of Education granted Cohasset a waiver permitting them to place the boy in a regular classroom where he was provided with intensive support and tutoring.

Ultimately the committee agreed to seek additional information on this resolution before making any decision.

Many of the resolutions sought to force the state into full funding of mandated programs. One such resolution asked the committees to provide moral and legal support for a law suit against the state.

"Voting against this would be like voting against apple pie and motherhood", said committee member Ralph Kidder. "But this opens the door to changes in the distribution formulas that could result in a reduction of aid to Cohasset."

In other action, the committee unanimously approved a request to allow the 8th and 9th graders to leave school the day before April vacation begins.

Normally the school committee would oppose any release from school time for an extra-curricular activity. But this trip was considered so obviously educational in nature as to merit an

Committee member Nancy Sandell likened it to a field trip. "We send students on field trips to look at cranberry bogs all the time."

Christopher Ford pointed out that Congress is not in session on weekends. "They must go at a time when they can see something, "he said.

In other business, the committee:

Approved the policy for determining eligibility for free and reduced price meals. Currently, approximately 30 children are participating in the program out of a school enrollment of 1100.

Accepted, with regret, the resignation of Cora Ainslie, cafeteria worker.

Support our veterans

Cohasset's special town meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 10 at the high school auditorium.

There are several articles that will be of interest to many residents, including a new proposal to design a town cemetery, approval of changes to the fire department contract which reduces the overtime account, and a request to reinstate the town's celebrations account.

The special town meeting became necessary after voters defeated a full operating budget override. A partial override victory spared the town's budgets by $204,000, but it required that more cuts be made from the budgets approved by the annual town meeting.

Luckily, the town's free cash account is adequate and may be used to make up more than $100,000 which would have been cut from the budget. But it is still up to the voters of Cohasset to decide if they want to support these proposals.

The design of a town cemetery project will cost about $55,000, but the study committee promises it will not cost the town more money. According to a plan devised by that committee, the design money will be used from a current cemetery account. The cost of the project will likely be added to a short-term loan, which will later be repaid through the sale of lots in the new cemetery.

Town meeting has twice supported this proposal, and members of the study committee believe they will win a third time. Advisory committee members voted in favor of the project.

What may be even more controversial on town meeting floor is probably the least expensive proposal in the warrant.

Members of the American Legion Post are anxious to reinstate the town's celebrations account. This money is traditionally used by the Post to commemorate the town's veterans on Memorial and Veterans days. The money was cut from the town's operating budget after the full general override was defeated.

Members of the American Legion Post are determined to win back this money. It helps defray their expenditures as sponsors of the veterans' events. Members of the Legion see this issue in black and white - the town must show its support for its veterans by reinstating the account. To do anything else would be a slap in the face to Cohasset's veterans.

The advisory committee members, guardians of the town's finances, view these issues on a bottom-line basis. What is the wisest use of the town's limited financial resources is the problem they consistently attempt to solve. There is no good cause or bad cause. Simply, they must decide how the town can continue to operate as taxpayers expect, on a limited supply of money. They cannot compare one account to another.Their responsibility is to judge the merit of each budget and make a recommendation to the townspeople.

We believe that many townspeople were unaware of what a celebrations account was, and that the small amount was eliminated from the revised town budget.

Everyone appreciates and most people participate in the Legion's Memorial Day tribute. No one wants to see that discontinued.

We hope residents are now at least aware that the celebrations budget is up for reconsideration. It is a relatively small amount - $1,800 - and we believe most people will be willing to return it.

Whatever the advisory committee's intentions, we don't believe that residents want to close this account in order to spare another. On its individual merit, the celebrations account is worthy of our financial support.

Cast your vote at town meeting.

Volunteers cleaned up beach

Seventeen hard-working volunteers joined the Coastsweep beach pick-up last Saturday, and filled over 29 large plastic bags with trash from town beaches and marshes.

A large amount of plastic and glass was found. The data will now be compiled by the Center for Marine Conservation in Washington, D.C., as part of a nation-wide effort to assess trash on America's beaches.

A heartfelt thanks to all who participated.

(Staff photos/ Chris Bernstein)

All this debris was collected in a matter of hours during last weekend's clean-up of Sandy Beach. Clean-up coordinator Sharon Becker (left) coordinated Cohasset's participation in Coastsweeps '89. The event was initiated to draw interest and attention to the conditions of the Massachusetts shoreline.

Hussey attends meetings

State Senate candidate Don Hussey attended the Charter Signing Meeting of the Greater Falmouth Women's Republican Club held at the Nimrod Club in Falmouth.

September 26, Hussey attended the Weymouth Republican Town Committee at Weymouth Town Hall. He talked about the state fiscal situation and Republican efforts to elect a balanced Legislature in 1990.

After the Weymouth meeting, Hussey travelled to Waltham to attend the meeting on proposed Constitutional amendments.

Last week, Hussey attended a meeting of the Marshfield Republican Town Committee at the home of Otis and Barbara Carney, and he attended the meeting of Plymouth County Republican Club Members held at the Barker Tavern in Scituate. The guest speaker was Stephen Pierce, a candidate for Governor.

Busy month for Hedlund

State Senate Republican candidate Robert Hedlund addressed the Cohasset Rotary Club Monday, Oct. 2 in his bid for the Norfolk/Plymouth State Senate seat being vacated by Bill Golden (D-Weymouth).

Hedlund recently addressed the Massachusetts College Republican State Convention at Boston University where he was unanimously endorsed by the conventions 300 delegates.

Hedlund talked to the Republican State leaders, September 14, as they assembled at the State Committee headquarters for a "Victory 90" task force meeting. Hedlund attended the Statewide Candidate forum September 2, to meet ward, city and town committee chairmen.

He serves on the Governmental Affairs Committee of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, and met with Rep. Robert Krause (R-Kingston) September 15 to discuss South Shore transportation issues. On September 28, Hedlund met with local representatives at a Plymouth County Republican Club function at the Barker Tavern in Scituate.

The Massachusetts Young Republican's held a reception September 16 where Hedlund served as co-host. This reception featured statewide Republican gubernatorial candidates including: William Weld; Steve Pierce; Sen. Paul Cellucci, Paul Cronin; Lt. Gov. candidate, Rep. Peter Torkildsen.

For more information on Hedlund's campaign, call 617 740-4920.

McDonald resigns as chairman

Brian J. McDonald of Weymouth, Democratic candidate for the Norfolk and Plymouth state Senate seat, has resigned as chairman of the South Shore Coalition.

He held that post since December, 1988.

McDonald is one of only several original members still serving on the Coalition, a ten-town sub-regional planning organization founded in 1985.

His decision to step down comes with his as yet-unofficial plans to seek the state Senate seat being vacated by Senator William Golden, founder of the Coalition. He will continue to serve as an active member of the Coalition and its executive board.

A new nest for osprey in the Glades

The osprey, once an endangered species, is making a dramatic comeback in Massachusetts, thanks to conservation programs, like this one established by the Eastern Edison Company in the Glades. The company builds nests for the osprey at the top of utility polls near the marsh, in cooperation with the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife. Also known as fish hawks, osprey are large, fierce-looking birds, similar to eagles.

Above, Bill Davis, left, osprey project manager for the Division of Fisheries and Wildlife; and Eastern Edison officials Arthur Hatch, president; Joseph Morse, VP and Dave Mannion, environmental manager, watch the installation of the nests, which are supported by diagonal beams and include a perch.

Right, Eastern Edison employees put the nests in place.

There are now osprey pairs nesting in Marshfield and Duxbury and the company hopes the new nests will attract the birds to Scituate. Scituate conservation agent Elinor Foley praised the osprey project, saying the utility poles are "an ideal area to install nesting platforms in the hopes of attracting ospreys." Hatch said Eastern wanted to help "increase the population and range of this majestic bird."

The electric company provides power to 170,000 in the Brockton and Fall River areas.

A mother's experience with a daughter on drugs

Letters

(This letter was written by a Cohasset resident to Jack Golden, chairman of the town's drug and alcohol abuse committee. We believe everyone should take some time to read this emotional account from a woman who has experienced the suffering of drug abuse. We applaud her strength and determination in deciding to make her situation public. If she can help just one person, that difficult decision will be justified. Ed.)

Dear Jack:

So glad to see that you were chosen chairman of the Drug and Alcohol Abuse Committee in Cohasset. It's about time something is being done about this dreadful situation and I can't think of any better person to be involved. I would like to have been involved in some way but because of the care of the baby and the hurt I have been through, I just would not be able to attend too many meetings. I know first hand what it is like to have a family member involved in drugs and alcohol.

My 24 year old daughter tried to commit suicide over the Father's Day weekend because of her cocaine habit. There are too many parents that just turn their heads on the problem but I am not one of those parents. There is something they can do even though their child is beyond the age limit. After getting great advice from Sgt. Brian Noonan about who to see at the court house, I proceeded to do so. I met with a drug counselor and brought papers back to the Cohasset Police Department so that I could have my daughter picked up before anymore harm could come to her. It was the hardest thing I had ever done but in order to save my daughter's life I had her come down to my house the following day and I immediately called the police and had her handcuffed and taken from my home to the court house. I did not know that as my daughter was lying on my couch with a blanket over her shaking in 90° weather that she was having withdrawal symptoms.

Luck wasn't with me on this day as she was appointed a court appointed attorney that believed everything she had told him and she was set free. By this time she had her car repossessed, her insurance cancelled and her license taken away. Along with this there were thousands of dollars worth of bills that she had not been paying. Instead of believing her family, the attorney chose to believe her.

We were very fortunate to have her come back to our home three days later and admit she had a problem. She called a detox center and we drove her to it. When I think of how an attorney could have ruined her life and probably would have found her laying in the gutter I get real mad but my daughter had the sense enough to know she was heading for trouble.

We give her lots of credit for what she's doing because it hasn't been easy for her or her family. She has hung in there when I know it has been really tough to be almost shut into a prison. She has been away since the first week of July and we her family have supported her and visited her on every occasion. They need the support and know you care in order to help them get through this terrible ordeal. I know everytime we visited her we were shocked to see how few families visited their children. We feel that she is on the right road now and she is waiting to get into a halfway house. Hopefully someday she will tell her story so that others may benefit by it.

I'm just sick of hearing parents say that there is nothing they can do about their children's problem and turn their backs on them. There is something you can do and I proved it. Even though the attorney she had ruined it for us we were lucky. Not every attorney is going to win their clients drug problems. While sitting in the court, we saw many boys and girls get sent away because their parents had them brought into court for alcohol or drugs. I would do it again if I had to even though it hurt. Cohasset is no different than any other town when it comes to alcohol and drugs and it's about time parents realize it and stop ignoring the situation.

I have many people ask me how I could have done this to my own daughter and I tell them, "It wasn't easy because I know she hated me at the time but now the hate is over and both her and I know we saved her and love her."

If there is anything I can ever help you out with, I'd be glad to. I had a conversation with Martha Gjesteby yesterday and she hopes I will attend a few of your meetings which I will try to. She has been very caring to me all through my problems.

I have talked to you many times but I don't think you even know my name. Good luck and I wish you the best with this terrible problem.

Judo lessons offered

The Cohasset Community Center is offering Judo lessons for children and adults. Judo teaches self-defense through self-discipline and control: there is no hitting or kicking involved. The instructor, Paul Marchant, is an international Judo champion. Classes will be held Saturdays for 10-week sessions beginning October 16. Boys and girls ages 7-16 will meet from noon to 1:30 p.m. The cost is $60.

For information call 383-0088.

The community center will offer a Speed Reading course Thursdays from 7 to 9 p.m. for four weeks beginning October 19. The cost is $75.

For further information call 383-0088.

AAUW meeting Oct. 19

The next meeting of The Hingham AAUW branch will be held Thursday, Oct. 19 at 7:30 p.m., at the Fuller Museum of Art (formerly the Brockton Art Museum) on Oak Street in Brockton.

Members and their guests will be welcomed by President Mary Ryan and speaker Richard H. Ressmeyer, director. After a business meeting, Ressmeyer will address the group and conduct a tour of the Museum.

President George Bush was inducted as a member of AAUW during its national convention held last June.

Commemorative program

The 140th anniversary of the tragic sinking of the Irish brig "St. John" will be marked by a commemorative program Saturday, Oct. 7. It will feature an illustrated talk at 3 p.m. at the Maritime Museum by Society President Charlie Fink.

In October of 1849 the brig "St. John", carrying a full complement of crew and passengers, struck the dangerous underwater ledge during a storm, and soon sank, drowning 99 persons. The vessel had been bringing immigrants, fleeing Ireland's famine, to Boston. Only 22 persons survived the most tragic of this town's many 19th century shipwrecks.

Interest in its story continues on both sides of the Atlantic. Almost every summer travellers from the Galway area visit Cohasset to hear the story of its fate, to photograph the few relics from the wreck now in the Society's Maritime Museum, and to view the 20-foot Celtic Cross marking the common grave of about 45 unidentified victims of the tragedy, at Cohasset's Central Cemetery. The Cohasset Historical Society's documents archive contains extensive information about the 1849 shipwreck at the Grampuses, and from this information the Society has compiled material to be presented at this Saturday's special program. Following the presentation there will be an opportunity to ride to the nearby Central Cemetery to view the Celtic Cross placed there by the Ancient Order of Hibernians in 1914.

For information, call the Society at 383-6930.

Furniture restoration class

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a furniture restoration-refinishing-revitalization class to be taught by Kenneth Sargent of Cohasset Country Workshops in October. Call the recreation office at 383-6791.

Sessions are four weeks and meet Wednesday mornings from 9 to 11 a.m., at Cohasset Town Hall auditorium. The fee for the eight-hour program is $40 per person. Classes are restricted in size.

Participants should select a small piece of furniture for class work. A chair or small table is ideal. Participants will not only learn the arts involved with restoration and refinishing, but will also have a completed piece of furniture by the end of the session.

Participants are required to bring some supplies with them to class, other supplies will be provided. When you call to register, indicate what piece of furniture you will be bringing to class. Non-Cohasset residents will be accepted for enrollment upon a space available basis.

Stop and Shop car wash

In conjunction with the Stop & Shop Supermarket Company's 75th anniversary, employees of the Cohasset Super Stop & Shop, located at 400 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, will sponsor a car wash weekend Saturday, Oct. 7 and Sunday, Oct. 8, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Proceeds will benefit the Social Services League of Cohasset, Inc.

Similar fundraising activities are also being conducted by employees of each of the 116 Stop & Shop supermarkets as part of the Company's "Food For Friends" program. Through "Food For Friends," each Stop & Shop supermarket has adopted a local charity devoted to combating hunger.

The Stop & Shop Foundations has offered a $75,000 challenge grant to the "Food For Friends" program and will match proceeds raised at store-level, dollar for dollar, up to $750 for each store.

Cancer society auction

The expanded South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society which includes eight South Shore towns, will stage its Second Annual "Harvest of Happiness" auction Friday, Nov. 17, at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

This event, which is scheduled as a major fund-raising effort of the Unit's Crusade Committee, will feature the offering of a wide range of donated articles, gift certificates, tickets to entertainment events and services. All proceeds go to support the public and professional education programs and services to cancer patients and their families on the South Shore.

Committee members are contacting businesses, professionals, sports figures and other individuals in their respective communities for donations. They are also selling tickets at $12.50 to the event which will feature live entertainment, and an auction.

New aerobics show on cable

There is a new fitness program being aired on Continental Cable, Monday and Wednesday nights at 6:30 on Channel 53.

It is a 30-minute aerobics show called the California Fitness Connection. Normandie Nigh, director of the Cohasset-based consulting firm "Fit For Success" is the leader of the show, which is taped in the Continental Studios in North Scituate. In addition to leading the cable show and speaking about fitness and exercise to corporations and youth groups, Normandie teaches co-ed aerobics classes at the Cohasset Community Center.

Also in the show are several local personalties, Patty and Austin Lyne, Kris Kuendig, Judy Volungis, Karen Kirkendall, and Bob Devin.

For more information on the show or for class schedules, call Judy at 383-0088 or "Fit For Success" at 383-2515.

Cub Scout rummage sale

The boys of Cub Pack 110 will hold a Rummage Sale on Monday, Oct. 9, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 379 Gardner St., So. Hingham (off Rts. 228 & 53).

By special bequest there will be games for kids to occupy the children while the parents "hunt for bargains." Baked goods will also be available.

Monies raised will support cubbing activities of Pack 110, Boy Scouts of America. The pack is sponsored by the LDS church of Hingham and is open to boys of the surrounding communities.

CO-OP annual auction

Co-op 6, the combined Democratic Town Committees from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth, will hold its fifth annual Auction Party, Oct. 21 at the Old Ship Church Parish House, 107 Main Street in Hingham.

Tickets cost $5 and are available from local Town Committee members. Doors open at 6 p.m. and the auction begins at 6:30 p.m. A limited number of tickets will be available at the door.

The annual event is one of the main fund-raising activities for the organization. Proceeds benefit Democratic Party activities throughout the Co-op 6 area.

State Rep. Frank Hynes (D-Marshfield), Paula M. Golden and Jim O'Gara will serve as the main auctioneers for the event.

They will be joined by "celebrity auctioneers," consisting of noted state and local Democrats who will gavel down items they've donated to the auction, as well as items donated by individuals throughout the area.

Refreshments will be available throughout the evening.

For ticket information, call Jim Tobin at 925-3532.

Adult art workshops

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset still has openings in the Watercolor and Pastel Workshop, taught by Katherine Smit Oct. 13 and Oct. 20 from 9 a.m. to noon.

Learn to work with watercolor and pastel together to create unique effects juxtaposing wet and dry in this two-day workshop. Students will draw inspiration from still life flower arrangements.

There are also openings in Fanciful and Functional Forms In White Clay. This six week course will be taught by Syma and will meet Mondays from 7 to 10 p.m. beginning October 16. Using handbuilding and wheel throwing, students will mix traditional techniques with playful variations to create forms in white stoneware. Experiment with effects of underglaze colors, acrylic paints and alternative methods of decorating.

Pre-registration is required for all courses and workshops. For a complete listing of courses for both adults and young artists, call the South Shore Art Center from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 383-9548.

Arts seminar in November

The Scituate Arts Association, Inc. (SAA) will present a two-day weekend seminar in pastel portraiture on November 4 and 5. The instructor will be nationally recognized pastel portrait artist, Constance Flavell Pratt. The classes will be held at the Old Ellis Art Center, 709 Country Way, North Scituate.

Constance Pratt is a prize-winning member of the National Pastel Society. She has been both an instructor and a judge at national portrait seminars. She is a member of the prestigious Guild of Boston Artists and is also represented by Francesca Anderson Galleries on Newbury Street in Boston.

Well-known for her courtroom drawings, she is also recognized for her portraits persons. Most recently, she was commissioned by Boston College to do a portrait of New Hampshire Senator, Warren Rudman.

Participants in this intense two-day workshop will find this to be an excellent way to get to the heart of the problem, learn to overcome it and perhaps, reach a "breakthrough". If pastel is your medium and you are looking for a true opportunity for growth, this workshop is for you.

The fee for this very special workshop is $45 for SAA members, $55 for non-members and a $10 model fee. To register, please send your check with your name, address and telephone number to SAA Art Workshops Guild, P. 0. Box 214, Scituate, MA 02066.

For further information, you may call (617) 545-4009 or the SAA Gallery, 131 Front Street, Scituate, telephone (617) 545-6150.

Town officials on cable

Cohasset town leaders will review the warrant for the Special Town Meeting, October 10 while helping to celebrate the second anniversary of the Continental Cablevision show "Pierson to Person" Thursday, Oct. 5 from 8 to 9 p.m.

Phone in questions will be accepted.

Scheduled guests are Town Moderator William D. Weeks, Selectmen Chairman Burtram Pratt, School Committee Chairman Barbara Bliss, and Advisory Committee Chairman Jane Goedecke.

The program is hosted by Wigmore A. Pierson and will be broadcast, live, on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset and Channel 53 in Hull, Hingham, Norwell, Hanover and Scituate each Thursday night from 8 to 9 p.m.

Obituaries

Walter A. O'Meara

Private funeral services were held this week for Walter A. O'Meara, 92, a best-selling author and creator of a long-running radio soap opera. He died Friday, Sept. 29 at home. Burial was in Cohasset Central Cemetery.

Mr. O'Meara wrote two books, The Grand Portage and Minnesota Gothic which became national best-sellers in the 1950's. Another novel, The Spanish Bride, is being re-published this year by the New Mexico Historical Society because of its accurate account of that state's history.

He was a novelist, reporter, logger, government official and advertising executive. He was also the creator and producer of "Young Dr. Malone," a long-running radio soap opera.

He was honored in 1982 with a "Walter O'Meara Day" by his hometown of Cloquet, Minn. and received a woodcarving of a woodsman. He is an honorary member of the Chippewa Tribe

His last book, We Made It Through the Winter, was an account of his childhood in Minnestoa. It describes a time when there was no electricty or automobiles. The author describes in detail his life as the son who took care of the family when his father went off logging.

During World War I, he served at Fort Banks in Winthrop. When he returned to Minnesota, his hometown had been burned to the ground. The only thing he owned was the military uniform he was wearing.

During World War II he helped organize the Office of Strategic Services. After working for one year for Gen. William "Wild Bill" Donovan at OSS, Mr. O'Meara headed the information department for the Office of Price Administration.

Mr. O'Meara attended the University of Minnesota and received a degree in 1920 from the University of Wisconsin.

He was a member of the Phi Beta Kappa, the Players Club of New York, and Sigma Delta Chi, the society of professional journalists.

Husband of the late Esther Moly (Arnold) O'Meara, he leaves two sons, Donn O'Meara of Caracas, Venezuela, and Wolfe O'Meara of Bisbee, Ariz.; two daughter, Deidre Humphrey of Westport, Conn.; 14 grandchildren, including Andrea Tebbetts of Hingham, and 14 great-grandchildren, including Claire Tebbetts of Hingham.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home in Cohasset.

Annie C. Brown

Annie Crawford Brown, 98, a 25-year resident of Cohasset died at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina on September 22.

Mrs. Brown, wife of the late Charles A. Brown, leaves a daughter, Margarite B. Drake of Cohasset; three sons William Brown, Little River, S.C., Charles Brown, Yountville, Calif. and Dr. Melvin Brown, Melbourne, Fla.; 15 grandchildren and 23 great-grandchildren.

She was a member of St. Luke's Episcopal Church of Scituate. The Rev. A. Low conducted a private burial service at Blue Hills Cemetery in Braintree on October 4.

Nutritional workshop

Local nutritionist Patricia Messing is sponsoring a workshop on cholesterol and fat in foods at the Cohasset Community Center, Wednesday, Oct. 11. The workshop, which is open to the public, will be held from 7:30 to 9 p.m. The cost of $10.

Messing will discuss which foods to stay away from. She will demonstrate lable readings and how to figure out how much fat in contained in foods. She will also provide tips, suggestions and recipes for healthier eating.

To register for this one-night workshop, call 383-0088 or 383-2410.

Legion officials ask town to help with veteran tributes

"Don't forget, this was at a time when we were forced to cut about $400,000 from the town's budget. We felt that this was something that could be picked up privately," he said. "The money is used mostly for flags for the veterans' graves. The rest of the money is used for the Legion's party after the parade. At a time when we were cutting teachers and supplies for our children, I thought this was one of the least important items."

Personally, Gjesteby feels that if townspeople must choose between budgets, he would still opt to eliminate the celebrations account.

"We have a situation now where we've had to cut teachers and our students have to pay for their sports. I just don't see why some private organization can't pay for the flags, and the Legion can pay for their own party," he said. Gjesteby, a member of the Cohasset Rotary, said that organization might be willing to defray the cost of the veterans' flags.

The Legion's commander disputes that logic.

"We can't be expected to pick up the tab for everything," Wigmore says. Right now, the George M. Mealy Post pays about $1,000 to place flags at the grave of every Cohasset veteran. In addition, they spend $160 for wreaths at the veterans' memorials. The cost of the band which performs during the Memorial Day parade runs about $800, and then the Legion supplies ice cream for all the children who participate in the Memorial Day tribute.

Every year, Wigmore explains, the Legion expresses its appreciation to the Deer Hill Band for their parade participation by purchasing a musical instrument.

In addition, the local Post prepares a Christmas meal for the residents of 60 Elm Street and sponsors a Christmas party for the children of the 215 Legion members.

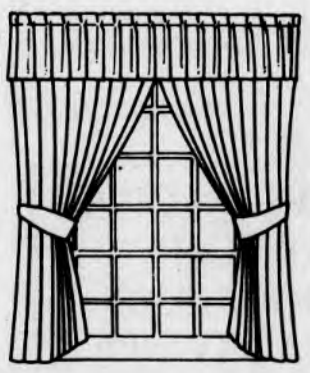
"There isn't a cause in this town that we don't contribute to," according to Past Commander Larry Sousza. "We're asked every year to help out with the hockey and football booster clubs, and we sponsor the girls' basketball team at the high school. We help the town with the annual Easter egg hunt for the kids, and we give to the United Fund, the Cancer Society, the Boy Scouts and the Girl Scouts.

Although they are willing to pay the bulk of the costs for the Veterans' and Memorial day celebrations, the Legion has been traditionally assisted by the town.

"We can't believe this town wouldn't want us to continue to pay tribute to their veterans. These are men from Cohasset who died during war - their families are still here. Their pictures hang along the walls of this Post as a reminder - five from World War I, eight from World War II, one from the Korean War, and eight from Vietnam," he added.

Contrary to the belief held by some residents, Wigmore says, the Post is more than a barroom for the local population of males.

"Anyone who thinks that is entirely wrong," he said. "We contribute a lot to this town. And if anyone says we're just a saloon, they don't know what they're talking about.



"For people to say this town can't afford $1,800 to honor its veterans, it's just a disgrace to these men and their families - $1,800 is not a lot of money to honor our war veterans."

(Postponing the October 15 meeting) The next meeting of the Church Committee will be Tuesday, October 17 at 7:30 p.m. in Bates Hall.

Welcome to Rich Chamberlain

To begin working with our youth program, 7th through 12th grade next week (Oct. 1). Several adult (non-parent) advisors will be sought to work with Rich on the Senior High program, and for the Junior High, Rich will coordinate with those parents to oversee a program administered by him and run by the parents on a rotating basis. Rich, residing in Hingham, is currently South Shore Area Director of Young Life and was for the years 1984-87 Director of Youth Ministries of a Presbyterian Church in St. Petersburg, Florida. He is a graduate of St. Lawrence University and Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary. His dedication and enthusiasm will inspire us all! We will meet him in church just as soon as his schedule permits.

An Invitation

The Members of First Parish in Cohasset cordially invite you to join us in celebrating twenty years of shared history in the life of First Parish and the ministry of Edward T. Atkinson (installed October 22, 1969): Sunday, October 22, starting with a worship service in the meeting house at 4 p.m. Reception to follow in the Parish House.

For the Coming Week:

Thursday, Oct. 5, 9-noon, flower group; Sunday, Oct. 8, 10 a.m., Worship service, children in church, no church school.

First Parish services

REV. EDWARD T. ATKINSON, Minister, Parish House (617) 383-1100, 23 North Main Street.

HIGH SCHOOL YOUTH: Eleven high school age young people attended an exploratory meeting at the Parish House to discuss what if any youth activities should be added to the program of the First Parish. Most of the young people attend Sunday morning services during major holidays but rarely attend at other times. None were presently interested in participation in the Senior Choir or Bell Choir, but several are assisting with child care and expressed an interest in helping with our religious education program. Six members of the group were interested in organizing another Christmas party for children from the Wellspring House and several offered to help with child care for our Homeshare family when that program gets underway. There was strong interest in forming a high school youth group that would meet two times a month on Sunday evenings around the hour of 7 p.m. About half of the group was interested in educational and service programs, but the primary attraction would be recreational activities and a weekend trip to be held in the springtime. It was agreed that for an initial program the group would meet at the Parish House on Oct. 15 at 6 p.m. to go bowling with a pizza party to follow. All high school age youth are invited to attend.

WOMEN'S BOOK GROUP: The Women's Book Group will meet on Oct. 24 at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Kay Meacham, 47 Black Rock Rd., to discuss the book The Life and Loves of a She Devil, by Fay Weldon. All are welcome to join!

VILLAGE FAIR: With regret the Parish Committee has agreed that we should withdraw as a sponsoring organization of the Village Fair. We are one of the founders of the Fair and enjoyed 48 years of participation in this event which brings together five churches from our community. In recent years, however, it has become increasingly difficult to find willing volunteers to work with the Fair, and our share of the responsibility has been carried by an ever smaller number of people. Rather than overwhelm the few remaining workers with this responsibility, or fail to carry our fair share of the work, we have decided that it would be best to retire at this time. We will make our building available to the Fair this year and encourage those individuals who would like to participate to do so. We also hope that our members will continue to enjoy the day of the Village Fair, even though we will not be a supporting organization.

—Deborah Eaton, Parish Committee Chair

MARRIED AT THE MEETING HOUSE... On September 23, Donald Walter White and Judy Lynn Olsen.

Lots of action and signs of promise for CHS Skippers

It was not a season opener to remember for the Skippers of Cohasset High School, as the varsity football team struggled against a victorious Norton High School squad. Cohasset attempted several manuevers to get on the score board, but they were thwarted in their hopes for a season-opener victory.

(Right) The despair of the hometeam fans was evident by the day's end as Norton walked away from Milliken Field with a 28-7 win over our favorite team.

Home opener tarnished for CHS

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

After the Cohasset High School football team had just marched 73 yards down field to score on their first possession, it looked like it was going to be a perfect home opener for the Skippers last Saturday afternoon at Milliken Field.

But that optimism quickly changed on their next series when, driving for a two-touchdown lead, they fumbled the ball at the Norton 29. As a result, the visiting Lancers (2-1 overall, 2-1 in the South Shore League Small Schools Division) went on to record the final four touchdowns of the game, spoiling the Skippers' festivities, 28-7.

"It really changed the complexion of the contest when we fumbled on our second possession," said Cohasset coach Phil Pisano. "We could have made the score 14-0, but instead we trailed 8-7 at halftime."

The Skippers initial drive consisted of 63 yards rushing and two five-yard penalties on Norton.

On second-and-six at the Norton 33, senior tri-captain Pat Conroy plowed through the line for a 19-yard gain down to the 12. Three plays later, senior quarterback Mike Ellinger sneaked in from the one, on a broken play, for the score. Ellinger added the extra point, 7-0.

On the next drive, the Skippers continued to stick with their potent running attack. Five straight running plays moved the ball 59 yards (Conroy had 28 on three carries, while senior halfback Curt Ludlow rushed for 31 on two handoffs) to Norton's 29. Senior halfback Terry O'Leary then took the pitchout from Ellinger and ran into a Norton brickwall. He tried to spin away but only to lose the ball.

Cohasset (0-3, 0-2 SSL) maintained its 7-0 lead until a Norton interception set up their first touchdown midway through the period. After a 37-yard strike on third-and-17 that gave the Lancers a first down at the Cohasset 6, quarterback Bill Portanova found wide receiver Tom Robbins on a timing pattern in the corner of the end zone. Initially, it appeared from an opposite angle that Robbins trapped the ball but the officials ruled his hands were between the ball and grass. From there, Portanova threw to Jason St. Germain for two points, 8-7.

"We got burned on the deep pass," Pisano said. "We stress to get back on the pass, but they got behind us. We have to keep working on our pass coverage."

Both clubs touched the ball one more time but were unable to mount a threat as the first half ended.

"We played a great first half," Pisano said. "It was easily our best half all year, which is a good sign. The offensive line had great surges to open holes for the runners."

In the second half, Norton took advantage of Cohasset's man shortage when they produced 14 points in two minutes. Hakim Walker (166 yards, 16 carries) broke loose for a 63-yard touchdown jaunt, followed by a 40-yard interception TD return by linebacker Mike Choi. George Greene closed out the scoring on a 20-yard spurt with 8:25.

"The kids played their hearts out," Pisano said. "We had them on their toes in the beginning. We'll just have to come back next week to get our first victory. We don't have nothing to be ashamed of. I am very proud of this team."

Ludlow was the top rusher for Cohasset with 99 yards on nine carries, while Conroy finished second (97 yards, 12 carries).

Cohasset will travel to Carver this Saturday hoping to snap their three-game winless streak. On the other hand, Carver will try to extend their winning streak to two games after capturing their varsity win ever in 10 tries last week against Old Colony.

S.S. Hockey League action

The S.S.H.A. kicked off its regular 89-90 season with three exciting games Sunday, Oct. 1.

The first game featured a 4-0 victory by Sullivan Tires over the Varmints. Mike Oliva wearing his rabbit's foot, made some great saves to preserve his shut out. Walter Ciovaco netted his first Hat Trick of the season and Carl Nantel batted in his first after 3 unsuccessful attempts. Kevin "Bad Boy" Malloy had 2 penalties, for the Varmints, offsetting the good plays of John Morgan.

The second game between Gulf Construction and Gardens Pub had the fans on the edge of their seats until the final buzzer. Gardens Pub wearing their new black shirts forechecked well to keep Gulph off stride all night. Goals were scored by Bob Brodeaur, Bill Shea, Bob Mullen and the game winner John "77" Kearny. Gulph scores were by Charlie Enwright, Rollie Lacy and Chuckie "Trickler" Nash. Gardens Pub owner, John Findley, threw a wild victory party for the players and fans after the exciting game.

The last game between Roman Garden and Bare Cove was no contest for the first period. Bare Cove lead 3-0 with Harry Riley, Tom Chisolm and Glenn Peterson scoring unassisted. Bare Cove added 3 more in the second with Steve Lavangie scoring two and Bob Nihtler once. Bare Cove was leading 5-0 when Dave "Piggy" McNulty tallied two to make it 5-2. Jack McCarthy also scored two, one at the end of the second and one in the third. Bare Cove 6 Roman Garden 4. Gene Anderson took his usual Hook Penalty in the third period.

School news

Faculty self-evaluation planned

Cohasset Junior/Senior High School's faculty members met September 21, to listen to tips on preparing for the school's self-study offered by a staff member from the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

Dr. Pamela Gray-Bennett provided the staff with an overall picture of the Commission's evaluation procedures and Standards for Accreditation during the hour-long session.

Dr. Gray-Bennett noted that the New England Association is a voluntary accrediting agency of over 1650 public and independent schools, colleges and universities, and vocational, technical and career institutions. Of these, approximately 690 schools have been accredited through the Association's Commission on Public Secondary Schools. The Commission works with individual schools to improve the quality of education through a continuous process of evaluation and accreditation.

Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher said, "To become a member of NEASC, a school must meet the Commission's Standards for Accreditation. The purpose of the 24 month self-study is to provide an opportunity for our staff to review all our educational programs to determine the degree to which our school meets those rigorous standards. The standards were established to ensure that the necessary ingredients for effective education exist within the school."

One of the major requirements for NEASC membership is that the entire school be evaluated following the extensive self-study by the staff. This evaluation is conducted by a visiting committee of professional educators, sent by the commission, who review all materials prepared by the faculty in the self-study, visit classes, and talk with students, teachers and administrators during their four-day visit to the school. Cohasset Junior/Senior High School has been scheduled for a visit by the evaluation team in October, 1991.

Second fundraiser for sports

Buy your way into the "Cohasset 300" Club by supporting the Friends of Cohasset School Sports.

The current fundraising effort by the Friends will net someone a $1,000 jackpot with $500 for the second prize and $300 for third. The drawing will take place at Cohasset's Homecoming game October 21.

Members of the Friends will be selling raffle tickets at $20 per ticket for the "300 Club." Tickets are available from members, at all home football games or by calling the high school at 383-6100.

This fundraising effort comes on the heels of the first fundraising event which netted $6,800. It was donated to the Cohasset High School athletic department. These funds are used to offset the costs of all sports.

The Friends of Cohasset School Sports has committed to raising approximately $20,000 by the end of the school year. With the success of the "300 Club" raffle, the Friends will have reached more than the half way point in its goal. Only 300 tickets will be sold for this raffle.

The school administration reports that even with a user fee, high school athletic participation is up for the fall season, indicating the support of students and families for athletics in Cohasset.

Dance workshop offered

The PSO Curriculum Enrichment Committee members have been working along with South Shore Conservatory Dance Director, Sharon Weber, to offer a Dance Repertory Workshop to the students of Cohasset in Grades 4-12.

At the Deer Hill School, Sharon will be auditioning on Tuesday, Oct. 10 at 3:30 p.m. in the gym. This work shop will present a spring concert entitled, "We are the Children," which will give the children of Deer Hill an opportunity to speak out to the adult world. They may choose to dance about their inner feelings, concerned fears, appreciations or questions to one special adult in their life or to the adult world as a whole. An environment will be created with guidance to express their very special and personal message. This will be a thirty-hour, workshop meeting once a week for one and a half hours for twenty weeks. This concert would require more than 25 students working on all aspects of the performance.

Osgood Playpark Update

A reunion is planned for Saturday, Oct. 14, at 8:30 a.m.: 1. To install a perimeter around the sandboat and jet ski area; 2. To fill that area with peastone gravel; 3. To add more peastone under the swings and bring them to proper level; 4. To install uprights on ralling in lighthouse module; 5. General Fixing-up.

We will provide coffee and sodas. With many hands we should be finished by noon. Bring a rake, hammer, shovel. Call the school (6117); Ann Whiteley (9310); Rhonda Myers (2969) or Linda Keller (6873) to sign up.

Monte Carlo Night

Tickets are currently on sale for the PSO's fourth annual Monte Carlo Night which will be Saturday, November 4 at 8 p.m. at the Cohasset Community Center.

Tickets can be purchased for $15 per person from Cheryl Bugley (9482) Mary Margaret Senechal (6297), Allison Ulmer (2672) or any other board member.

Carriage House book fair

The Carriage House Nursery School will be holding its annual book fair October 17, 18 and 19 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Parish House.

Books are supplied by the Little Book Room in Milton and offer a broad selection for preschoolers and the elementary grades. Plan to stop by and take a look.

Apple Computer giveaway

The PSO is sponsoring an "Adopt A Neighbor" campaign to aid in the quest for free Apple Computers for the schools.

The children have been asked to give the envelope to a neighbor who does not have children in our schools. They will agree to collect the tapes on a weekly basis and bring them to school.

If each student adopts one neighbor, we will have doubled the participation.

There are additional envelopes in the school office for anyone who wants to participate as of the present time we have over $75,000 in receipts. Keep up the good work!

Health education program for all ages

The Cohasset Public Schools' Health Education program is a sequential and comprehensive curriculum designed to provide students of all ages with the knowledge and skills necessary to make favorable decisions about health related issues. I believe that health education is a fundamental and essential part of every student's education, and is especially important considering the difficult decisions that young people are being forced to make in today's society. Further, I believe that the acquisition of this type of knowledge is best achieved through a concerted effort on the part of all sectors of American society, including: families, schools, religious institutions, the media, communities, public and private organizations, etc.

The health education department is committed to communication and cooperation with parents in such a way so as to enhance the health and well-being of our young people. In fact, the purpose of this release is to make parents aware of what's going on in regards to the formal health instruction of the children in the school system. More importantly, this parent-school communication will assist in reinforcing healthy attitudes and values, and empowering the students to make healthy, appropriate decisions about their behaviors.

During the weeks between Sept. 11 and Oct. 26, the Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood schools will be participating in health education programs in their individual classrooms. The "theme" for this period of time is safety, and each grade level will be concentrating on some aspect of this theme as part of their health education instruction. We all need to work together in reinforcing healthy attitudes and assisting young people to acquire the skills necessary to choose healthy behaviors.

The general objectives of the "safety" unit include the following:

The kindergarten student will: understand that he or she must begin to assume some of the responsibility for his/her own safety; crossing the street, fire safety, playing safely, being safe at home, seeking adult help, and safety with strangers.

The first grade student will: become aware of many basic safety hazards which one might come across, re: pedestrian, bicycle, fire, medicines, toxic substances, plastic bags, electricity, etc.; understand that virtually all accidents are preventable; begin to assume responsibility for personal safety; understand that some secrets should be told (sexual abuse prevention).

The second grade student will: be aware of personal responsibility for his/her safety; practice rules of bicycle safety; observe safety precautions around animals; be able to explain what to do if one's clothing catches on fire; understand how the senses keep us safe; explain safe ways to use medicine if it is needed; realize that bug sprays are to be used sparingly and by adults; understand that sometimes it's O.K. to tattle (preventing physical abuse).

The third grade student will: assume more responsibility for his/her own safety; practice bicycle safety rules; engage in safe practices when swimming; observe car safety precautions and wear safety belts; is alert to the dangers of breathing model airplane glue or other volatile substances; explain safe ways to use electrical equipment and tell how to keep safe in an electrical storm; be alert to safe ways to answer and use the telephone; understand how to safely deal with strangers and know whom to contact in case of questions concerning the behavior of adults.

The fourth grade student will: be aware of unsafe places to play; be able to list four safety rules for pedestrians; be able to list five safety guides for bicycle drivers; be able to explain how to help someone who is in distress in the water; be knowledgeable about important safety guidelines in using any medicine; assume a good deal of personal responsibility for his/her own safety; understand that a trusted adult must be informed when one is treated or touched in ways which make them feel uncomfortable.

The fifth grade student will: practice bicycle safety guidelines in everyday living; describe first-aid procedures for a small cut, a splinter and a broken bone; demonstrate knowledge of the Heimlich maneuver; describe how to report a fire correctly and demonstrate the procedure; understand the dangers of smoke and gas inhalation and the safe way to leave a smoke-filled room.

The sixth grade student will: be able to explain what to do in case of poisoning by mouth; demonstrate knowledge of the Heimlich maneuver; list four safety guidelines for swimmers; be aware of the need to look ahead and prevent accidents in sports; use correct first aid in the case of minor injuries; be able to differentiate between: a. affection and sexual manipulation and abuse, b. punishment and physical abuse, c. other forms of child abuse.

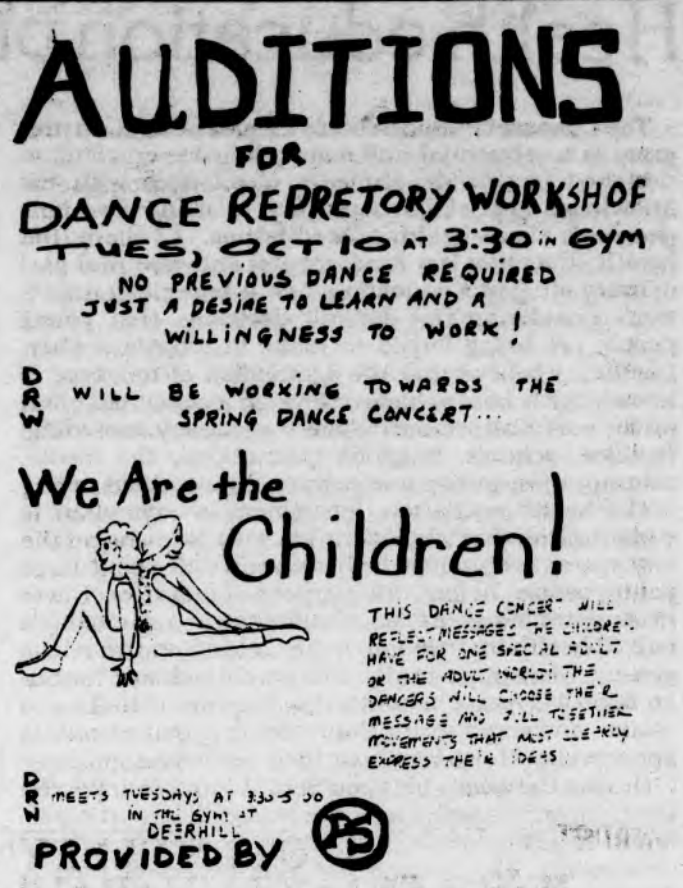
Drama Workshop to begin

The Cohasset Drama Workshop will begin its 15th season October 13 and 14 under the direction of Ron Emmons with a production of "The Dining Room."

In an abridged form "The Dining Room" won the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival twice in the last four years.

Weber has also devised a program for the Jr./Sr. High school students. This workshop will present a spring concert entitled "It's a Small World." This workshop will provide the dancer with a vehicle for which to communicate concerns, thoughts and feelings about a global issue of which they feel strongly about. Once the dancers have chosen their issues and messages, they will begin to pull from improvisational work in class movements which will most clearly reflect their ideas. This concert would require, including behind scene participation, between 30-40 students.

Dates and times for the high school workshop will be posted at the school.



The play is set in the dining room of a well-to-do household, the place where the family assembled daily for breakfast and dinner and for special occasions. The action is comprised of a mosaic of inter-related scenes—some funny, some touching, some sad—which create an in-depth portrait of upper middle class life.

Returning to "The Dining Room" from last year's state finalist production of "This Is A Test" are seniors Jason Cameron, Pam Haase, and Zach Hochkeppel; juniors Melissa Christofel, J. Gaston, Doug Moe, and Jen Plante; and sophomore Lynda Hague.

Completing the cast and making their Drama Workshop debuts are freshmen Shona Hislop, Erin McAllister, and Katie O'Sullivan; sophomores Laura Andrews, Joe Gagliano, Carole Smith, and Ali Welz; junior Mike Cisneros; and senior Matt Silva. Senior Deana Genovese is serving as assistant to the director.

"The Dining Room" will be presented in the Cohasset High School auditorium at 8 p.m. October 13 and 14. Tickets are available for $3 in advance and $4 at the door from cast members and at the high school.

Historical Society 1990 wall calendar available

Cohasset's shores and harbor are featured in the Cohasset Historical Society's all-new 1990 wall calendar now on sale at several retail shops and stores in the town.

In this edition, old photographs of early Cohasset—up to a century or more ago—are matched by modern pictures of historic Cohasset Harbor and along the seashore. Among the early photographs are rare pictures from Society archives, showing the harbor's fishing wharves and the large schooners once found here. Government Island during the 1850's, when Minot's Ledge Lighthouse was under construction, is shown, with an unusual view of the original tidal mill building of Elisha Doane located at the entrance to the Gulf on nearby Border Street.

In a picture demonstrating the truth of the old saying that "winters were a lot worse" in earlier days, there is a photograph of a large sailing iceboat cruising on the icey surface of the "Gulph," where none now go. A large fishing schooner dating from the 19th century, Tower Bros. "E.A. Lombard" is shown moored near today's Mill River Marina. "Lombard" is representative of the two-masted schooners sailing to and from our harbor on fishing voyages, and carrying lumber or coal.

Minot's Ledge Light, in an early portrait photo, is matched by a modern aerial view taken by Cohasset's Rich Silvia showing the famous tower as it appeared two summers ago, with Watch Room, Lantern House and roof removed for restoration. Yet another view is that of a placid summer's day at Sandy Cove. In all, there are 13 early views of Cohasset, each matched by a modern view of the same—or close by—location.

The Historical Society's 1990 wall calendar of Cohasset scenes "then and now" is available through the Society or at the following local shops and stores: Cohasset News, Cohasset Savings Bank, the Cohasset Bookstore, Fleming's, Designer Creations, Buttonwood Books and Toys, Cohasset Liquors, Cohasset Jewelers, the Quincy Cooperative Bank, South Shore Bank, and Colonial Pharmacy. All shops and stores are donating their services in carrying these unique calendars for the benefit of the Cohasset Historical Society, at the Society's regular price of $7.50 per calendar.

Recreation programs in October . . .

Aerobic exercise classes, taught by Margret Watson, may be joined at any time during the year at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium Tuesdays and Thursdays at 6:15 p.m. You may register at any class. The fee of $40 is based on attending two classes per week, for an eight-week session. The fee will be pro-rated based upon the number of classes you take per week, and the number of classes remaining in the session.

BOATING SAFETY COURSE

Flotilla 1207, of the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary will be offering another six-week Boating Safety Course for all ages beginning Wednesday, Sept. 27, at 7:30 p.m. at Cohasset High School Audio-Visual Room. Pre-registration is necessary by calling the Cohasset Recreation Department Office at 3983-6791. There is a $10 fee for course text and materials. All youth 16 years of age and under who want to operate a craft of 25 horsepower or over must complete this course.

DOG OBEDIENCE CLASSES

Dog Obedience classes are under way for the fall session. The recreation department is accepting registrations for both an intermediate and beginner class, scheduled to begin soon. Call the recreation office at 383-6791, as soon as possible because classes fill quickly.

AFTERSCHOOL SPORTS

Afterschool sports and games programs for grades K through 6 are in the process of being reorganized and restructured because funding no longer exists for the operation of these programs. However, we expect to be able to provide the programs with a different format.

School officials say students are sober . . .

"Kids who are selling or possessing drugs are quite sophisticated. They don't make it easy for us to identify and catch them," said Superintendent Stephen Hart.

Gill added, "Kids use it wherever it's convenient, where they can get away with it and enjoy it." Local spots for consumption are Sandy Beach on the weekends and unsupervised parties in private homes.

The responsibility of parents to supervise their children was a recurring theme at the meeting.

Gallagher told the group that she had had parents attempt to excuse their child's intoxication by saying things like"Oh, she only had three drinks before the prom."

Society tends to condone what it terms responsible drinking and students are constantly bombarded with mixed messages from the media and adults, according to Superintendent Hart.

"Too often we concentrate on young people. We need to look at the effects of peer pressure, the influence of advertising, the examples set by sports and music celebrities."

Police Chief Kealey echoed his sentiments. "Law enforcement has maxed out. We're losing. We need to rely on parents."

The Cohasset school system has tried to respond to the problem with a comprehensive health curriculum that stresses information about the effects of drug and alcohol abuse combined with training in making healthy choices and wise decisions. The program begins in kindergarten and continues through the twelfth grade. Information is also provided to the parents of students.

Direct assistance is also provided to students and their families. When a problem is detected by a classroom teacher or member of the school staff, a referral is made to the counseling services provided by Gill and members of the guidance department.

The most likely time that a problem will be detected is at school dances. According to Principal Gallagher, the Homecoming Dance is notorious for students showing up drunk.

Gallagher told the committee the school has a firm policy of detaining students who are intoxicated to avoid problems with drunk driving.

"We send them home with their parents. Then they have to come in Monday with a parent for a conference." Gallagher told the committee that there is also an automatic suspension.

The school is planning on conducting a survey of drug and alcohol use among students to help them respond more appropriately to the problems.

"We know we have to do more," said Mike Gill.

Gill hopes to begin the survey in October or November so the rest of the year can be spent implementing any changes indicated.

Gill hasn't selected the grade levels that will be surveyed yet. The committee offered to assist the school in undertaking a larger survey than had been contemplated.

"We all have to work together," said committee chairman John Golden.

Golden also read a poignant letter he had received from a Cohasset resident. The writer told Golden that she knew first hand the devastation that drug addiction has on both the addict and the addict's family.

She told how her cocaine-addicted daughter tried to commit suicide. In desperation the mother tried to have her adult daughter committed for treatment.

Finally, the daughter realized that she needed help after losing her car, her insurance, and running up huge debts.

The young woman entered a detoxification program in July and hopes to enter a halfway house soon.

The mother concluded by saying, "It wasn't easy at the time, but now we both know that it saved her life. I would do it again."

The committee plans to meet every Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Town Hall. However, next week's meeting will be held on Wednesday night because of Town Meeting.

Pack 38 Cub Scout news . . .

Welcome to Pack 38 Cub Scouts! The Pack meetings will be held from 7 to 8 p.m. on Wednesdays at the Deer Hill School. Please be on time so we can begin our meeting promptly. All parents and cubs should attend and siblings are invited.

Future Pack Meetings: Sept. 27, Oct. 25 (Halloween Party), Nov. 29, Dec. 20(Christmas Party), Feb. 11 (Sun. Blue & Gold Dinner), March 28 (Pinewood Derby Race), April 25 (Crossover), May 28 (Memorial Day Parade).

The Bowl-A-Rama will begin October 16 through Oct 29. This is our only fundraising event for our Pack 38 treasury. Each scout will receive a Bowl-A-Rama pledge sheet. The scout will get sponsors from their friends, relatives, or neighbors to pledge 1-5 cents per pin for strings which the scouts bowl. The scouts can bowl with their den as a den meeting for that week. They will bowl at the Cohasset Community Center. The money received from the pledges goes to the Old Colony Council, Pack 38 and towards prizes for the participating scout. The pledge money should be returned one week after the scout bowls to Linda Farrag (9519).

If anyone has old scout uniforms and would like to donate them to Pack 38 we would appreciate them. Call Linda Farrag (9519) or Carol Bestick (1410). Thank you.

SAVE THOSE PINK REGISTER TAPES. . .

The Cohasst Chamber of Commerce has pledged its full support and cooperation to the Cohasset PSO in their campaign to bring more computers to Cohasset schools. By participating in the Stop and Shop Company's 75th anniversary "Apple for the Students" program, the PSO can turn the pink register tapes into Apple computer systems. In order to make this campaign a success, they will need to collect hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of receipts between now and March 10, 1990. If any Chamber members have any ideas for ways to collect receipts from those who do not have children in school, or would like to offer their store or business as a receipt drop off point, please get in touch with Jan Crowley of the PSO, at 383-0120, or Paula Knowles of the Chamber at 383-1331. And everyone, please save those receipts. . .they are as good as $$ to the PSO.

2ND ANNUAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AUCTION

The Chamber will hold its second annual fund raising auction October 21, at the Cohasset Community Center. The free Franks 'n Beans dinner and preview of the items up for bid will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. The auction will begin at 7:30 p.m. If last year's auction is an indicator, the items up for bid should be terrific, and the evening a night to remember. The auction is open to the public and free of charge, and this year it will give all the parents of high schoolers something to do while waiting for the kids to come home from the Homecoming Dance. So please join us for dinner and a fun night at the auction.

"A LITTLE PIECE OF HOME" PACKAGES. . .

This year the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is starting a new tradition. During October, we will be sending packages to all of last year's graduating seniors who are now away at school, in the Service, or working. These boxes will contain small items that we think the newly liberated teen may find handy, as well as some reminders of home, like a subscription to the Mariner. If you have one of these graduates in your family, and are not contacted by October 6, please call us with your son or daughter's name and new address. We will have a most difficult time identifying those Cohasset residents who graduated from private schools, as we only have a list of Cohasset High grads. If you have a grad from a private school, please contact Bob Martin at the Goodale Co., Inc., 383-0787 with all the info. We don't want to leave anyone out.

And a special thanks to the Mariner for making these student subscriptions affordable for us, and to enable us to give each 1989 grad a "little piece of home" in their mailbox every week.

CORRECTION: Last week's mention of Stop and Shop Plaza should have read "Cohasset Plaza." I apologize for any confusion I may have caused.

appropriations within this warrant, if approved, would total more than $100,000.

Among the revenue-producing articles which will be voted at town meeting are proposals to hike certain muncipal licenses and fees. The planning board is re-submitting bylaw amendments that were previously adopted but ruled illegal by the atorney general because they were incorrectly advertised.

Two articles sponsored by the water commission, including a proposal to increase water fees and a request to purchase property known as Lily Pond Estates, have been withdrawn from the October 10 warrant.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 79F2206 ET.E1
NOTICE OF FIDUCIARY'S ACCOUNT

To all persons interested in the estate of John G. Carzis late of Cohasset, in said County, deceased.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the 1st - third and final account(s) of Nick Camarinopoulas, and Theodore P. Vallas and John M. Doukas as Temporary and permanent Executors have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said account(s), you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the first day of November, 1989, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said account(s). If you desire to object to any item of said account(s), you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

WITNESS, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this twentieth day of September, 1989.

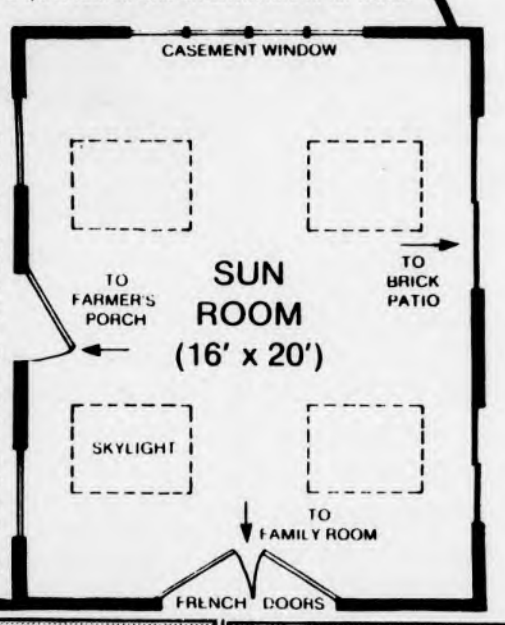
THIS SMALL CAPE



The objective of this Sun-Room (16' x 20') addition is to create an airy, open and informal living space with plenty of natural lighting. The sun-room with its many windows, sliding door, and skylights, projects a cool atmosphere for casual dinners, a quiet retreat and an environment for house plants to flourish.

Set directly off the back of the family room this sun-room features:
• A cathedral ceiling with wood beams and four skylights for light and ventilation.
• Plenty of windows, including a large casement window, to take advantage of the scenic wooded views.
• A sliding glass door that opens out to a large brick patio.

A farmer's porch was built off the front of the sun-room to enhance the country style of this house. Constructed with clear fir wood handrails and decking, painted trim and large wooden porch swing, it is a perfect place for quiet, comfortable star gazing.

At T.C. McIntosh Construction, Inc. we specialize in additions from design to finish. For a free estimate or design consultation, please call: (617) 659-4772

Marshfield and Cohasset police solve burglary

An investigation into a break at the Mariner Newspaper headquarters last week in Marshfield, led detectives from Marshfield and Cohasset to a cache of stolen electronic equipment in an apartment house on Jerusalem Road.

According to Marshfield detectives, an employee had stolen an outside door key about three weeks ago to regain entrance last weekend and steal a second key.

The man, subsequently identified as Richard S. Ericson, 21, of 961 Forest St., Marshfield, gave the key to a friend who allegedly returned to the Mariner building on or about Sept. 25 and stole a $4,000 computer.

The computer, a multi-track recorder and other items belonging to the band Voyageurs out of the Whitman-Hanson area and assorted marine radios and other electronics were recovered at the apartment of Mark Faulkner, 23, of 260 Jerusalem Road.

Cohasset detective Brian Cogill planned to seek criminal charges of receiving stolen property against Faulkner.

Marshfield detectives said they would charge Faulkner with breaking and entering in the nighttime with intent to commit a felony at the Mariner building and two counts of larceny – a door key and a $4,000 computer.

In addition, they said they would charge Ericson with larceny of less than $250, a door key; breaking and entering in the nighttime with intent to commit a felony; larceny in a building of a second door key, and accessory before the fact of breaking and entering in the nighttime and larceny in a building.

Marshfield Lt. Al Knight and detective Fred Teague, along with officer William Meech, alleged that Ericson, a former Mariner employee, took a key from the office Sept. 11 and returned late Friday, Sept. 22, and took a second key.

Police claimed that Ericson gave one of the keys to Faulkner, formerly of Marshfield, who allegedly returned to the building and took an Apple SE computer on or about Sept. 25.

Both men were arrested Sept. 28, shortly after the theft was reported, Knight said. The computer and keys were returned to the Mariner the same day.

Police got their first lead when they learned that Mariner photographer Christopher Bernstein saw the two men in the building about 11:30 p.m. Sept. 22 and were not authorized to be there.

Ericson worked in the mail room, and Faulkner once worked a couple of days at the Mariner.

Bernstein told police they did not give him a plausible explanation, but they quickly left.

Police said the men apparently were making telephone calls.

Knight and Teague said they knew the two men whom Bernstein described.

At that point, Teague went to Faulkner's place of employment, and Knight staked out Ericson's house while Cogill waited outside the house where Faulkner was renting a room.

Faulkner admitted to the theft of the computer and led police back to his home where the detectives saw numerous other pieces of equipment.

"That's hot, that's stolen," Faulkner reportedly told police as he pointed to various pieces of electronic equipment as he walked into his house.

This week Cogill was trying to identify who owned the items recovered from Faulkner.

Cogill said that some of the marine equipment was believed to have been stolen from Harborlight Boat Sales Inc., 110 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., which had been broken into about three weeks ago.

The entire music pre-school music group, ages two to three years, gathered together for some provocative conversation prior to classtime at the Cohasset Community Center.

Several projects remain alive after town meeting

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Whether they realized it or not, voters at Tuesday night's special town meeting were in a spending mood.

Every article on the warrant was approved by the 157 voters at that meeting. And although several articles were actually postponed, they too may become reality within the current fiscal year.

Several articles, including proposals for a new town cemetery, renovations to Milliken Field, removal of underground storage tanks, and a new roof for the old section of town hall, may eventually go forward because voters did not rescind the original appropriations from the annual town meeting.

That action became necessary after the appropriations were approved last spring, but voters later denied a tax increase to fund those appropriations. Because the overrides were defeated in a special election following the annual meeting, voters were asked at this weeks's town meeting to rescind their original decisions.

But that did not happen. For instance, voters went along with selectmen's recommendation to postpone article 29, which asked voters to rescind authorization to borrow $26,000 for the repair of the old town hall roof. By postponing the article, voters have not rescinded their authorization, therefore the previous appropriation granted at the annual town meeting remains in effect.

Selectmen said this project needs to be completed, and because voters did not rescind their appropriation, money will be found within the budget to make the roof repairs.

Article 20 was also postponed - a proposal to rescind the $10,000 appropriation given at the

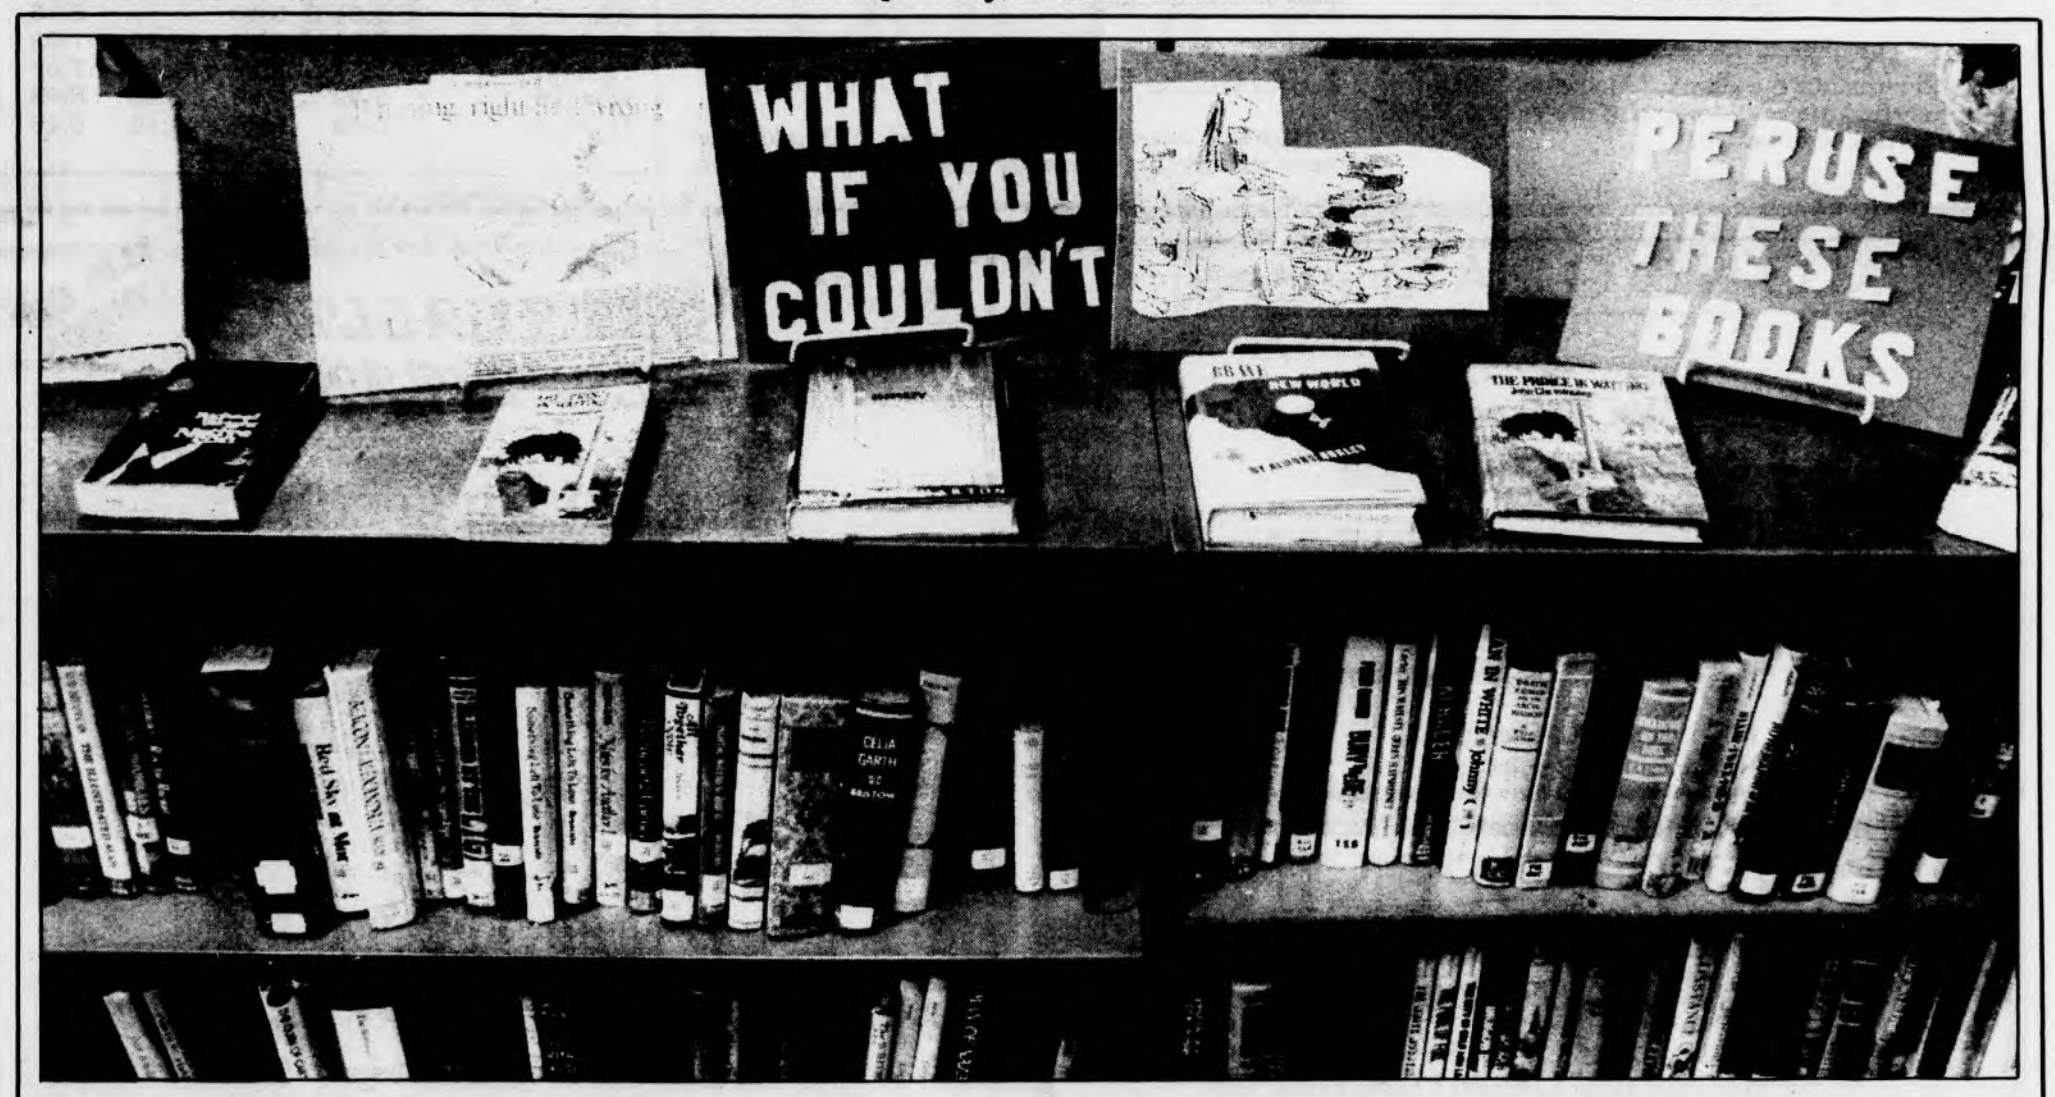
Dog control law unleashes debate

Not only must dogs be restrained, but now their owners will pay a penalty for any violations of the animal control law.

Town meeting approved several amendments to the existing animal control law and attached a series of fines for dogs found in violation of that bylaw.

The amendments were not approved without some strong opinions expressed by some residents unaccustomed to seeing dollar signs along with a rigidly-enforced control law.



At last spring's annual town meeting, voters decided to withdraw from the Norfolk County animal control agency. That move allowed Cohasset to establish its own set of ordinances, and more importantly, to create a series of fines which will be returned directly to the town.

According to animal control committee chairman Ed Bilecki, the town's existing animal control bylaw remains in effect. "It is not a leash law," he emphasized. "It is a control law."

The idea behind the fees and fines, he explained, is to bring in additional revenue to the town. Hopefully, the extra money will eventually be used to increase the number of hours for the town's animal control officer who currently works between eight and ten hours per week, he said.

Fees for licensing dogs will be increased beginning in January, from $6 for spayed female dogs to $8; and from $10 for unspayed female and male dogs to $15. Kennel fees were increased for

This display at the high school library encourages students to be aware that book banning exists today in public libraries throughout the country.

Book banning ignites lively conversation by students

"People should have a right to choose what they want to read. If they don't like what's in the book, they don't have to read it."

That's what ninth grader Tracy Hyde thinks about the banning of books - a topic of some provocative conversation among many Cohasset High School students.

Librarian Susan McFadd sparked the debate as part of the school's observance of Banned Books Week.

"The purpose is to heighten our awareness that book banning in the United States is alive and well," McFadd said. "We must all be ever vigilante and aware that this is occurring."

The librarian has compiled a list of these "forbidden" texts - books that somewhere in this country for some reason have been taken off the shelves this year. They include such formidable and popular titles as Lord of The Flies, I Know Why The Caged Bird Sings, Anastasia Krupnik, Of Mice and Men, Naked Ape, A Light in the Attic, Slaughterhouse Five, and Phantom Tollbooth.

As part of the school's observance, McFadd has set up a display in the school library. Several of these books that have been banned in various public and private libraries throughout the country are included in that display. McFadd is encouraging the students to read the books and decide for themselves why anyone would brand them as unreadable.

"It really has sparked some very lively debate," she stated. "We've had some good discussions here. I told the students that these books were never banned here. But in some library somewhere in the United States, these books have been taken off the shelf because someone said they were not appropriate. Someone has taken it upon himself to act as a censor. I simply wanted to heighten their awareness that this is going on today."

High school students, such as Danielle Shaughnessy, told McFadd, "Although one or two people don't believe in what's in a book, it

Arts and humanities funding

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray announced that Cohasset, Hingham and Hull were approved for FY '90 Arts and Humanities funding. Unfortunately, she noted, it represents a shadow of prior years' support.

Because of the 45 percent reduction in its FY 90 program budget, the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities has been forced to make devastating cuts in programs and services offered to citizens of the Commonwealth. Ten funding programs have been suspended and all but one of the remaining programs have been substantially reduced.

"Every effort was made to maximize support of my constituents in both programs and in technial assistance. The Council will continue to provide the highest level of service for which it has become nationally recognized," she stated.

The Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities awards in the 3rd Plymouth District are: South Shore Art Center: Award $1,435 "Merit Aid" Program; For ongoing, eligible, cultural programs and services in Massachusetts as described in the Merit Aid application. Merit Aid funds cannot be used for fundraising activities or scholarships.

Award: $7,500 "Curriculum Development" Program; To enrich social studies and English curricula through integrating the study of 20th century arts into the 20th century American history and literature courses. Social, economic, and political trends will be studied through slide lectures, performance, video, visiting artists and teacher in-service training.

South Shore Conservatory of Music: Award: $9,400, "Merit Award" Program; For ongoing, eligible, cultural programs and services in Massachusetts as described in the Merit Aid application. Merit Aid funds cannot be used for fundraising activities or scholarship.

Veterans' money reinstated

With nary a voice in opposition, town meeting voted to reinstate the town's "celebration" account, thus ensuring the continuation of the Veterans' and Memorial day observances.

That account had been closed out after the general budget override failed and reductions were forced upon most department budgets.

The special town meeting article to reinstate the money was initiated by selectmen at the request of the American Legion, sponsors of the Memorial Day event.

"Ever since I was a small boy we have had a Memorial Day parade and flags on the graves of our deceased veterans," Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt said Tuesday night. He explained that the $1,800 account will defray the cost of flags, memorial wreaths, flowers and corsages, bands for the parade and the buglers. "We are not asking you to buy ice cream and sandwiches and cola," he added in reference to the observation of some residents that the Legion wanted the money for their party following the Memorial Day ceremonies.

Advisory committee member Ray Kasperowicz spoke against the article, but first wondered aloud what he could possibly say to sway any voters. Calling the issue emotional and personal, Kasperowicz said the committee slashed the budget when they were faced with the "cold, hard facts" of a deep budget deficit last spring. Even now, he added, the advisory committee believes the veterans' observances could be handled with private donations.

Kasperowicz offered a compromise article of $500, but in the end the entire amount won the support of town meeting.

Perhaps voters were swayed by the emotional testimony of Leo Kurtz, who read off the names of 20 Cohaset veterans who died in war. "I wonder how they would have voted on this article," he stated.

Legion Commander Stephen Wigmore told the voters that every Memorial Day he has the responsibility of bringing corsages to each of Cohasset's Gold Star mothers. One mother greets him each year by saying, "You guys never forget."

"And we never will," Wigmore promised. "Eighteen hundred dollars is not a lot to ask for what they paid to their country."

Litchfield and crew honored

Highway Superintendent Harold Litchfield was honored during Tuesday night's special town meeting.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby thanked Litchfield and his crew for the repairs they completed this summer to Meeting House pond on Cohasset Common. For his efforts, Litchfield was presented with a small wooden duck for his office desk.

Town Moderator William Weeks also thanked Litchfield and the town employees for a job well done on "the duck pond." Several residents laughed at the comment, acknowledging that for several months Selectman Burt Pratt has insisted the common pond be referred to by its proper name, Meeting House Pond, and not by the more colloquial version, duck pond.

Halloween date change

Selectmen strongly recommend that children do their Halloween Trick or Treating Sunday, Oct. 29 rather than the official date of October 31.

Selectman Diana Kornet suggested the change, noting that the Community Center will be hosting their annual Halloween Costume Parade October 29 from 1 to 3 p.m. on Cohasset Common.

Trick or treating later that afternoon and evening will be more convenient for parents, and students won't be wandering the streets on a school night, she said.

Although selectmen are recommending that children to do their Halloween spooking two days early, they encourage residents to hold private holiday parties on the traditional October 31 date.

Town projects kept alive by town meeting annual town meeting to remove underground tanks at the police/fire station. Selectman Martha Gjesteby said selectmen want to get those tanks removed, because the town is under the same obligation as private businessmen who have been forced to do the same.

Because that article was postponed, the authorization to appropriate $10,000 for the removal is still in effect.

Voters also decided to postpone any action on articles 16 and 17, which would rescind the $50,000 appropriation approved at the annual town meeting to design a new town cemetery.

By refusing to take any action on these articles, the cemetery study committee is now free to continue their plans to design a new 500-grave cemetery.

Since the annual town meeting, the study committee has been advised that an existing $40,000 Sale of Graves cemetery account may be used to begin the design project. A short-term loan could be used to finance the remaining portion of the project, with proceeds from the sale of lots from this new cemetery used to pay off the principal and interest on that loan.

In other words, there will be no increase in taxes necessary to finance this project, according to Selectman Diana Kornet.

Voters also decided to postpone article 18 regarding the renovations to Milliken/Lillard fields. That appropriation which was approved by the annual town meeting, totalled $280,000.

Milliken field committee chairman Wayne Sawchuk asked that the article be postponed, noting that a majority of townspeople have voiced their support for this project.

"One problem is - how do we pay for the cost?" he noted. Sawchuk explained that he is in the midst of creating a non-profit organization called the Friends of Milliken Field which will solicit private donations for the renovation project.

The private funds will be used to at least begin the project, he explained, although the organization hopes to raise about $200,000. If they begin with a base of $80,000 in donations, they may ask the town to help finance the project with a ten-year loan.

"Maybe the town will have to find $8,000 a year within the town budget," he said.

By postponing any action on the project, Sawchuk said the town is continuing to proceed with the project while keeping that appropriation authorization "in place in the event we need any portion of it," he stated.

A few more articles were postponed but they did not involve rescinding any previous appropriations. Special town meeting voted to postpone two water commission articles - one to raise water rates and a second to purchase property known as Lily Pond Estates.

Currently, according to Selectman Kornet, the water commissioners are attempting to negotiate a deal to purchase the 11-acre parcel from a private owner. Until more information is available, town meeting is unable to vote on the request.

Warrant article 2 was also postponed Monday night. That article, which town counsel, selectmen and the advisory committee felt needed further work, would have amended the town bylaws regarding the recording of town meeting notes by the town clerk.

Special town meeting approved without discussion article nine which, as advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke noted, was the "whole reason for this special town meeting."

That article reduced several town budgets which were previously approved at the annual town meeting. But the subsequent defeat of a full budget override along with the override for the police contract, together with reduced state aid, required additional budget cuts of $238,689.

The budgets that were further slashed because of the override defeats included the police capital outlay account. Now, Goedecke explained, only one cruiser will be purchased instead of the three vehicles originally requested. There is also a reduction in overtime in the Tree and Park Department, more than a $100,000 reduction in the school department budget; and adjustments in the Norfolk County retirement fund and water department insurance and unemployment accounts.

She said the town's finances could have fared much worse if it had not been for the conservative fiscal planning of Town Accountant Mary Matthews Gallagher. The town was pleased to discover it had higher-than-anticipated excise tax revenues and the county retirement bill was lower than expected.

And now that special town meeting has completed its business, the tax rate can be set and officials can begin to prepare next year's budgets.

Goedecke said the financial forecast for the next fiscal year "looks even more grim than this year."

The advisory committee is not anticipating any increase in state aid and there is no expected increase in the town's projected new growth. "We also have labor contracts that will go up higher than two and a-half percent," she noted. The advisory committee will be meeting with department heads later this month to begin budget projections for next year.

Animal control sparks debate

the few commercial kennels in town.

The fee for a first-time violation of the animal control law will be $25; second time, $35; and third and subsequent, $50. The fine for failure to vaccinate dogs for rabies will be $50.

"Basically," Bilecki said, "we trying to make people a little more responsible for their animals."

"This is a double-fine situation," said Robert Davenport of Black Horse Lane. He noted that the fine for the first control law violation is $25. "In addition, the dog officer picks up the dog and impounds it, so that's an additional fee of $15 so now we're up to $40. " Noting that the owner must also pay $15 to reclaim the dog and the kennel fee of at least $10 per day, Davenport called the new system "excessive."

"You mean my little dog may be apprehended and subject to a $50 fine?" questioned South Main Street resident Herbert Towle. "I may not allow my dog to run free?"

The costs will be high only if the dog is impounded, Bilecki answered, and the animal control officer rarely impounds a dog on a first offense. The animal control law, which restricts an animal to the owner's property or land where the dog has permission to travel, has always prohibited free-roaming canines.

The other side of the argument was presented by John Russo of Border Street who wondered if more stringent penalities may be enforced in the event of a dog attack. According to the bylaw, there is no penalty if a dog bites someone.

But Town Counsel Richard Henderson assured Russo that selectmen have the authority to order a dog permanently restrained, exiled from town, or killed in such a circumstance.

Border Street resident Paula Knowles thought the fines were too high, and noted there was no appeal process for the accused animal owners. She urged town meeting to postpone any decision on the proposal.

But Bilecki explained that only a small minority of residents allow their dogs to run free. They are the people who will be paying the fines, not those who abide by the animal control law.

The final question came from Elm Street resident Michael Bliss who questioned the necessity of section L in the bylaw which states that a resident may be charged a service fee for any wildlife removed from their property by the animal control officer.

"How much do you charge for a moose?" he inquired.

By a voice vote, town meeting soundly approved the new animal control bylaw.

In other town meeting action, voters approved a proposal to separate the town's annual facilities sticker into a parking permit. That parking permit will allow residents access to the Sandy Beach, Edwin Young, and Government Island parking lots. A separate $52 fee will now be issued each year for use of the new landfill transfer station.

Selectmen had recommended that the issuance of the parking permit be handled by the executive secretary's office. Because he is designated as the town's parking clerk, it would be a natural addition to his responsibilities, Pratt explained.

The recreation commission opposed the move. Chairman Richard Barrow said there are no problems with the current system, which allows the recreation commission to dispense information to residents about its programs while they apply for the permits.

The advisory committee asked for an amendment to the article which would delete the section transferring the permits to the selectmen. Advisor Ray Kasperowicz said they discussed the switch with the recreation director, and decided "not to be Solomon" by determining which department should be responsible for the permits.

The amendment, which keeps the permit under the control of the recreation department, was approved by a hand count of the voters - 96 to 61.

Among the other articles approved by town meeting Tuesday night were three requests for the purchase of new town equipment. Voters approved a $7,800 compressor for the highway department. The money will be taken from the town's stabilization fund.

One new police cruiser will be purchased for $15,335, while another patrol car will be transferred to the animal control department. The police chief originally requested three cruisers, but that was trimmed down to one. As advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke explained, with the purchase of fewer new vehicles, maintenance costs for the existing cruisers will probably increase. Already, the advisory committee has approved a transfer for $8,000 in vehicle maintenance for that department.

The money for the new cruiser will also be taken from the stabilization fund.

Voters also approved the purchase of a $16,500 chipper for the Tree and Park Department. Once again, the money for that purchase will be taken from the stabilization fund.

UCC yard sale

The 9th annual giant yard sale sponsored by the United Church of Christ, Norwell, will be held on Saturday, Oct. 14, from 9 a.m. - 3 p.m., on the front lawn of the church, 460 Main St. (Route 123).

Donations from the public are needed, including furniture, household item, appliances, sporting goods, toys, records, games, books, knicknacks, glassware, etc. Anything except clothing is welcome. Items may be dropped off anytime Wednesday through Friday, Oct. 11-13.

Norwell residents Gay Dawley and Lee MacDonald are chairing this year's event. Proceeds will benefit the various programs of the church. Call 659-4056 or 659-7996 for pick-up of large items.

Foundation repairs run into opposition from abutters

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Noel Collins' request for a special permit to repair an existing foundation at 9A Sandy Beach Lane drew the only crowd at the regular meeting of the Zoning Board of Appeals held on October 5, 1989.

Two residents expressed opposition to the proposal and two opposed it.

A permit is required for the repair work because the property is located in a flood plain. At issue is how the repair/reconstruction will affect water run-off.

Collins owns a 24' x 24' poured concrete foundation with a packed dirt floor on a small lot located halfway down the private lane.

There is no dispute about the condition of the foundation.

Board chairman Myrna Putzinger told Collins she had made a site visit.

"I was properly impressed by your poison ivy crop," she said. "I was not too impressed by your foundation.

"It's in decrepit condition," admitted Collins.

Collins wants to repair the two walls that are caving in. He has no immediate plans for the property beyond that.

When quizzed on why he would repair something he had no use for, Collins told the board that eventually he hoped to cap off the foundation and use it as a boat house to store a small boat and several rowing shells that he owns.

Collins doesn't want the foundation to completely deteriorate before he gets around to building a boat house. He also said that he was in a position to do the concrete work inexpensively now because he had some other concrete work he was doing.

The foundation, built in the late 50's or early 60's, was put in by the previous owner in anticipation of zoning regulations. The proposed regulations contained minimum set back requirements that the lot couldn't meet. The sole intention in putting in the foundation was to protect the value of the lot by preserving the right to build on it in the future.

Only one house uses Sandy Beach Lane for access. Caravel Condominiums, located at the far end of the lane on the former McCormick Estate, have a separate entrance. The lane was originally a service entrance for the estate.

Collins told the board that he had minimal plans for the property because the lot is too small and the soil won't support a septic system.

"The only practical purpose is that it is an excellent place to store a small boat and rowing shells," he said. "I don't live there so I'd have no need to park a car there."

Collins readily agreed that the property was in a flood plain, but repeatedly told the board that he would not be making any changes in the status quo.

Board members were equally concerned about whether the foundation could be defined as abandoned property.

Collins disagreed, saying that the foundation was a non-conforming structure, not a non-conforming use.

"It was built to be a foundation. It's use as a foundation was never abandoned," he protested. "If I leave the foundation as is, it will outlast us all by a century and be a hazard."

The Planning Board sent a letter informing the Board of Appeals that they had unanimously denied approval of Collins's request. They based their decision on an allegation that erroneous information had been submitted. They did not elaborate on the nature or source of the information.

The Planning Board also said that the property was abandoned and the lane couldn't be used for vehicular traffic.

William Young of 111 Nichols Road opposed the granting of a permit. Young, who uses the lane for access by septic pumpers, claimed that the foundation was abandoned by the original owner and began to deteriorate at least 15 years ago.

Young described the foundation as having disintegrated to within less than a foot from the ground. He pointed out that a burned out building is considered abandoned if the owners do not commence reconstruction within two or three years.

He also claimed that salt water from Little Harbor floods the land during the highest tides that occur on a monthly basis. He claimed that there is as much as 18 to 24 inches of water around the foundation at those times. During the Blizzard of '78, the foundation was completely under water.

High tides aren't the only source of flooding that Young addressed. He stated that drain pipes pass under Collins' property and empty into Little Harbor. Because of the deteriorated condition of the pipes, water backs up through the pipes at high tide and flows out through blow holes along the way.

Eli Manchester of 61 Nichols Road brought photographs taken of Collins' property on October 1, 1989. These were purported to show the condition of the property during a normal high tide. The photographs showed considerable flooding.

Manchester also submitted a letter opposing the plans for reconstruction. In the letter, he described the property as consisting of "a discarded foundation on a marshy flood plain." He also contended that the land is wet even in times of drought.

Cohasset resident Connie Parker disputed Manchester's contention that the tide was normal on the Sunday that he took the photographs.

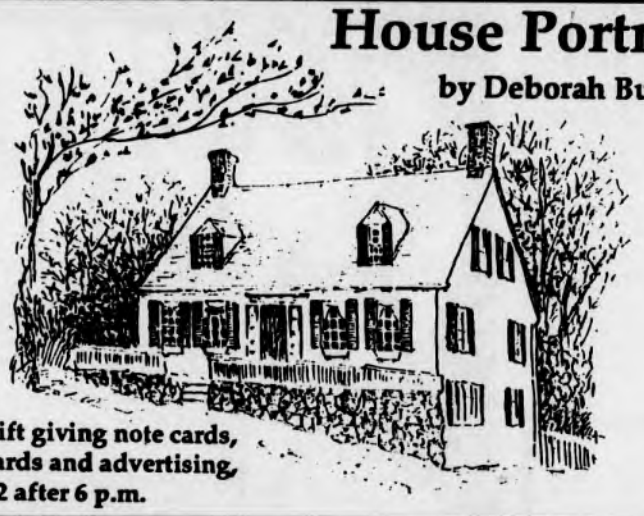
When told that she couldn't blame the tide on Hurricane Hugo, she said, "It was the moon then. It was not a normal high tide."

Collins got some support from his immediate abutter.

"I support Mr. Collins's right to his property," said Ann Treat Reynolds, executrix for her mother's estate at 10A Sandy Beach Lane.

Reynold's said she supported Collins because unnamed neighbors were using the lane as a dump and blocking access to others.

In his final argument, Collins again said, "I plan to reform one corner. There is nothing we would be building that would have any impact on the surrounding area that the current status doesn't already have. It will not divert or rechannel the runoff. The foundation will be no higher than it is now. There will be no extension or enlargement of the non-conforming structure."



"The question," said Collins, "is, will it be useful?"

Collins defended his plans for the foundation by telling the board, "Taxes have been paid on it yearly. A one-story boat house is not an intensive use of the property.

In keeping with their usual practice, the Board of Appeals took the matter under advisement. A

Students join in lively debate on book burning shouldn't stop others from reading the same books."

Her classmate, Lori Gallant, agreed.

"If someone thinks these books should be banned, then they should just not read them."

When McFadd released a list of these banned books, several students approached her. "How could they ban Charlie and the Chocolate Factory?" one student inquired.

"Inappropriate philosophy" was the official reason given by an unnamed library, McFadd explained. Another popular book with the young teens was Phantom Tollbooth by Norton Juster. "It's a real delightful fantasy," according to the librarian. But according to somebody else, that book nurtured "a poor philosophy," and so it was taken out of circulation in at least one library this year.

Every one of the books on this year's list has been reviewed by the school library's Standard Review Series, and each were viewed as highly acceptable by that professional organization, McFadd explained.

An example of one book that was recently banned in this area is Go Ask Alice. McFadd said she cannot keep a copy of that book on her shelf either - simply because it is so popular with the Cohasset High students.

The book, a true story written by a girl addicted to drugs, was banned a few years ago from a classroom at South Shore Vocational High School. McFadd describes it as a valuable book which carries a powerful message to its teenage readers.

The author died from a drug overdose - a fact that is eerily mentioned at the conclusion. "There is offensive language in the book, no doubt. But it's an appropriate use in this particular book. I would urge all parents to read this book - it's very enlightening," she said.

She can never keep enough copies on the shelves of the high school library. And although the students give it rave reviews, McFadd would not be shocked if someday a parent complains to her about the material.

"At that time, I will have to show why I feel this is an important book to have in this library," she said. "A parent always has the right to keep a book away from their child. But they do not have to right to keep it away from others."

The only reason McFadd would not include a book in the high school library is if it did not receive good reviews from several credible courses. "If I have read the book or reviewed at least two of the reviews, and I feel the book has some value and the kids would benefit from reading it, I would include it. My goal is to keep a balanced collection within the library - not to skimp on one topic over another."

If the book has received universally negative reviews, McFadd will decline from purchasing the material. Conversely, if a student encourages her to obtain a copy of some book, McFadd will read the suggested title, and often acquiesce to the request.

One such student, Brendan Mulligan, is a science fiction fanatic whose favorite author is Doug Adams. At his suggestion, she has obtained several copies of his work, and one time even purchased a title from Mulligan who owned duplicate copies. "Some kids are great sources," she admitted.

McFadd will also find new books for the school library after attending conferences where she meets individual authors. One such author is Bruce Brooks whose most recent book, The Moves Make the Man was honored with the Newbery Award.

One book taken off the shelf this year in at least one United States library is the American classic, Huckleberry Finn. "It was considered a racist book because of the language and situations within the book," according to the Cohasset librarian. "But the fact is, this book is true to its time. To call Mark Twain a racist is ludicrous."

Another "banned" book is Space Station Seventh Grade by Jerry Spinelli. It is an immensely popular book in the Cohasset High library, McFadd said.

"He really writes wonderfully. He has a terrific recall - an uncanny sense of what it is like to be a seventh grader again. He's very funny and right on target. Kids really relate to his books," McFadd noted. Another Spinelli book, Who Put the Hair in My Toothbrush? relates the real-life family tension between a ninth grade boy and his sister.

The Cohasset librarian said she does not include any books in the high school collection unless she has read them - at least partially. "Unless I read them - how could I possibly recommend them?" she noted.

At the recent Open House Night at the high school, several parents observed the display within the library, and asked McFadd if they would read one of the "banned" books. She encouraged the request.

"I want parents to feel free to come here and see what materials we have," she explained. "We've had such a good discussion with the students. We would love to get the parents involved, too."

around town

❒ Two more hard working people joined the ranks of Cohasset town committees this week . . . Susan DeMichele was appointed to the arts lottery council and Charles M. Kane to the cable TV advisory committee. Thank you for taking the time to serve our town, we need more like you!

❒ Congratulations go to the following students: Juliana Chittick, Suzzunne DeCruz, Zachary Hochkeppel and Matthew Silvia, take a bow. They were all named Commended Students in the 1990 National Merit Scholarship Program.

❒ Matthew R. Beggan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Beggan of 4 Sankey Road, is a member of the freshman class at St. Anselm's College in Manchester, N.H.

❒ Alna Ekberg of Hallmark 100 Properties, Ltd. was recently presented an award as leading sales associate in the Cohasset office. Mrs. Ekberg has distinguished herself by participating in sales volume over 2 million dollars thus far in 1989. Chris Ford, President of Hallmark 100 Properties, presented the award at a recent sales meeting.

The Cohasset office recently relocated to 89 Ripley Road.

❑ Happy birthday to Eileen Kurtz on October 5.

o ❑ Achievement awards were presented to associates of the Jack Conway & Company's Cohasset office for the months of June, July and August.

During June, Paula Graham negotiated the most sales, and Peter Breen listed the most property through the Cohasset office. Marge Gorman was top in sales for July and Mary Ellen Neagle and Jill Caffery were top in listings. Paul Bowers was top in sales for August.

❑ The Massachusetts Assoc. of Health Boards held their 7th annual meeting on September 23 at the Worcester Foundation for Experimental Biology in Shrewsbury. During this meeting, retiring Executive Director Barbara Kern of Cohasset was presented with proclamations from the State Senate and House of Representatives, and a Governor's Citation, honoring her for her dedication to the environment and public health.

Ms. Kern is a founder and past President of the Association, and has represented boards of health for many years, serving on numerous state advisory committees, including the Special Legislative Committee on Indoor Air Pollution, and committees investigating the regulation of landfills, pesticides and groundwater protection.

Noting her many contributions to the growth and success of MAHB, the Executive Board members expressed their heartfelt thanks. Ms. Kern will continue to represent the Association while following legislative issues which relate to public and environmental health.

❑ Marisol Perry of Cohasset recently completed the Third Figure Test sponsored by the United States Figure Skating Assn. at Pilgrim Arena in Hingham.

❑ Frank W. and Caren (Hall) Wheelwright of Riverview Drive, are the parents of a boy born October 3 at the South Shore Hospital.

❑ Rick and Mary Daniels of Fair Oaks Lane are pleased to announce the birth of their daughter, Michelle Marie, on Sept. 26. Michelle was welcomed home by her big sister, Christina.

❑ There are plans underway for a fund raiser brunch for our State Representative, Mary Jeanette Murray. On October 15 from 11:30 a.m.-2p.m. there will be a brunch at South Shore Country Club in Hingham. Ticket sellers are: Pat and Roy Buckley, Mrs. Frank Evans, Christy Mihos, Al Odermatt, Mrs. Pat Plante, Paul Verrochi and Glen Pratt. Be sure to give one of the committtee a call. It is a lot of fun! We sure find it hard to believe it's time for Mary Jeanette to toss her hat in the ring again. Seems like we just voted! We sure wish you well! Keep up your good work!

❑ There is another "benefit" going on "around town". The Cohasset 300 Club is running a drawing on October 21, at the homecoming game. The members of the committee will be selling raffle tickets, with the first prize being $1,000, the second prize $500, and the third prize is $300. Tickets are $20, and are available from members, at all home football games or by calling the high school at 383-6100. As you know, this Friends of Cohasset School Sports has committed themselves to raising $20,000 to help defray athletic costs and keep the users fee at $50. Help the committee to help your kiddos!

❑ Hats off to Alna Ekberg! An associate with Hallmark 100 Properties 100, she was recently presented an award as leading sales associate in the Cohasset office.

❑ All of you 4th, 5th and 6th graders that are interested in cheerleading, don't forget that October 30 is approaching! There is going to be a cheerleading clinic at the CHS Sullivan gym for 'One Day Only'. The Cohasset High cheerleaders will be teaching cheers, chants, jumps, leaps and pyramids. The cost for the clinic is $15.00, with all proceeds going towards cheering sweaters and skirts. Each participant will receive a special cheerleading pin. If you are interested in taking part contact cheerleading coach Ruthann Sargent at 545-3059.

Secretary of State Michael J. Connolly presented a citation to Kerri Anglin (l) and Nicole Greco (r) of Cohasset for their work this past summer as volunteer State House tour guides. They were honored recently at a Faneuill Hall luncheon hosted by Secretary Connolly.

❑ Congratulations go to John and Mary Matthews Gallagher who had a little girl on September 29. As you know, Mary is our town accountant, and we'll bet the first thing that was counted were all of the baby's fingers and toes! Best of luck to you all, isn't it wonderful to have a little "pumpkin" of your very own? Enjoy her.

❑ The PSO is certainly a hard-working group, and they have come up with a nifty way to get computers for our schools through the Stop and Shop giveaway. All children have been asked to give an envelope to a neighbor who doesn't have children in the schools; they will agree to collect the tapes from Stop and Shop registers on a weekly basis and bring them to school. There are additional envelopes in the school offices for anyone who wants to participate. The PSO has over $75,000 in receipts so far, and would love to see that amount grow. Help them, and you help yourself and your student (or your neighbor's student).

❑ Happy birthday to Annette Sawchuk from her husband, Wayne, and her many friends in Cohasset. The big day was Oct. 10.

❑ Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Barrows on the birth of their son!! And to Granpa "Bibbles" Barrows and his wife

❑ Finally, when you are making your plans for this weekend, don't forget the Osgood Playpark is doing more work on the play area. They plan to install a perimeter around the sandboat and jetski area, to fill that with peastone gravel, to add more peastone under the swings, to install uprights on the railing in the lighthouse module, and general fixup. Call the school (383-6117), Ann Whiteley (9310) Rhonda Myers (383-2969) or Linda Keller (383-6873) to sign up.

ZBA ponders foundation repairs

decision will be made at a later date.

Marie Caristi of 11 Black Horse Lane appeared before the board seeking a change in use that would allow her to convert her existing variance from an office suite to a residential unit.

In 1987, Caristi received permission from the Board of Appeals to rent out a separate accessory building as an office suite.

According to board member Barbara Power, "The town in its goodness, when the previous owners lived there, allowed them to put up a fire wall and build an office on the other side."

Caristi was granted her original variance after appealing an initial denial.

Power explained that the reversal came about "because it was clear to the Board that the conditions and circumstances were unique to the building. Unless something had changed, the variance should be allowed to continue."

The unique nature of Caristi's property stems from the fact that the house and office suite have no connecting doorway and they are located on separate lots.

Caristi is seeking the change because she has not been able to find a tenant for the office suite.

"I came to the decision that it is just more likely to get a residential tenant," she said. Caristi plans to rent the apartment to be to "somebody quiet" in order to offset her taxes.

The only work Caristi will do on the building itself will consist of some repartitioning, installation of a shower in the half bathroom, and relocation of the front door.

The Planning Board denied Caristi's request on a two to one vote. They said that they had insufficient information to grant permission.

According to a letter from the Board of Health, Caristi must upgrade the septic tank capacity and expand the leach field in order to use the property as a residential unit. Caristi is already working on the septic system.

Although the Board of Appeals took her request under advisement as well, it appears that at least one member will vote in favor of the appeal.

"I'm much happier with this-- a residence in a residential area," said Barbara Power. "Zoning-wise, I think it's a wise decision, and financially I hope it works out."

The last appeal of the evening was by Mary R. Green of 819 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Green is seeking permission to erect a second business sign on her property.

Green, proprietor of the Green Gage Plum with its landmark corner cupboard sign, owns 197.26 feet of frontage. That is just shy of the 200 foot requirement that would permit her to erect the second sign advertising a country store that will open up in the barn behind her antique shop. The new business is slated to open by late October.

The new sign, described as "very conducive to the property and this area", will be wooden with a carved section depicting an agricultural theme.

Green's appeal was taken under advisement as well.

In other business, the sewer commissioners requested permission to withdraw their request to install a trailer on Elm Street. They have been granted temporary space in the Baker Building. The Board of Appeals granted their request unanimously.

Rec. commission vacancy

There is currently a vacancy on the Cohasset Recreation Commission to fill an unexpired term.

The appointment will be made by a vote of the selectmen and the recreation commission, Monday, Nov. 13. Should the appointee wish to continue serving after April, 1990, he must declare candidacy in the April town election.

Any registered voter of Cohasset who may be interested in applying should send a letter of intent to: Cohasset Recreation Commission, 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, 02025.

The Cohasset Recreation Commission is a seven-member board, elected to a five-year term. It is the policy-setting arm of the recreation department, providing direction for the various functions of the department. The commission generally meets one evening per month.

Never-ending efforts

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is a fairly young organization. Its members, comprised of local businessmen and women, are trying hard to make it an important voice in this community. And they are succeeding.

The Chamber of Commerce was once known simply as the organization which sponsors the annual Christmas on the Common. That event is no longer held, but the Chamber has turned to a greater variety of issues and is now dealing with topics of importance to the entire community.

Just recently, the Chamber sponsored a question and answer forum on the future of education in Cohasset. With many residents in attendance, it proved to be an informative, enlightening evening for the community.

With the local League of Women Voters chapter now defunct, the Chamber has taken over the responsibility of hosting candidate debates. Whether it is a race for selectmen or state senate, the Chamber has proven to be an important host to these timely topics.

The members of this organization are working diligently to keep abreast of the events within this community. Currently, they are assisting the PSO to collect Stop and Shop register tapes in order to purchase computers for the schools. Their involvement in this town does not end at the door to their store or downtown office.

The Chamber has become a voice of the local businessman - an intelligent viewpoint expressed by a well-informed membership. Now, they are putting together packages to all the 1989 graduates of Cohasset High School. Many members of the Chamber worked to put together a gift package for every graduate. It will contain certain essential items, such as stationery and pens. They were insightful enough to include a year's subscription to their hometown newspaper, The Cohasset Mariner. We couldn't be prouder to assist the Chamber with this project.

We applaud the never-ending efforts of the members of Cohasset's Chamber of Commerce. They are a dedicated group of professionals whose primary focus is to help local store-owners, and shopkeepers survive the economy and every other obstacle placed in front of the small businessman.

It is not an easy task, but with every new project and program sponsored by the Chamber, the public is slowly becoming aware that our local businesses are indeed the best.

One need only fight the horrendous traffic jam and the human mob scene at the new Kingston Mall to quickly realize that Cohasset offers us a variety of original items with friendly, personal service. There's nothing like shopping in a quiet shop filled with one-of-kind merchandise and kindly sales help after you've been manhandled and misinformed by unruly crowds and untrained store personnel.

You can have Kingston - give us Cohasset.

Summer recreation a big success

Letters

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Cohasset Recreation Department's summer playground staff it's my privilege to acknowledge all those who made this summer a big success.

First and foremost I would like to thank the Town of Cohasset, the Recreation Commission, and especially Director Jack Worley for giving us the green light. In these times of fiscal constraints we are very fortunate that the children of this town were given priority.

I would like to recognize the following: The Cohasset School system, in particular from Joseph Osgood, Principal Jack Creamer and custodians Billy Esposito and Billy MacArthur; and from Deer Hill, Principal Ken Ekberg and custodians Bobby Barrow and Tom Jones for their hospitality. A special thank you to Ilene Colwill for her continued support. The Tree and Park Department for taking care of us. The Highway Department for its "horses." To a good friend Joe Laugelle for his concern and help. Judy Volungis and Irene Volpe of the Community Center. Sue Terry and the Paul Pratt Library. Janet Amiri and the South Shore Art Center. Ron Carroll of Carroll Printing for saving us again this year at short notice. The Osgood Playpark Committee for a job well done. Abbie White and Sarah Trask of the Swim Center. Clark Chatterton for his donation. The Cohasset Fire Department for Foam Day — the kids are never going to forget that day. Thank you.

I would also like to acknowledge several outstanding parents for their countless contributions: Pauline Byrnes, Gina Brown, Kate DiStasi, Anne Curley, and Karen Laugelle. A thank you to all the parents for their support to the program. The kids! An exceptional group which made our summer enjoyable, and ones we are going to miss during the school year. Last but not least my staff Diana Pereria, Lyn Pompeo, George Umbriannia, Mike Pinney, David Shumaker, Liz Muncey, Liz O'Leary, Erin Monaghan, Stephanie Endris, Gretchen Pattison, Chris Conley, Jessica MacDonald, Corrina McMackin, and Katie Carroll. The Best! — Thank You!

I hope your child enjoyed the summer with us, and on behalf of the entire staff and the Recreation Department, I thank you for your participation and wish you the best.

Recreation news

The Cohasset Recreation Department is offering fall sessions of Low-Impact Aerobic Exercise classes, taught by Margret Watson, Tuesday and Thursday from 6:15 to 7:15 p.m. in the Cohaset Town Hall auditorium.

Sessions are conducted in eight-week cycles for $40. It includes two weekly classes for eight weeks. You may join at any time and the fee will be pro-rated based upon the number of classes per week you take, and the number of weeks left in the session. Checks should be made payable to: Town of Cohasset. Sessions continue on a year 'round basis.

The co-ed program is open to residents and non-residents. Early registration is advised. Call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791 for information.

DOG OBEDIENCE CLASSES

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for beginner and intermediate dog training classes taught by Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held Wednesday evenings at the GAR Hall in Scituate.

Beginner classes will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. The intermediate/advanced class will be from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. The fee for the eight-week program will be $30.

Elementary students join PSO dance workshop

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

What happens when you mix Cohasset kids, dance, and social issues? No one knows for sure yet, but the Curriculum Enrichment Committee of the Cohasset Parent School Organization expects something wonderful.

The committee is sponsoring dance repertory workshops at Deer Hill School and the Junior/Senior High School. Participants will meet once a week from October through spring. The program will culminate in full-scale dance concerts by the two groups.

Auditions were held October 10th for the Deer Hill School. High school students get to strut their stuff on October 25th.

The committee wanted to go beyond the usual program that brings a professional dance or theater troupe into the schools.

"We thought we'd offer a different vehicle to the children," said Dorothy Nicynski, co-chairperson of the Curriculum Enrichment Committee. "We're hoping to attract the children not already involved in ballet classes or after-school sports."

The committee was able to get Sharon Weber, Dance Director at the South Shore Conservatory of Music, to conduct the workshops.

The program will reach approximately 25 students at Deer Hill School and 30 to 40 at the high school level.

For the first half of the series, students will be instructed in dance and creative movement, performance and stage techniques, and improvisation.

But it's more than just dance. The children will be involved in all aspects of a production. "This will be their work," Weber said. "I have no attendance problems because it's their ideas, their choreography, their sets."

The Deer Hill students will be working toward a performance entitled "We Are the Children" For it, the children will select and develop a message they want to give to a specific adult or to the adult world. The message will be interpreted and delivered through dance.

The high school students will produce "It's a Small World".

"I envision them coming up with a global issue like environment or hunger and using that for a theme," said Weber.

Weber's enthusiasm for the project is obvious and infectious. Like a kid who got a chemistry set for Christmas and threw away the instructions, she has no idea what's going to happen-- but she can't wait to see.

Dance workshop instructor Sharon Weber

Weber had a pleasant surprise while the project was still in the discussion and planning phase. She was chatting about her plans with Colleen Lucas, art teacher at the high school.

"In an exciting twist, I learned that she is starting a Social Awareness Club at the high school," said Weber. The two plan to sponsor a Social Awareness evening as a catalyst for developing ideas for the production.

Weber's enthusiasm extends to the art and music department at the high school.

Weber said of Lucas and instrumental music instructor Colleen Foley-- otherwise known as Colleen squared--, "They are precious jewels in the education system. And they're funny as hell, too."

Although Weber doesn't know what message the children will decide to convey, she knows that the process works. Last year she worked with students at the high school to turn one boy's class assignment into a production called "Dragonmaster".

"Dragonmaster" started with seven to ten students.

"Gradually kids started showing up to watch their friends, then they started to hang out more and more," recalled Weber. "So I asked them what they wanted to do. Attendance just snowballed."

Weber wound up with a final cast and crew of 100 kids.

The kids who produced "Dragonmaster" have kept in touch. They wanted to do a sequel, but agreed to stretch their creativity by trying something new.

Breaking new ground is part of the process. Weber and the committee aren't looking for kids who have taken dance lessons from the age of three. They want to reach out to the children Weber describes as having a lot of creative ideas and oomph, but have gone unnoticed in the competitive small-pond world of Cohasset.

"These are kids with a lot to offer," said Weber. She wants to give them a turn in the spotlight.

Weber would love to break new ground by pulling in some male dancers, but she has few illusions.

"I'd be surprised if more than one boy turned out for the dance audition," she said. "The guys are usually excited about the project, but not about dancing. They like to do the backstage tech work."

Expanding horizons for students won't end with the dance workshops. The curriculum enrichment folks have more in store for Cohasset kids. Among the coming attractions are:

- Mr. Wizard will bring his science discoveries and inventions to Joseph Osgood School and Deer Hill School in February.
- The fourth grade will get to see the Boston Children's Theatre production of "Winnie the Pooh". This production is extra special because fourth grader Mazoe Barkon, a METCO student at Deer Hill School, is in the play. Mazoe plays the role of Roo in the production which opens November 18, 1989 for a month-long run.
- Plans for a Berklee College of Music concert are being worked out.

Other programs and projects will be added during the year. All offerings are carefully coordinated with the schools.

Candidates' corner . . .

Rep. Flynn takes a serious look at senate campaign

By Judy Enright
Mariner staff

State Rep. William J. Flynn, Jr., D-Hanover, says he is "seriously considering" moving out of the 5th District that he has represented for the past 15 years, to make a run for the senate seat now held by William Golden, D-Weymouth.

Flynn has invited more than 200 supporters and friends to a gthering in LaRossa's Hall, 94 Pleasant St., South Weymouth, on Oct. 19, and expects to make an announcement at that time. He said last week, "I am looking over the senatorial district and considering it, but that I have made no final decision."

STIFF COMPETITION

Golden is vacating his senate seat to run for lieutenant governor.

If Flynn decides to make a bid for Golden's seat, he could face some stiff competition. There are already six possible Republican candidates and several announced Democratic candidates, including State Rep. Robert Ambler and a Weymouth selectman, Brian J. McDonald, who have said they may run in the seven town district that includes Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury.

Flynn, who has only had opposition three times in eight re-election bids - and never from a Republican - now represents Norwell, Hanover and Rockland. He admitted that he would be taking "a big risk" if he decides to seek Golden's seat, rather than running for re-election to his own House post in 1990.

"It's a tremendous risk for me personally," he said, "but this seems to be the year that a lot of people are taking risks. I'd be taking a big risk and putting my whole future on the line, but I think it's time to move up. I think for me this is the opportunity.

"Politics, like life," he said, "is all timing, and it seems like this might be the time to do this. This would be an opportunity for me to represent the same views in the same area with greater capacity. "

The risk will be worth it if he decides to run and wins, he said, because there is one senator in the Commonwealth for every four state representatives. "The voice you have as a senator is that much louder," he said.

"I'm motivated by the opportunity to have a greater impact and to try to achieve some of the projects I consider very worthwhile."

He added, "the last place to stop bad legislation in this state is in the senate. I think it's an important place to be. It would be the same kind of work I've been doing for 15 years, but the impact and the opportunity to mold public policy would be greater."

He added that "the people in that senatorial district should have the option to choose the best candidate. I offer my past experience and background as qualifications that would make me the best candidate. My profile as a public official would be compatible with a cross-section of people in that entire senatorial district.

"I call them like I see them," Flynn said, "and I always try to vote for what is in the best interest of the district. I would like to be considered the best person to represent good government for that district."

Flynn said that Norwell and Hanover were part of that northern senatorial district until the late 1970's when the towns were redistricted to be included in the First Plymouth Senatorial District which was represented by Anna P. Buckley, D-Brockton, for many years, and is now represented by Sen. Michael Creedon, D-Brockton.

Sen. Allan R. McKinnon, D-Weymouth, represented Norwell and Hanover when they were part of that northern senatorial district. Flynn said the district he represents shares many of the same concerns and interests with those in Golden's senatorial district.

NO DEFINITE DECISION

Flynn has lived in Hanover since 1963, he said. He will have to move into the new district if he decides to run for the seat, but he hasn't decided which town he would move to, he said, because he hasn't yet made a definite decision about whether he will run.

He said he would do "a lot of soul-searching" between now and the meeting on Oct. 19. He said his decision is not one that would be made lightly. "I'm giving this a lot of serious thought. I want to make sure it is the right thing to do."

He added that if he decides to seek the senatorial position, he would not be abandoning his constituents in Norwell, Hanover and Rockland. He said he would still have their best interest at heart, even though he would not be directly representing them as a senator. "I can't conceive of too many times that I'd vote in a way that would adversely affect them," he said.

He said that if he decides to announce his candidacy on Oct. 19, he would be giving a year's notice so that anyone in the Fifth District who might be interested in running for his seat would have an opportunity to prepare a campaign. The primary is Sept. 18, 1990, he said. His term as state representative ends in December, 1990.

Flynn, who has had serious health problems and major surgery in the past, said his health now "is excellent. I talked it over with my doctor and he said 'no problem.'"

Some of the current issues which concern Flynn are commuter/rail and state government which he says has expanded too quickly. He is also concerned about education in the Commonwealth and the drug problem.

On abortion, Flynn said, "I respect a woman's right of free choice, but I believe we should work together and eliminate abortion as the number one option.

Hedlund named to CLT

Citizens for Limited Taxation (C.L.T.) Executive Director Chip Faulkner last week named State Senate candidate Robert Hedlund co-ordinator for the towns of Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury for their initiative petition signature drive.

CLT is attempting to place a referendum question on the 1990 ballot that addresses the 15 percent increase in the state income tax that was levied to fund the state budget deficit.

Those wishing further information or petitions are asked to call Ross at 740-4920 or Pam at 925-5489.

Hussey against MBTA cuts

State Senate candidate Don Hussey attended an October 2 reception in honor of William Weld, candidate for governor.

Hussey also attended the open forum public hearing on the proposed MBTA bus service cuts. The MBTA is planning to cancel the subsidized bus service which runs between Hull and Quincy October 31.

"I have never seen such expression of emotion in a public meeting. Especially the people of Hull who will be without public transportation of any kind if these cuts are implemented," he said.

St. Stephen's Church

Giving to God

One of the joys of the stewardship "Evening Coffees" has been the opportunity to talk of what God has given us and continues to give us in creation, in the person of Jesus Christ, and in the power of the Spirit. Our giving to God is a response to these three great gifts he gives to us.

There are three more evening coffees at people's homes and a fourth at the church after fellowship time on October 22. I encourage you to attend one of these coffees. Pledge cards will be mailed out to all those who were not able to attend.

If you have not returned your pledge card please do so as soon as possible. Our ingathering and celebration of pledges will take place on October 29.

Vestry Retreat to consider dreams

The parish has been doing some good dreaming at our "Evening Coffees" of ways of strengthening and broadening the mission of St. Stephen's. Over Friday and Saturday, October 27 and 28, the Vestry will meet at the Briarcliffe Conference Center on the Cape to consider these good ideas which you have offered. We will see that the results of the "Coffees" and Vestry deliberations are made available to all.

Course on making faith work

An Adult Education course to help us make connections between our faith and work lives will begin on Wednesday, October 25 at 7:30 p.m. The class will continue for two more sessions on November 1 and 8. Together we will explore God's purpose for our work and workplace, and we will consider how the model of Jesus' leadership offers approaches to workplace challenges.

Obituaries

Walter A. O'Meara

In an obituary for Walter A. O'Meara published in last week's Cohasset Mariner, the name of his daughter, Ellen Woolf, was omitted. Mrs. Woolf is a Cohasset resident.

Mr. O'Meara also leaves two sons, Donn O'Meara of Caracas, Venezuela and Wolfe O'Meara of Bisbee, Ariz.; another daughter, Deidre Humphrey of Westport, Conn.; 14 grandchildren, including Andrea Tebbetts of Hingham and 14 great-grandchildren, including Claire Tebbetts of Hingham.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Betty White

Funeral services were held Sunday, Oct. 9 at the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home for Betty (Gray) White. Mrs. White, 79, died Tuesday, Oct. 4 at her home after a brief illness.

Born in Toronto, she lived in Santa Fe, N.M. and St. Louis, Mo., before moving to Cohasset 25 years ago.

She leaves her son, Donald Krause of Spokane, Wash.; two daughters, Martha Saunders of Hingham and Holly Danahy of Pittsburgh; four sisters in Canada; nine grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Memorial donations may be sent to the Red Cross, 99 Brookline Ave., Boston, for the St. Croix Relief Fund.

Providing You Service!

We're Eastern Utilities. We take pride in the quality of electric service we provide. But we do more than that!

• GOOD NEIGHBOR ENERGY FUND — helps families in need pay any type of energy bill.

• GATEKEEPER — our meter readers keep a watchful eye out for our elderly customers.

• RADIO ASSIST & TRAFFIC NET — we use the two-way radios in our vehicles to report trouble or danger.

• SPEAKERS CLUB — we'll talk to your schools, club or civic group on energy issues.

• SAFETY EDUCATION — we're in your schools, teaching electric safety.

• EDUCATIONAL SERVICES — we give a wealth of printed material, computer programs and videos to schools, to help teachers with their science curriculum.

• MEDICAL PRIORITY LIST — we maintain a list of customers who rely on electricity to help cope with a medical problem; during extended outages, we'll tell these customers what to expect and what measures they should take.

• BUDGET BILLING — this program helps people plan their monthly electric expenses.

• THIRD-PARTY NOTIFICATION — a customer can arrange for another person to receive duplicate copies of important notices from our company; this would help customers who might fall ill or, for any reason, might have trouble communicating with us.

• TTY/TTD — a special telephone system for our hearing-impaired or speech-impaired customers.

• NEW PROGRAMS — we welcome any suggestions to help improve our service to special-needs customers. Please contact us.

HOW TO CONTACT US:

If you're a customer of Blackstone Valley Electric, call the Customer Service Department at (401) 333-1110; customers with a Pascoag exchange should call (401) 647-3335; and the TTY/TTD number for speech and hearing-impaired customers is 1-800-245-8010.

If you're a customer of Eastern Edison, call the Customer Service Department, in the Brockton area, call (508) 583-3700 or 1-800-242-5810. In the Fall River area, call (508) 675-2100. For both areas, the TTY/TTD number for speech and hearing-impaired customers is 1-800-245-7007.

Children's book fair planned

The Carriage House Nursery School is sponsoring a three-day Book Fair for children of all ages Oct. 17, 18 and 19.

The books are being supplied by the "Little Book Room" located in Milton. The "Little Book Room" is well-known for its quality selection of literature for children. The "Little Book Room" has selected new publications as well as some old favorites for you to choose from.

The Book Fair will be held Oct. 17, 18 and 19 at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 N. Main Street. Hours are from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. each day and from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 18.

Cohasset Boosters sports sale

Cohasset Boosters Sports Sale will be held Saturday, Oct. 28, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Deer Hill School cafeteria.

The Boosters are looking for ski's, ski boots, skates, down vests, gloves, goggles, cross country skis, sleds, hockey gear, stilts, bikes, tennis rackets, hiking gear, rafts, water skis, badminton sets or any other articles that are saleable.

Sports items may be consigned or donated Friday, Oct. 27 from 12 to 5 p.m. at the Deer Hill cafeteria or by calling Ernie Grassey at 383-6857, Lucy Marssc at 383-9845, or Eileen Corbett at 383-6467.

Art exhibit to open

The Contextures II Exhibition will open November 17 at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

The exhibit will focus on new directions in fiber — featuring art to wear.

In lieu of a traditional opening reception, there will be a fashion show entitled Artful Apparel Fashion Show at 6:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 17. Sixteen artists from Massachusetts and Connecticut will exhibit their work in both the Contextures II and in the Fashion Show. Each artist incorporates fibers and fabrics to create unique and one of a kind garments which under the individual influence of the artist become a piece of wearable art.

Tickets are $12 for individual or $20 for couples. There will be a cash bar and hors d'oeuvres.

For more information, call the South Shore Art Center weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 383-9548.

Adult art workshops

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset will offer several workshops for adults during the month of November. Watercolor, Monotype and Collage Workshop taught by Judy Hochberg will meet Tuesday, Nov. 14 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. By painting on acetate and mixing watercolor paints with waterbased inks, students can bring the spontaneity of "en plein air" work to printmaking. Learn monotype techniques that may be used outdoors and brought back to the studio for printing. Chine colle and stencils will enrich pieces created.

Portrait Basics Workshop will be taught by Harriet Zabusky Zand. The three-day workshop will meet Wednesday through Friday, November 15 to 17 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Students will learn basic portrait techniques and composition in this hands-on workshop for beginning portrait artists. Working from the model each day, students can use their own choice of medium. There will be daily group techniques.

In addition to these workshops, there are workshops in fibers and fabrics. Fabric Painting and Decorating taught by Ann Murphy will meet Thursdays November 9 and 16 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Silk Painting will meet Tuesday and Thursday, Nov. 14 and 16 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. This two-day workshop will be taught by Joan Hausrath. Papermaking taught by Brenton Welch will meet Saturday, Nov. 18 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Pre-registration is required for all courses and workshops. For more information about these workshops and for a complete listing of all courses, or to register, call the South Shore Art Center weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 383-9548.

Art center auction Nov. 3

The South Shore Art Center in Cohasset will sponsor Art etc. Auction, November 3 at 8 p.m.

It will feature fine art by South Shore artists and an array of unique services and items that will only be available at the auction.

Baseballs autographed by Dennis Lamp and Jim Lomborg, a unique vessel by Robert St.Pierre, a private flight to Nantucket for four for brunch, a Claffy Williams painting, Celtics tickets, an Amy Whorf photograph, and a weekend on the Cape are among the many offerings.

Of special interest is a movie package where the bidder may win a preview of a movie to be released in the winter or spring. The winner may include 75 friends for wine, hors d'oeuvres and popcorn and enjoy the evening at the Harborlight Cinema.

Wigmore Pierson of Continental Cable, Bruce Tuthill from South Shore Playhouse, and Mandy Avery, the SSAC Festival chair, will be the auctioneers. All the art work may be previewed at the Art Center, October 30 through November 3 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tickets may be purchased at the SSAC. The evening will include a cash bar and refreshments.

Call 617-383-9548 for additional information.

Mary-Martha benefit set

The first major fundraiser to benefit the Mary-Martha Learning Center in Hingham is planned for Friday, Nov. 4 at the Broadcove Ballroom, Route 3A in Hingham.

The "Auction For Hope" will begin at 6:30 p.m., with a social, silent auction and preview followed by the live auction at 8 p.m.

Co-chairman, Peg Smith of Hingham, with a committee of volunteers has solicited many items and services including crafts, art work, vacation homes, sporting event tickets, theatre tickets, and items and gift certificates from local merchants.

The proceeds will go toward the Capital Campaign Fund of the Mary-Martha Learning Center which has been established to pay off the recently acquired mortgage on the Center at 1045 Main Street in Hingham.

"If we can eliminate our monthly mortgage payment we can use that money toward improving our services," said John Seavey, President of the Quincy Crisis Center which operates the M-MLC. The Capital Campaign Drive has raised nearly $100,000 and will raise $300,000 in the next three years.

Tickets to the auction are $5 and are available at all Nobles Camera Stores. There will be a cash bar and gourmet finger food.

For further information or to order tickets by phone, call 749-9412 or 749-8857.

Documentary to air again

ContinentalCablevision will be re-airing the award-winning documentary "Independent Living Options for Elders on the South Shore" Oct. 3 and 10 at 6 p.m. on Continental Channel 53 in Hingham and Cohasset.

The community television program was produced by members of A.A.R.P. Chapter 1139, who also produce the popular weekly program "Senior Spectrum," seen on Channel 53 on Tuesday nights at 7 p.m.

FLU shot clinics scheduled

The Cohasset Board of Health and the Social Service League of Cohasset will hold the annual influenza vaccination clinics Saturday, Oct. 14, and Saturday, Oct. 28, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall for Cohasset residents.

The flu vaccine is trivalent and will protect against three different strains of flu.

Drama club opens season

After a year's absence from the Cohasset Town Hall stage because of construction activities on the Town Hall addition, the Cohasset Dramatic Club returns to open its 69th season in November with the musical comedy, "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown."

Based on the comic strip "Peanuts" by Charles Schulz, the production highlights songs and sketches about Charlie Brown's problems with kiting, redheads, school - and Lucy!

Originally produced on Broadway in 1967, the musical comedy was named as one of the top ten shows for the 1966-67 season. The show is unique in its appeal to all age groups; adults appreciate the sophisticated lines and lyrics and children of all ages gleefully associate with the action of adults playing as five and six year old kids and a dog.

"You're a Good Man Charlie Brown" will be directed by Martha Sawyer.

Sawyer has selected an experienced cast which includes: John Sawyer as Charlie Brown; Gayl Varallo as Lucy; Nila Kingston as Patty; Joe Hochkeppel as Schroeder; Geof Campbell as Linus; and Lauri Campbell as Snoopy.

The play dates are Thursday, Nov. 16, Friday, Nov. 17, Saturday, Nov. 18, at 8 p.m. and a Sunday afternoon matinee November 19 at 2 p.m. The ticket prices will be $8.

Laas on cable

Assistant Attorney General Marek L. Laas will be the guest on Pierson to Person, Thursday, Oct. 12 from 8 to 9 p.m.

Laas will be discussing his August visit to Poland with a Massachusetts House delegation. He will review "Poland Today."

With events moving so quickly in Eastern Europe today, his visit and his insights are so timely.

Wigmore A. Pierson hosts the weekly show which is aired each Thursday night, 8 to 9 p.m., on Channel 3 and 53 in Cohasset and Chanel 53 in Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Hanover and Scituate.

"Mental Aerobics" Oct. 21

Cohasset Community Center is offering a one-day workshop entitled "Think Again! . . . a Mental Aerobics Course," with Jeanne Hillson.

The premise of the October 21 workshop is that a mind permitted to run free will discover new territory. This experiential workshop offers practical tools that enable participants to perceive and create new opportunities and alternatives.

In "Think Again!" workshop participants work with a variety of creative problem solving approaches that help them to gain insight into the creative process, untangle and define problems and decisions, generate solutions quickly and easily, and avoid obstacles.

Hillson has been teaching creative thinking and idea generation in both the public and private sectors for nearly 10 years. She is the founder of Applied Imagination, a training and counseling center based in Cambridge.

The workshop will be held at Cohasset Community Center Saturday, Oct. 21 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

To register or for further information call 383-0088.

Amateur Gardeners meeting

The next meeting of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will be at the home of Jean Syrmopoulos at 2 p.m. October 17 with Elinor Kennedy as co-hostess.

Members who wish to participate in a walk at the Albert F. Norris Reservation in Norwell before the meeting are asked to meet at St. Anthony's parking lot at 10:45 a.m.

Open house at Wah Lum

Saturday, Nov. 4 Wah Lum Academy, 130 King Street (Rt. 3A) will host an Open House from 1 to 3 p.m.

Children and adults will be welcome to participate in a free introductory lesson in Chinese kung fu. Refreshments will follow.

Wah Lum Academy is located on Rt. 3A in Cohasset. For further information, call 383-6822.

First Parish celebration

Sunday, Oct. 22, there will be a special service at the First Parish in Cohasset Meeting House celebrating the 20th Anniversary of Rev. Edward Atkinson as minister there.

Members and friends of First Parish and the general public are all cordially invited to join in the celebration in recognition of this very special occasion. The service is scheduled to begin at 4 p.m.

For additional details, contact the office at First Parish at 383-1100.

Coastline College Night

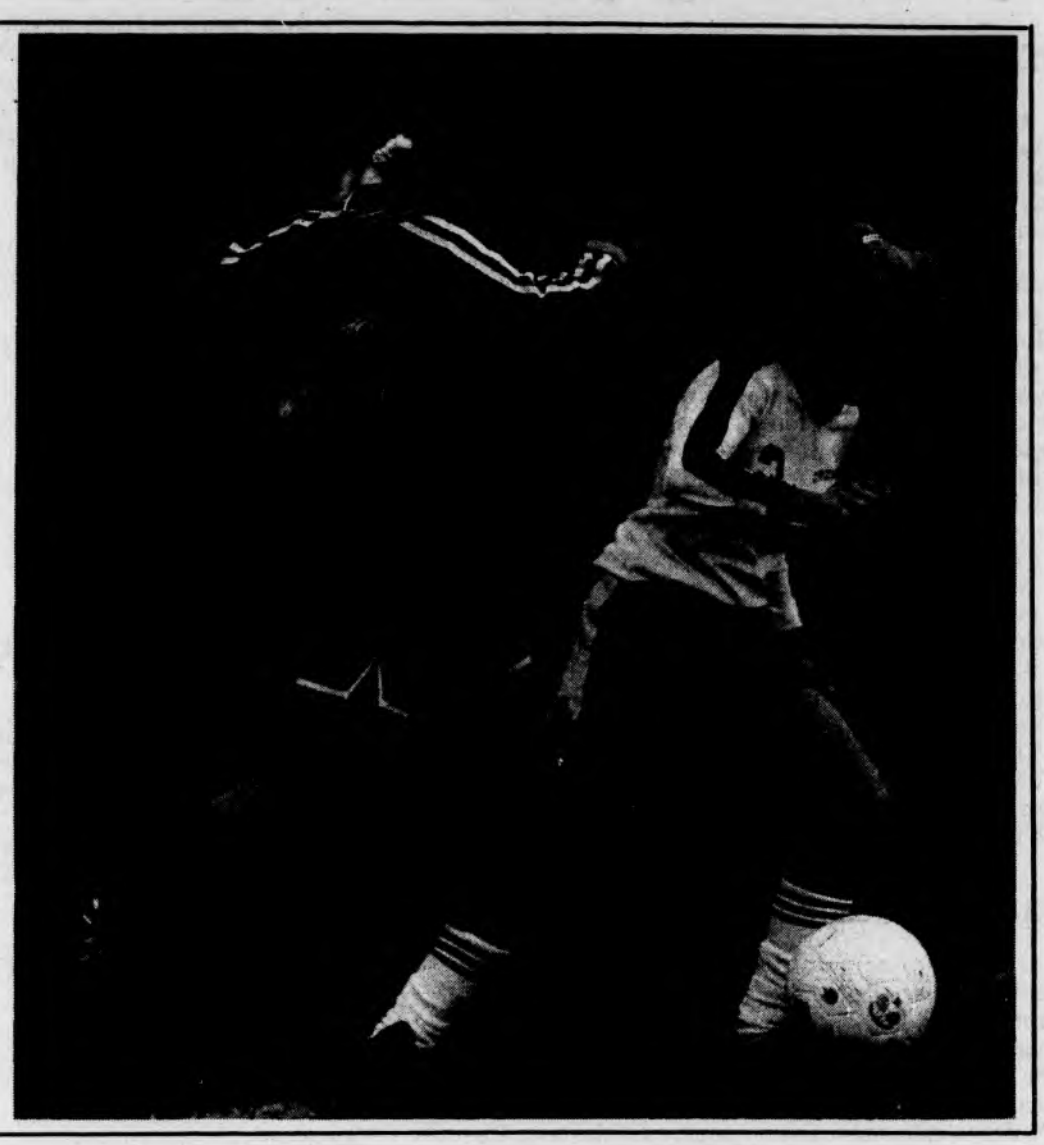
The Annual "Coastline College Night" will be held at Cohasset High School on Tuesday, October 17, at 7:30 p.m.

The Coastline College Night is conducted by the guidance departments of the towns of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, and Scituate. This year approximately one hundred ninety (190) colleges and universities will be in attendance and representatives will be present for the purpose of meeting with students and parents.

This will be an excellent opportunity for parents and students of the four towns to meet with the college personnel and receive first hand information. The guidance departments encourage their juniors and seniors to attend.

Bookfair in October

The Carriage House Nursery School will be having its annual bookfair October 17, 18 and 19 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Parish House. Books are supplied by the Little Book Room in Milton and offer a broad selection for preschoolers and elementary age children.



Early release Oct. 12

October 12 will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

SCHOOL	BUSES DEPART
Junior/Senior High School	12:00 p.m.
Deer Hill School	12:40 p.m.
Joseph Osgood School	12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schools and food service will be available at the junior/senior high school.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Commitee to allow the staff for budget review preparation and to prepare for accreditation.

Ellinger provides push to get season's 1st win

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

Mike Ellinger scored the game-winning touchdown on a four-yard run with 41 seconds remaining to give his Cohasset High School football team their first win of the season, a 15-8 come-from-behind victory over Carver last Saturday.

Ellinger spoiled Carver's attempt at its first-ever victory in the South Shore League.

Ellinger's score was set up by Joel Whitman's fumble recovery just after Carver (1-3, 0-3 SSL) took the lead with less than two minutes left.

Carver, fresh from the first victory in its program's two-year history (last week's 29-8, non-league win over Old Colony), scored when quarterback Eric Johnson found Scott Holmes alone in the right corner of the end zone for a 35-yard touchdown reception. Holmes then caught a two-point conversion pass from Johnson, giving the Crusaders an one-point advantage, 8-7.

On the ensuing kickoff which Carver was assessed with a 15-yard unsportsmanlike conduct penalty for their over exuberance after the go-ahead touchdown, Cohasset's Curt Ludlow returned the ball to the Carver 41-yard line.

On Cohasset's first play from scrimmage, quarterback John Bowen, who was given the starting nod when head coach Phil Pisano decided to put Ellinger (the number-one signal caller for the first three weeks of the campaign) at halfback to provide the Skippers with a more balanced running attack, threw an interception with 1:20 left in the game. When Holmes made the interception, it appeared Carver had the contest locked up with Cohasset holding just two timeouts.

On first down, however, Cohasset lineman Greg Thomas forced a fumble and the Skippers came up with the ball at the 20. Three plays later, Ellinger took it in to win the game.

After a scoreless first half, Curt Ludlow put Cohasset (1-3, 1-2 SSL) ahead in the third period, with a 40-yard touchdown jaunt. Ellinger kicked the extra point, 7-0.

Offensively, Ellinger produced the biggest runs of the day, a 33-yard gainer and a 22-yard spurt.

Defensively, Mike Dockray picked off an interception, while Ludlow came up with a big third-down-and-seven tackle that led to his third-period touchdown.

It is homecoming day at Milliken Field October 21 when Cohasset faces Norwell (2-2, 2-0 SSL). All the festivities begin at 1:30 p.m.

Boys' soccer

Senior Jim Reidy scored three times, giving him 15 for the season, as the Cohasset High School boys' soccer team won a South Shore League game at Middleboro, 5-0, October 4.

Ryan Cebelli and Bill Baird also scored for the Skippers as senior goalie Joel Reidy recorded his 33rd career shutout. Cohasset improves to 6-2-1 on the year.

"We are getting better each game which is a good sign," said Cohasset coach Dan Magner, whose club has made the tournament every season during his four-year tenure. "Our objective is to win the league title again since there are a lot of good teams this year."

Travis Coley and Baird have provided Cohasset with excellent defense from their fullback position.

"We have always had good defenders in the past, but Travis and Bill have played beyond everyone's expectations. They could be the best ever at Cohasset.

Joel has been terrific in net, while his brother, Jimmy, is our sniper on offense. Overall, this team carries a good attitude," added Magner.

Field hockey

Junior Barbara Lagrotteria scored twice in the second half, leading Cohasset High School to a 2-1 triumph over Middleboro in a South Shore League field hockey game October 3.

Goalie Candi Jones made 12 saves for the visiting Skippers (3-5).

Allison Ludlow scored two unassisted goals in the first half, sparking Cohasset to a 4-2, non-league girls' soccer victory over Middleboro at home.

Linda Hague also scored to account for Cohasset's 3-1 lead at halftime.

Corey DeSantis also scored for the Skippers (4-3-1), and Kerri Miele turned in a fine defensive performance.

Tanya Peterson earned the victory in net with five saves.

Seahawks sponsor skate lessons

The word is out and is spreading rapidly among youngsters age 5 - 9 from the South Shore towns of Cohasset, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, and Scituate.

The most exciting place to be on Saturday nights is at the Learn-To-Skate Clinic offered by the Seahawks youth hockey program at the Hobomock Rink in Pembroke.

The Seahawks have run this successful program for the last 7 years and have introduced the fun of ice skating to almost 1,000 local youngsters in that time. The program is considered one of the best in the state and is now being copied by many other recreation and youth hockey organizations.

During the first nine weeks, through Thanksgiving, beginner skaters are taught the basics such as stops, turns, and improving their stride. After Thanksgiving, all youngsters that want to play youth hockey are invited to join "development" teams that play one hour games every weekend at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham against youngsters of like a[illegible]ility from other towns. For those that do not want to join teams, the Learn-To-Skate continues until the end of March.

Youth hockey, unlike many other youth sports, is divided into many (2 year) age groups with 3 levels of ability in each, and 7 levels for youngsters 5 - 9 years old. This means that a youngster, who is new to the sport, is always placed in a position where he/she can be very successful.

The Learn-To-Skate Clinic meets every Saturday evening from 5 to 6 p.m. at the Hobomock Rink in Pembroke. The registration fee is $5 and the clinic fee is $3 for each lesson. New skaters may register at any clinic from now through next March.

The only equipment needed is a helmet, gloves or mittens, and good quality skates that fit.

For information on the clinic or equipment, parents may call Steve Alpert, program director, at 659-7078.

Gardens Pub grabs first place

Gardens Pub defeated Bare Cove 5-4 in an exciting game to take sole possession of first place.

Gardens' John "77" Kearney scored in the 1st period to extend his scoring streak to two games. Bob Brodeaur scored four minutes later to make it 2-0. Bare Cove came roaring back with three unanswered goals by Captain Glenn Peterson, Steve Lavarigie and Bob Nihtler to take a 3-2 lead. Bob Brodeaur scored again and Mike O'Connell also aggeg in the second to lead Gardens to a 4-3 lead. Much-travelled journeyman Paul "Adams" O'Brien scored in the third to pull away to a 5-3 lead. O'Brien also had three assists for the evening, Fred Cashman has two assists. Tremendous offensive pressure was applied by Bare Cove in the last five minutes paying off in goals by Tom Chisolm to pull within one.

Gardens goalie Marc Nantel came up with outstanding saves to clinch the game. Gene Anderson and Roy Laplante had two assists each for Bare Cove.

The revamped Varmints pulled the upset of the season by defeating Roman Garden, 3-2. Varmints Captain Bob Leger and Peter Curran scored in the first period giving them a 2-0 lead. Roman's Jack McCarthy and Dick "Big Bro" Ethier tallied to even the score in the second. This contest has the near capacity crowd on the edge of their seats for the duration of the third period. Varmints Jamie Young, taking a pass from John Morgan, beat out goalie Brian Deacitis with 2 seconds left to pull the upset. John "Mario" Morgan had 3 assists for the evening.

Gulph Construction drubbed Sullivan Tire 10-5 with three players getting two goals each, Joe Fell, Ed Kelly and Dan Bailey. Gulph jumped to a 4-2 lead after the first period, 8-5 after the second and two in the third. Sullivan Tire's unsigned free agent Marty King had two goals and two assists for the evening, only to be matched by Gulph's Larry "Elbow" Fell's four points. Sullivan's other scores were by Captain Carl "Coach" Nantel and two by Dan "B" Begin. Bo O'Shaughnessy had four assists. Gulph's other scores were by Captain Ted Mally, Charlie Enwright and Jack Dean.

Tidbit of the Week: Sullivan Tire is sponsoring a get-acquainted evening so their players get to know all the new minor league players now on their team.

Information about the league is available on the bulletin board at Quincy Youth Arena.

Spring soccer try-outs

Wah Lum Academy wins awards

Several members of Cohasset's Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy recently won trophies at the KRANE Bay State Karate Championships held in Pembroke Ma.

Instructors John Loupos and Jim Hassan took a first place in the two-person forms division. Liz Iacovino won second place in the beginner womens fighting division. Loupos also won first place in the Senior Advanced Forms Division. Wah Lum Academy is located on Rt 3A in Cohasset.

Furniture restoration class

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a furniture restoration-refinishing-revitalization class taught by Kenneth Sargent of Cohasset Country Workshop.

Sessions are four weeks and meet Wednesdays from 9 to 11 a.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium. The fee is $40 per person. Classes are restricted in size to allow for individual attention.

Participants should select a portable piece of furniture. A chair or small table is ideal.

Participants will be required to bring some supplies with them to class and other supplies will be provided. When you call to register, indicate what piece of furniture you will be bringing to class. Non-Cohasset residents will be accepted for enrollment. The first session is scheduled to begin mid-October.

FOR AN IDEA OF HOW DIRTY YOUR ORIENTAL RUG IS, RUB THIS AND LOOK AT YOUR FINGER.

Oriental rugs are constantly picking up various types of soil. Some are greasy and some are gritty. But they all can eat away at your treasured possession.

For your Oriental rug to retain its beauty and value, it should be cleaned at least once every three to five years.

At Grillo Oriental Rug Cleaning, we carefully examine each rug, then give it the most suitable treatment. Sometimes that means gentle machine-washing, other times it means our 'Art-Safe' hand-washing. And our exclusive equipment and methodology enable us to remove the deep-set grit that others miss.

Furthermore, unlike harsh commercial cleaning, our individualized, museum-quality care is always safe, always effective.

For more information, or to have your rug picked up, call (617) 871-6500. Outside this area code, call 1-800-649-7707.

Ball to benefit community center

An elegant evening of dining and dancing is planned for Saturday, Oct. 28 to raise funds as part of the Cohasset Community Center's Mortgage Reduction Campaign.

The details for the black tie event entitled "A Starry Evening" are being coordinated by Chairmen Mrs. David Holway, Mrs. Frank O'Connell, and Mrs. Robert Ralston. The evening will begin at 7 p.m. with a cocktail reception and will be followed by dinner and dancing to the popular orchestra, The View.

The gala will take place at Herring Brook Place Mall off The Driftway in Scituate. The attractive mall will be superbly transformed for the occasion. Mrs. Brenda Goodell, a highly skilled, professional special events coordinator, has donated her services to organize the transformation of the mall for "A Starry Evening." Her extensive inventory of props has been generously donated for the evening by Reebok International, which has shipped the setting by trucks from their warehouses in Atlanta, Georgia. The three-course gourmet dinner will be catered by one of the South Shore's most highly regarded caterers—The Borrowed Butler of Scituate.

All guests will receive a gift which has been generously donated by Filenes Department Stores as a token of their support for the evening.

Tickets for the evening are $125 per person. For reservations or information call Mrs. David Holway at 383-1763. The funds raised will be applied toward the $292,000 mortgage which was borrowed to build the Community Center's recent addition. This expansion has enabled the Center to offer a greater selection of Senior Citizen, after-school sports, Nursery School, and adult programs.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division

Docket No. 89C0194-C1
NOTICE OF CHANGE OF NAME

To Richard Henderson Kelly, Jr. the only person interested in the petition hereinafter described.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Siobian Hart Kelly, a minor, by Charlene M. Hart as mother and next friend, of Cohasset in said County, praying that her name may be changed as follows:

Siobian Hart Kelly to Siobhan Kimberly Hart-Kelly.

If you desire to object thereto you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the twenty-fifth day of October, 1989, the return day of this citation.

WITNESS, ROBERT M. FORD Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this twenty-sixth day of September, 1989.

Local doctors plea for drug education to combat abuse

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

More education for youngsters and their parents is necessary to combat the abuse of drugs within this community, a panel of local phsycians told the town's drug and alcohol abuse committee.

"Education is enormously important and it's important that parents be involved," Dr. Mundhenk told the town comittee Tuesday night. "Parents should learn to say no to their kids. They should know that it is not a four-letter word - that they need to set limits."

Five local physicians were invited to the committee meeting this week to discuss their experiences in dealing with alcoholic and drug-addicted patients. The panel included Dr. Robert Sceery, Dr. Roger Pomeo, Dr. Charles Mundhenk, Dr. Robert Williams and Dr. Steven Golden.

When asked if they were concerned about the extent of illegal drug use in Cohasset, Dr. Sceery answered, "It has happened often enough to make me greatly concerned." Dr. Sceery said most of his patients who have admitted an abuse problem are alcoholics. The drugs of choice are cocaine and marijuana, he said, and recently he has witnessed an increased use of acid.

Jack Golden, chairman of the drug committee said five Cohasset students last week mentioned that acid is being used by students. "We were

Information to be distributed on need for station repairs

The police and fire station repairs which were approved by the annual town meeting last year, but defeated by a Proposition 2 1/2 override ballot, will be given a second chance.

With the encouragement of selectmen, members of the station renovation committee will prepare a written explanation, outlining the reasons for the renovations. That information will be distributed to residents sometime this spring, in the hope that voters will approve a Proposition 2 1/2 override to finance the $700,000 project.

Barbara Moore, chairman of the station committee, explained to selectmen Monday night the need to complete at least some portion of the project. However, she noted, it had already been significantly reduced since the original $1 million project was first proposed more than two years ago.

"We're down to the bare minimum now," she said.

What is necessary now, selectmen agreed, is a townwide educational program to convince voters of the need to approve an override for the project.

"The problem is education," Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt stated. "It's difficult to persuade voters with a brief speech and some slides at town meeting. What you need to do is to write a comprehensive treatise and tell them like it is."

Voters were never asked to rescind their appropriation approval of the police and fire station renovation project, and the committee decided to keep it off a second override election ballot last spring. That was deliberate, Moore explained, so that another study committee would not have to conduct a subsequent series of studies on the building. "If we went to another override vote, we'd want to put it on when the town was more receptive," she said. "We as a town have to consider what are our priorities - the safety of our children and our elderly. Is safety important in this community - I think it should be."

Moore recalled that the appropriation for the renovation project was overwhelmingly approved at the annual town meeting last spring. It was defeated by less than a quarter of the votes at the override election. "It was not a tremendous loss. That was rather heartening for us," she said.

Ooops, Halloween is Oct. 31

This is no trick.

Last week, selectmen thought it would be a good idea for kids to celebrate Halloween on Sunday, Oct. 29. This week, they decided that wasn't such a great idea.

Cohasset will now observe Halloween on the traditional date of October 31.

Selectman Diana Kornet last week suggested that Halloween in Cohasset should be celebrated October 29, following the community center's annual Halloween parade on the common. It would be logical for the kids to go from the parade into their neighborhoods to begin their trick or treating, she suggested. Selectmen then voted to move the date to October 29.

After a flurry of phone calls made to several selectmen this week, the board decided to revert back to the October 31 date.

"A lot of people were dismayed. They feel there'll be a lot of confusion, and they're afraid some people will be out one day and others will come another night. They think Halloween should stay where it was," Kornet said Monday night. "I didn't get any calls saying what a great idea it was."

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt noted that the PSO was also opposed to the recommended date change. "It was too confusing," he said.

Selectmen reversed their vote of last week. And now, Cohasset will celebrate Halloween on the traditional date of October 31.

And that's no trick.

Group to raise money for field repairs

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

One way or another, there will be a Milliken Field renovation project.

The entire episode began about four years ago when many residents, including school officials, decided the town needed new and improved athletic fields. A study committee was formed and plans were created for a $1 million facility, including an expensive all-weather outdoor track.

That proposal was twice rejected by town meeting vote. A new study committee was formed, determined that the project would go forward, although at a much reduced rate.

Last spring, the Milliken Field committee presented a new plan to town meeting. This project would create three new athletic fields by establishing a new configuration between Milliken and Lillard fields. The cost was significantly lower - $280,000 - and voters quickly approved the deal by the necessary two-thirds majority.

But when it came time to increase taxes to pay for the new project, voters denied the proposal. Again, it was presented to voters at the adjourned session of the annual town meeting, and once again it was overwhelmingly approved, chairman Wayne Sawchuk recalled.

But at a second special election, residents once

Real estate tax deadline

Warning letters have been mailed to those property owners who still owe their Fiscal 1989 real estate taxes.

Demands were sent from our office on May 22, 1989 and our Deputy Collector, John P. Riley, served warrants on these delinquent accounts during the week of July 5.

In some cases these taxes remain unpaid due to a change in ownership. Any new home owners since January 1, 1988 who fail to receive a notice should contact our office immediately.

The Treasurer-Collector's office is instituting a new collection procedure to bring any unpaid parcels into tax title. These letters are usually sent out in February, but because of the fiscal problems the town is experiencing, any additional revenue that comes in at this time of year will help toward meeting weekly obligations.

If payment is not received by Friday, Nov. 3, the process of placing a tax lien on the property will begin.

For further information please call the Treasurer-Collector's office at 383-9900, extension 113.

Liquor license transfer

Peter Logan, owner of Cohasset Liquors, Inc., 800 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, has asked for a transfer of his retail package store liquor license to Curtis Liquor Stores Inc., 790 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

A hearing has been set by selectmen for October 30.

Logan wants to transfer the all alcoholic beverages license to Curtis Liquors Inc. which plans to operate a 13,840 square foot liquor store in the area where the Stop and Shop was formerly located.

Fiori's donate $1,160

Selectmen gave a vote of thanks to the Leo Fiori family for a check they presented to the town's drug and alcohol abuse committee.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby brought the check to Monday's selectmen's meeting. She presented it to the board, noting that the $1,160 will be used to assist the drug and alcohol abuse committee.

"It was even more money than they anticipated," she said. The Fiori's, owners of the Exxon service station at the corner of Rte. 3A and Beechwood Street, offered to donate two cents from every gallon of gas they sold during the past two weeks. They estimated it would total about $1,000. They money, they said, would be given to the new town committee to assist its investigation of illegal drug abuse in Cohasset, and to recommend solutions to any problem.

Officials hold off on vote

Selectmen postponed a vote the Old Colony railroad restoration project until after they have reviewed a draft of the state's environmental impact report.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt, who is opposed to the project, asked the board to express its collective opinion about the restoration.

The Old Colony Citizens Advisory Committee is meeting November 2 at Quincy High School to review the impact report. The public is invited to attend that hearing which will begin at 7:30 p.m.

"It brings the railroad question back into focus again," Pratt said, noting that the citizens' committee has been silent for several months while the study was drafted.

"Everytime I mention the railroad I'm suspect," Pratt said, ackowledging he lives adjacent to the former Old Colony railroad bed. "But this impact statement should be representative and I'm afraid it's going to be a whitewash. The truth is that the Greenbush line is going to run through 90 percent swamp, and that is nothing but a negative impact."

He also insisted the MBTA begin negotiations for the eminent domain taking of the railroad right of way. Pratt suggested an assessment be done so town officials can negotiate a reasonable price for the land. "We're certainly not going to give them the right of way," he said.

Selectmen Ned Tebbetts agreed that other public transportation alternatives should be pursued, including additional bus routes and expansion of the commuter boat service. He also expressed doubt about the federal government's ability to provide 90 percent funding for the Greenbush line which will cost about $500 million.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby, a member of the citizens advisory committee, said she did not feel prepared to take a vote on the issue until she reads the environmental report.

"I wonder, will that draft say (the railroad) will demolish the downtown businesses of Hingham?" Pratt questioned.

Selectman Diana Kornet said she too would deferr a vote on the matter until she reads the draft environmental report.

Tax rate will be set

Selectmen's Executive Secretary Greg Doyon said the assessors will be meeting this week with the town accountant to set a tax rate.

Now that the budgets have been set by a vote of the special town meeting, the assessors are ready to prepare a tax rate.

Selectmen assisted the process Monday night by endorsing a single tax rate for all property. Several weeks ago, selectmen voted to keep a single tax factor, which means there will be only one tax rate for all real estate within the town.

Currently, the total valuation for all real estate in Cohasset is $950,363,900. Residential land comprises 91 percent of the total property in town. Industrial and commercial property accounts for less than eight percent, with the remaining portion labeled open space.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt questioned the low percentage of commercial and industrial real estate. "Perhaps at another time we could take another look at different (tax) rates for commercial and industrial," he suggested.

Dramatic club to use hall

Selectmen gave permission to the Cohasset Dramatic Club to use the town hall auditorium on October 17 for a fall production rehearsal and November 3 for a set design workshop.

Although they will allow the club to use the auditorium every Saturday morning from November through April for a childrens' acting workshop, there are some strings attached.

In exchange for the use of the town hall auditorium, selectmen said the club should do something for the town. Since club spokesman Bonnie Haley said the organization is experiencing financial difficulties, selectmen said the repayment could be made in the form of repairs.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon suggested the club repair the front entrance to the auditorium, in addition to the painting and plumbing work they are completing to the backstage area of the auditorium.

Selectmen allowed the club to use the auditorium every Saturday, but they noted that on certain dates, such as the December 2 Village Fair, the dramatic club would have to find an alternate location.

Kennedy on cable show

Michael Kennedy, Chairman of Citizens Energy Corporation, a non-profit energy company, is this week's guest on "Pierson to Person" Thursday, Oct. 19, from 8-9 p.m., on Continental Cablevision Channels 53 and 3.

Kennedy is chairman of a $900 million international company whose principle objective is to provide energy conservation services for low income, multi-family dwellings.

Kennedy is an attorney, Harvard graduate and the sixth child of the late Senator Robert F. Kennedy.

Hosted by Wigmore A. Pierson, "Pierson to Person" is aired live on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset and Channel 53 in Hull, Hingham, Norwell, Hanover and Scituate each Thursday night, from 8-9 pm.

"My doctor took care of my simple fracture. It was my health plan that compounded the problem."

With most health plans you're left wondering whether or not you're covered, how to fill out the forms, and who to turn to for answers.

That's why over 130,000 people in eastern Massachusetts have turned to Pilgrim Health Care. Because we give comprehensive coverage you can count on. Without deductibles or paperwork. Best of all, we have over 1,800 physicians affiliated with our plan, so chances are one of them is yours. The one you know and trust.

Physicians express concern about drug use stunned that it is used in Cohasset," he said.

Dr. Williams, who is affiliated with Pembroke Hospital, noted, "I think there is a lot more going on in school than was talked about."

Each of the five physicians have treated patients with alcohol and drug abuse problems, but they agreed it is the attitude of the drug abusers that most disturbs them.

"We're not hearing about the use of quadludes or valium like we used to," said Dr. Roger Pompeo. "There's lots of acid around, and today kids are smarter about marijuana and cocaine. They know it's bad for you. But, on the other hand, it's this laisse faire attitide about alcohol that bothers me. I'm upset when I see the nicest kids - athletes - who feel that as a junior or senior (in high school) they have the right to drink alcohol.

"The attitude has probably changed for the worse since the 70's. They are doing whatever they want to do to their bodies even if it's bad."

Dr. Pompeo said he also has young male patients who freely admit to using steroids, despite knowing the severe side effects of that drug.

Dr. Sceery agreed with that assessment. He added, "I'm seeing more kids who drink than don't. It's rare to find a kid who does not drink. It is my understanding that there are more young people who use alcohol than do not use it."

Studies have substantiated that eighty percent of all high school-aged kids have experimented with some type of drug, Dr. Mundhenk added. "I see a lot of people who report cocaine abuse. Kids in this town seem to have a lot of disposable income. That's a drug that concerns me."

Dr. Pompeo told the committee about one patient who admits he is addicted to cocaine, but denies he has a problem. "He has no intention of quitting," the physician told the committee. "He told me he could afford it. 'I'm a trial lawyer" he told me. These are the attitudes adults have that are not different from the attitudes of the kids.

"If someone tells me they are doing cocaine and marijuana, I'm curious. I ask them how they get it and where do they do it. I ask them, 'aren't you afraid of getting caught?' They have a total disregard for the law - kids, and adults,too."

Each physician said it would be difficult to determine the percentage of their patients who use some type of drug, Dr. Mundhenk added. "I see a lot of people who report cocaine abuse. Kids in this town seem to have a lot of disposable income. That's a drug that concerns me."

the attitudes adults have that are not different from the attitudes of the kids.

"If someone tells me they are doing cocaine and marijuana, I'm curious. I ask them how they get it and where do they do it. I ask them, 'aren't you afraid of getting caught?' They have a total disregard for the law - kids, and adults,too."

Each physician said it would be difficult to determine the percentage of their patients who use illegal drugs, but they estimated the number is anywhere between 10 and 40 percent. They also agreed that the number has not increased over the past several years.

Dr. Golden said a partial victory could be claimed because that number has not increased. He also has witnessed a tremendous impact on young children through early educational intervention and television. He praised Cohasset's health education efforts, but noted that a more comprehensive program will require an increased budget. "It's pretty much a one-man show right now," he said. We're not seeing it at 100 percent right now, but it's a tremendous effort to solve the problem with preventative intervention."

"We've got to start influencing them at a much younger age," Dr. Pompeo said. "As school, church and prents - we can make greater demands on our children. This community suffers from children phobia. There are a lot of tough decisions to make and we need to make them."

Many parents, "nice people," he said, allow their teenaged children to drink because other parents allow their children to do the same. He criticized this attitude and noted that parents should set tougher rules for their children to follow.

Dr. Mundhenk noted that some Cohasset parents allow their underaged children to drink at home. "They think they're going to drink anyhow and it's better than marijuana. But that's a distortion."

Committee member Wigmore Pierson asked the physicians what would be the single most important thing they could tell the community about its drug problem.

"I would say to make a firm stand on education in the school system. As good as it is, it's still weak. Education is a must and it has to be increased," Dr. Golden stated.

"Parents need to talk to each other," Dr. Williams told the committee. He also suggested that students who have recovered from drug abuse problems could be trained as peer counselors and could talk to other students. "They're the people kids will talk to," he noted.

"It would be most effective to focus on the education of parents, to re-examine our attitudes

"It would be most effective to focus on the education of parents, to re-examine our attitudes and what kind of demands we are placing on our kids. That's the most effective thing this committee could establish," according to Dr. Pompeo.

And Dr. Sceery said it would also be important to find alternative areas for adolescents to congregate. Other than Sandy Beach, there is nothing else for the youngsters to do in this town, he said. "If there is nothing else to do, they are bound to go to the beach because everyone else is there," he stated.

Committee postpones decision on coach

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

In a break from their usual practice, the Cohasset School Committee declined the recommendations of the athletic director and tabled the appointment of coaches for the girls' varsity and junior varsity basketball teams.

The move followed a protest by the current assistant coach, Jason Proodian.

Proodian has been the volunteer assistant for the past four seasons. When the position of coach became available, he submitted an application. Proodian was not interviewed and was given no explanation why he was not considered for the position.

The committee was less concerned about Proodian's plight than by the fact that the high school principal was not involved in the interviewing process.

Committee member Ralph Kidder wanted the building principal to participate in the interview process because a coaching position involves more than just athletic skills and coaching techniques.

"It's a question about the integrity of a process that puts adults in contact with students," said Kidder.

The committee assured Proodian that he would have an opportunity to be interviewed under the new interviewing guidelines they were establishing. They also cautioned him that the outcome might well be the same.

Under the new process, interviews will take place immediately. Following a recommendation by the interviewing team, an ad hoc meeting of the school committee will be called to avoid further delays in the start of the girls' basketball program.

The committee unanimously approved the appointment of Kathy Doby as the teacher of the new first grade section.

Doby has been employed as a curriculum specialist and head teacher at the Cole Harrington Children's Center in Canton, Massachusetts. She also taught in Florida.

Jack Creamer, principal at Joseph Osgood School, told the committee that Doby was set to begin teaching October 17th.

The 21 students moving to the new class were given a little party to introduce them to their new teacher and new classroom.

Money for the new position was made available by reducing the curriculum enrichment position to a part time job. The need to deal with the population explosion in the first grade and an inadequate budget left the administration with no other alternatives.

Finally, the committee gave Horace Mann grants to four projects.

Money for the grants comes from the state.The amount each school district receives is based on the number of teachers in the school system.

The program is meant to involve teachers in curriculum development.

This is the fourth year of the program. In previous years, Cohasset received $11,000 to fund a variety of innovative programs. The state budget crisis caused a severe cutback in the program. Cohasset received less than $3000 this year.

In order to fully fund the four programs, Cohasset supplemented the grant money with $360 from the regular school budget.

Projects funded were:

• Adventure Based Curriculum submitted by Alternative School teacher Jack Buckley.

Buckley's project will incorporate Outward Bound style activities into the English, social studies, and science curricula at the Alternative School.

• Hands-on lessons in art and music history submitted by Colleen Lucas and Colleen Foley.

Their project will develop an art and music cur-

Fundraising group to go forward with field plans

again decided they didn't want to increase their taxes to pay for the renovations.

Finally, the article appeared in last week's special town meeting warrant. This time, voters were asked to rescind their appropriation for the $280,000 project. Sawchuk asked voters to postpone any action on the article, noting that it will go forward despite the override failure.

He explained that a private fundraising organization is being formed which will solicit money for the project. But just in case, he stated, that town meeting appropriation could be used as a cushion if the total amount cannot be raised privately.

"I think the feeling in town is that people don't mind their taxes the way they are. But they don't want to raise new taxes to take care of this (Milliken Field). They want the money for it to come from the budget," Sawchuk said.

"I didn't want to resell the entire project to town meeting," he added. "The committees have worked very hard and it didn't make sense to me to make a whole new presentation when town meeting approved the project twice before. I wasn't looking forward to going through the whole process over again with the capital budget committee and the advisory committee.

"Now we'll see how successful this fundraising will be."

Following the override election defeat, Sawchuk met with selectmen and town counsel to seek advice about forming a private fundraising group. They gave him the go-ahead to begin the process, and this week that organization was formed.

The Friends of Milliken Field is now in existence, Sawchuk explained, and donations are being gratefully accepted.

Quality athletic fields are a much-desired commodity in Cohasset, he noted. At least twenty percent of a student's time is spent in recreational pursuits. With the expansion of Milliken and Lillard, those fields will now be used for school and afterschool athletics, youth leagues and recreation league games. The renovations, he explained, will create better fields for all sports, as well, providing a standard-size lacrosse field.

The Milliken Field committee first sought to reduce the price of the original $1 million renovation project.

Much of the engineering work was accomplished for less than $2,500 by the Norfolk County engineers, a resource for which Sawchuk will always be grateful.

In addition, the committee decided to eliminate the all-weather track, a facility that would have cost more than $100,000. As Sawchuk explained, their decision to bypass the track was based on fewer numbers of students participating in the school sport. In fact, track has been eliminated from afterschool sports at the high school.

The town instead will receive three new playing fields where now there is one, on the same level as the high school ground floor, and with access for the handicapped.

What was essential to the new plan was a regulation-size lacrosse field - an oversized facility for the newest high school team.

Sawchuk said the fundraising organization will first seek corporate sponsorships. "That's our number one priority - to get some large donations," he explained.

The organization hopes to proceed through the permitting process almost immediately to obtain needed approval for the drainage and grading. The land for the fields will be cleared by the spring, so that all ground work can be done during the summer.

The fields will be seeded next fall in time for an active 1991 spring sport season, he said.

"We'll be making a progress report to the annual town meeting this spring," Sawchuk said. "So town meeting will be very involved step-by-step.

"If possible, we want to do this all with corporate sponsorships. If not, we will ask voters to give us the final funds necessary to make those fields useable."

That would require a bond to finance the project, something that will probably increase taxes by a maximum of $2 for the first few years of the bond. And once again, an increase in taxes would require an override of Proposition 2 1/2 - something the organization would like to avoid.

Sawchuk would like to see the entire project financed by a perpetual fundraising organization. "This could be an on-going project for the Friends of Milliken Field. In years to come it could provide better lighting, better stands and other amenities at the fields," he suggested.

The Friends of Milliken Field will gratefully accept any donations. Checks may be mailed to the organization at P.O. Box 38, Cohasset.

around town

❑ Laura Regan of Hingham, has arrived at Colby-Sawyer College to begin her freshman year. Regan's major is early childhood education. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Regan of Hingham.

❑ Congratulations go to Donna and Joe Crossen on the birth of their son. Kyle Joseph Crossen was born on October 7 and weighed in at 8 pounds, 6 1/2 ounces.

❑ If you have been wondering where Bobby Durkin has been, we'll tell you! As a part of his Harvard schooling, Bob is in Sidney, Australia, studying for a semester at the University of South Wales. Bob is taking Australian and Japanese Economics and working for First Boston in the Sidney office as an intern in the stock market. He loves it! Bob will return on December 10th, and back to Harvard in February.

❑ Friday, Oct. 6, at the SouthShore Music Circus, a beautiful catered luncheon was served by Mrs. Jean Wichert and Mrs. Fran Chatterton. The recipient was for Mrs. Suzanne Fone. She was celebrating her 39th (and still holding) birthday. The menu, which was prepared by the Aegean Fare, was exquisite and a very interesting 1989 vintage wine was poured by the Mrs. Chatterton and Mrs. Wichert. Mrs. Fran Chatterton was very gracious in helping to deliver this exceptional luncheon. The dessert course was a selection of cupcakes topped with delicate candles to set off the occasion. A good time was had by all, and was one occasion that Suzanne won't forget for a very long time! Isn't it nice to have such great friends!

❑ We are happy to report that Dorothy Bates is home from her recent stay in the hospital, and doing just fine!

❑ The next time you are in a card store, be sure to pick one up for Roso Rosano, who is in South Shore Hospital for a foot operation.

❑ And, one special gal that would really love to hear from you is Rosemary Laugelle (Doc Skinna's bride), who is in South Shore Hospital also. Here's hoping that your stay is a short one, Rosemary, and that you are feeling in the pink real soon!

❑ As most know, Bob Silva is a coach of the Cohasset High Football team, but here is something that we'll bet you didn't know! A few weeks ago, on a Saturday, Bob's brother Don got married. Of course Bob was there, and had to miss the football game as a result! Well, the team had an exciting win that day, and they stopped the bus at Kimballs by the Sea after the game to deliver Bob the game ball! That surely tells you how much they appreciate him and his efforts, doesn't it? Oh, we must congratulate Don and Jennifer on their marriage, too. What a happy day for the Silva family!

❑ Speaking of football, don't forget that this Saturday is the homecoming game! The game begins at 10:30, and there will be a soccer game at 1:30 that same day. They will also be crowning the king and queen of homecoming. It is a packed day, with something for everyone, so don't miss it.

❑ What a nice picture of Jeff O'Neill on the cover of the South Weekly section of the Boston Globe! Of course,with his hockey prowess, we are sure that it will be the first of many! Here's betting that his name will be in the lights for the Olympic Hockey team as well as the Boston College Squad.

❑ Hats off to our town for reinstating the monies needed to continue the Veteran's and Memorial Day observances. Letting our vets know that we appreciate them and their efforts means so-much . . .

❑ Congratulations go to Kerri Anglin and Nicole Greco, who were honored recently for their work as volunteers for State House tour guides. They received citations from the Secretary of State, Michael J. Connolly for their efforts and we salute them too.

❑ Don't forget to set aside any sports equipment you may have for the Cohasset Boosters sports sale, that will take place October 28 at the Deer Hill School from 9a.m.-1 p.m. Any items that are saleable will be gratefully received, or you may consign them. Call Ernie Grassey (383-6857), Lucy Marsac (383-9845) or Eileen Corbett (383-6467) for more information.

❑ Congratulations to Cara McKenney, who won the beautiful Cohasset wreath donated by Lisa Coletti.

❑ Mr. and Mrs. Michael Gill of 342 Grove Street, Marshfield, are parents of a daughter, Kelly Elizabeth, born Sept. 22 at South Shore Hospital.

He is the health education coordinator for the Cohasset schools.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Owen Gill and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lenahan, all of Scituate.

❑ If you don't think that the PSO has spirit, think again. Beginning this week they will be selling Cohasset Banners, be sure to purchase one.

❑ Barbara Kern was honored by the Massachusetts Association of Health Boards at their annual meeting recently. Retiring Executive Director Ms. Kern was presented with proclamations from the State Senate and the House of Representatives and a Governors Citation. She was honored for her dedication to the environment and public health. Ms. Kern will continue to represent the Association while following legislative issues which relate to public issues and environmental health.

❑ Robert L. Shultz, 38 Linden Drive, a senior at Bowdoin College, has been named a senior interviewer in the College's admissions department. Bob majors in economics and is a dean's list student. He is a graduate of Cohasset Junior-Senior High School.

❑ Francis N. Muncey of Cohasset graduated this past summer from Wentworth Institute of Technology. He received a Bachelor of Science degree in Mechanical Engineering Technology.

❑ Michael Stevens of Cohasset is a freshman at Bryant College in Rhode Island. He is majoring in marketing.

Art center fine art auction Nov. 3

The South Shore Art Center in Cohasset will present over 100 selections to bid on during their "ART ETC. AUCTION" Friday, Nov. 3 at 8 p.m.

About half of the items will feature fine art created by South Shore artists. The other half will include a carefully selected array of goods and services.

Among them a private flight for up to four to Nantucket for brunch; baseballs autographed by Dennis Lamp and other Red Sox players; hors d'oeuvres for 20 by the Borrowed Butler; a basket of Christmas breads delivered the day before Christmas; a canoe trip on the North River with a gourmet lunch included; two hours of rides on the Carousel in Hull for 20 children with birthday cake included; two tickets to a Celtics game courtesy of the Quincy Savings Bank; three months of fresh vegetables from the garden of Robert St. Pierre; and a day sailing cruise in Boston Harbor with gourmet lunch included.

There will also be a "Private Movie Party" where the winning bidder may invite up to 75 friends to a preview showing of a soon-to-be-released film at the Harborlight Mall. Wine, hors d'oeuvres, popcorn and soda are included for this unusual and festive evening.

A "Shopping Spree" of over 25 downtown Cohasset specialty shops worth over $600 will include gift certificates, goods and services. Others may bid on a ride from Autohaus in a Ferrari with a model and t-shirt for a child under 14; a half-hull from Carousel Antiques, hors d'oeuvres for 8 by Yvonne Julian; hors d'oeuvres for 6 by Anna Abruzzi; 3 hours of computer training by Jill O'Donnell; a birthday cake by Christine Gilmore; a delightful evening for two with limousine service to Strawberry Faire and tickets to the Nickerson Theater; and a selection from Cohasset Liquors. The diverse original art work offered will include Cohasset artists Susan DeMichele, Ros Farbush, Eleanor Gorman, Patricia McCarthy, and Claffy Williams. Over 40 other south shore artists have also generously contributed their creative talents to support the Art Center.

All items in the auction may be previewed from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center Oct. 28 to Nov. 3. The evening will begin at 8 for previewing with refreshments and a cash bar. Auctioneers Wigmore Pierson of Continental Cable, Bruce Tuthill and Mandy Avery will open the bidding at 9 p.m. Call 383-9548 for ticket reservations.

Art Center offers workshops

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, will offer a group of workshops in November in the Fibers and Fabrics area.

Cherokee Style Storage Basket taught by Dianne Stanton will meet Friday, Nov. 3 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Students will each complete a large and colorful basket made of dyed and natural flat reed with a square "filled" base, patterned sides and a sturdy round rim.

Fabric Painting and Decorating taught by Ann Murphy will meet for two Thursdays, Nov. 9 and 16 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Using simple techniques, students will learn to use fabric painting, stenciling, applique and application of stones, sequins, studs and other trims to transform plain T-shirts, sweatshirts and jerseys into original boutique creations.

Editorial

Please help us out

The Mariner, as our readers know, is a community-oriented newspaper.

As such, we not only welcome but ask that you share your news with us. SallyAnn Chatterton, our Around Town writer, would wither away without people calling or writing to share their news with her.

Her column is for and about the people of Cohasset, and without your help and input, much of the good news that she prints would go unnoticed.

If you have a news release, letter to the editor, or any item you think your neighbors might find of interest, send to the Cohasset Mariner, P.O. Box 71, Cohasset, 01025. We also have drop spots if you would like to save 25 cents - they are at Colonial Pharmacy in Cohasset Village and the Cohasset News Store on Brook Street.

And please, leave your material at the drop spots no later than noon on Tuesdays.

We must compliment our readers on their excellent response to our past requests for local news. There are many weeks when we have more news and tidbits to print than we have space in which to print them.

So, you're probably wondering, where this editorial is going? Well, it's leading to those people who send handwritten rather than typed articles.

We would never think of discouraging any submission from any of our readers, but we have to say, in all honesty, that there are some submittals that are simply impossible to read.

If, for instance, you are sending in wedding notices and listing names of ushers and bridegrooms - some of whom might have odd names - please help us out by printing those names.

We don't ask that your items be typed (although we do prefer it), but to help out our typesetters, who every week type copy for 17 Mariners, please make sure that your submissions can be read. Printing saves us time - we don't have to call you and check on a spelling or whatever - and it ensures that your release can be processed promptly.

And, please, those of you who do publicity for local groups, remember the 5 W's... who, what, when, where and why. Too many people send in releases that invite others in town to attend meetings but give no location for those meetings and give no telephone numbers for those who cannot attend, but want more information.

So, please keep the cards and letters coming. We love to hear from you.

But, please remember that your news goes through our hands, then through typesetters and proofreaders before it gets into the paper. So, please write legibly and include all the information. It's a great help to us.

Thank you.

Bob Martin (r) solicited the help of several Chamber of Commerce members to assist with the packaging of the gifts they sent to the 1989 graduates. (Below) Chamber board members Wayne Sawchuk (l) and Donald Staszko (r) get the packages ready for mailing during a work session held last week at Kimball's By The Sea.

Chamber sends gifts to graduates

Wayne Sawchuk remembers what it was like to leave home for college. What he missed most, he recalls, was his friends and family back home.

"I think the people back home tend to forget about the kids who have just left for college," he says. "The thing is, they are still a part of the community they left behind. They still want to think about their town - they don't want to be forgotten back home."

When the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce was soliciting ideas for new projects, Sawchuk offered an idea that would prove to the new high school graduates that their hometown has indeed not forgotten them.

Chamber members immediately embraced the concept - a 'Care' package sent by the Chamber to every 1989 graduate of Cohasset High School.

It would include a variety of items to remind the students of their hometown, and all the products would be donated by the local business community.

Every graduate, including those who chose employment over college, will receive a package this week.

"It's not something that will be a boon to the local businesspeople of Cohasset," Sawchuk said. "It was just our way of telling these kids that we remember them. It was an opportunity to do something for the town, something we think will be appreciated by all these kids."

The idea formed only a few weeks ago. So the Chamber members, under the direction of program director Bob Martin of Goodale Insurance Co., have been scurrying about, attempting to locate "goodies" to place within the package, as well as the finances to accomplish the task.

Several Chamber members helped with the project, including Paula Knowles, who obtained a list of the graduates and called most of the parents to locate new addresses for the classmates. She was aided by Eileen Corbett and Alice Riley.

The concept of college 'Care' packages is not new, he explains, but they are primarily marketing gimmacks distributed by manufacturers. The Cohasset package, Sawchuk explains, will include items donated by local merchants that will remind the student of his hometown. Each package contains many items, including brochures from the community center and Kimball's By The Sea. There is a key chain, pencils and pens, mouthwash, toothpaste and toothbrush, soap, disposable razors, a map of Cohasset, and a specially-designed canvas book bag which bears the official Town of Cohasset label.

Also included is a year's subscription to their hometown newspaper, The Cohasset Mariner. That was made possible, Sawchuk explains, because of a special deal arranged by the newspaper for the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

A letter is contained in each package, wishing each graduate future success. "We hope the education you received in Cohasset prepared you for this challenge," it states.

If any 1989 graduate has not received his Chamber of Commerce package, their parents are asked to notify Bob Martin at Goodale Insurance Co. on South Main Street, or Wayne Sawchuk at National Abatement Services.

Students say drugs part of after-school life

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Life at Cohasset High isn't like those public service ads on television.

Drug dealers aren't oozing down the hallways or lurking on school grounds trying to push drugs on unwary students. But given enough advance time and plenty of money, students could probably manage to purchase them.

That's the message that a dozen students brought to Cohasset's alcohol and drug abuse committee on October 11, 1989.

The students, who requested anonymity, were unanimous that alcohol was the most common drug used by the youth of Cohasset.

The students echoed the school administration's contention that drugs and alcohol are rarely found on school premises during regular school hours.

"I don't think we'd be stupid enough to do it," said one.

"I don't know anybody who comes to school drunk," added another.

School dances and athletic events are a different matter.

The students agreed that there has been a big increase in the number of students who drink at school events, particularly at the junior high level. However, the numbers are still small.

Use of drugs is restricted to a relatively small group of people.

"I only know of three or four that have used marijuana. That's all I've ever heard of," said one student.

Others were aware of students who had used cocaine or blotter acid.

In a testament to the effectiveness of the health curriculum in the school system, most of the students could give textbook descriptions of individual drugs and their symptoms readily.

Students said that use of alcohol is common on weekends and during the summer. The students described alcohol use among high school students as social.

"Not too many people buy a bottle of vodka, go down to the beach, and slam it down," said one boy. "There's not a lot of peer pressure to drink."

His view was corroborated by another student who said, "You choose. No one forces it on you."

Students get their liquor in the old-fashioned way: they raid their parent's supply, get older friends to purchase it for them, or "just sit in the parking lot of the liquor store for somebody who is old, but looks cool and ask him to get it for you."

Buying it directly was seen as unlikely in Cohasset where the liquor store employees probably know the kids.

The students are generally unfazed by the notion that it's illegal for them to drink.

"It is against the law, but most kids don't even think about it," said one girl.

Heavy drinking isn't cool, at least among this group.

From their description, the kids who drink to excess come off as wall flowers. They're the ones who show up late at parties, sit in a corner by themselves because no one talks to them, and then leave early.

They tout responsible drinking. The role of designated driver is taken very seriously.

"Some will take it to a fist fight," said one of the students. But usually the attitude of the drinker is "You drive. Who cares."

When asked for recommendations, the students were agreed that parents were the first line of prevention. Parents are foolish if they believe that their son or daughter hasn't tried alcohol.

"Tell them to wake up," said one girl. "Most kids do drink."

Parents should be alert to the symptoms of alcohol and drug use. Having clear rules about acceptable and unacceptable behavior was also recommended.

"A lot of kids are more scared of their parents than of the police," said one.

The bottom line is that kids learn what they live with.

"Some parents say 'Never drink. Never drink.' And then they go to the yacht club and booze it up."

David Hayes, head of the Department of Human Services for District Attorney William Delahunt of Norfolk County, summarized society's drug and alcohol problem by saying, "How do you say kids have a problem because they're drinking if all the adults around them are drinking?"

Hayes considers substance abuse a problem of a society that can't make up its mind about what is and isn't acceptable.

"We've changed the drinking age five times in the past ten years," he said. The confusion created by adults can't help but shape the attitudes of children.

"The very word 'recreational use' disturbs me," said Hayes. "It's the same buzz Friday as it is Monday."

Hayes told the committee and the students that substance abuse is a silent epidemic that thrives on the denial practiced by a community.

Hayes was blunt.

Believing that it's o.k. to drink at a party or bar if you have a designated driver creates an aura of acceptability of drunkenness.

"We don't know how to separate responsibility from a problem," he told the committee and the students. "Having to get high at a party is a problem."

In Hayes' mind, there's no difference between the party thrown by kids and the party thrown by their parents.

"The only difference between you and your parents getting drunk is they're over 21," he told the students.

Hayes told the group that no one is immune. As the adult child of an alcoholic, he didn't touch alcohol until he was 27 or 28. His drinking was strictly social.

"All of a sudden, I'm exactly the picture of my Dad. That's how easy it is to slip into a problem."

Hayes received treatment, but knows that his whole life he will have to be careful, have to resist well-meaning friends and family members who believe he can have a couple of drinks without effect.

Cohasset's biggest problems may be an unwillingness to admit it has a problem and the ability to cover up the problems it does have.

"I have a feeling there's a conspiracy of silence," he said. Then he laid out some of the problems that he heard revealed that night.

- Use of drugs and alcohol at the beach.
- Weekend influx of college students and young adults giving youth access to drugs and alcohol.
- Use of alcohol at school functions
- Availability of marijuana and blotter acid.

Hayes told the committee that they needed to reach out and offer assistance to the students and young professionals who were actively using drugs and alcohol. He encouraged them to set up a humane system for dealing with abusers and users.

"People won't reveal their problems if the consequences are unreasonable," he cautioned.

Norfolk County has a diversion program to offer treatment to children and families with drug and alcohol programs.

"Some kids who get busted are trying to reach for help in the only way they think they can get it," said Hayes. "We try to separate the kid who has screwed up from the kid who is screwed up."

Hayes offered the resources of his office to help the committee establish a model program for Cohasset. He strongly urged them to have a small group of volunteers go through an intensive training program in peer counseling that he has established.

"People don't go to professionals when they start to get into trouble," he said. "Peers are the main way of catching them before it's a crisis."

The most important work for the community is to set a standard of behavior and be willing to abide by it.

"Maybe we don't have as big a problem as some communities, but we still have a problem."

"Let's get together and do something" he encouraged the committee.

Senior says thanks for Tuesday hot meals

To the Editor:

Right on! The new lunch program for the elder citizens of Cohasset is meeting much acceptance. The food is delicious, very well prepared and happily served.

Letters

It is my understanding that the school luncheons have been much improved and we had discussion regarding that. With parents working it is important that children are properly nourished and are helped to make decisions that will make a difference in their future health and goals.

In a personal way – my tastes elect for hot foods to be served HOT! and cold foods COLD. This past Tuesday was my first lunch under the new luncheon program and it surely met my requirements. The food was well served also, even the rolls were really hot!

It is my wish that the mothers and fathers know that our thoughts do, especially, go out to the needs of our young people and we do care much about them.

Thanks for this much needed improvement. We ALWAYS appreciated the hard-working volunteers who were in the position of "dishing out" what was sent for that purpose. We compliment them on their "stick-with-it-ness," it was not unnoticed.

And although the price is a bit higher than in other places, the food is superior and very inexpensive and well within our means. Where else can a man and his wife eat lunch for $3.20? Certainly not even at home.

Thank you.

Chamber of Commerce news . . .

The Auction is coming, the auction is coming. Yes, folks, the second annual Cohasset Chamber of Commerce auction is coming to town again on Saturday night, Oct. 21. Join us for our free Franks n' Beans dinner at 6:30 p.m., delicious franks with baked beans and brown bread. Relax as you preview the items for bid from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

The bidding will begin at 7:45; and what great items we have this year to present to you. Looking for a weekend away? A luxurious weekend in Boston or a ski weekend in Montreal might fill the bill. Staying home could prove to be just as exciting if you bid on our Lisa Bemis watercolor, or one of our many home decorator accessories. Christmas is just around the corner, and we have a full compliment of holiday items to bid on; from Christmas china to a Santa cookie jar, we have something to fit every taste and need. Cutlery, glassware, lamps, artwork, childrens' clothes and books . . . the list goes on and on. So join us for the fun on Oct. 21, at the Community Center. The night and the dinner are absolutely free, and everyone is invited. Bring your friends, your neighbors, your in-laws . . fill up a table with people that you enjoy, and sit back and have a good time with us. We look forward to seeing you on October 21. Enjoy a night out with the Chamber of Commerce.

"A little piece of home" packages . . . went out last week. This is one of the projects funded by our annual auction. If your 1989 graduate has not received his or her package yet, please get in touch with us right away. There were some households that we were unable to contact to get the addresses that we needed. So if you know of a grad who has not been contacted . . . let us know where to send their package. We don't want anyone left out. Call the Chamber at 383-1010. And for those who have seen the terrific Cohasset tote bags that were included in the packages . . . the only way to get one is to be a 1989 grad, or bid on one at our Auction on Oct. 21.

What do you do on homecoming night? The kids are all at the dance; the parents are at home . . . watching a movie . . . flipping channels on the TV . . . trying to ignore any sirens heard through the window. Why not call another parent who is home doing the same thing, and join us at the Auction? A great meal, terrific company, door prizes, and biddable items . . . relax and enjoy homecoming for a change. And anyone who brings a pink Stop & Shop receipt will receive an extra door prize ticket . . . free of charge.

New local program director

Deborah Duggan of Scituate has been named local program director for Continental's Cohasset cable system.

As program director in Cohasset, Duggan will produce community programming; supervise and advise programming volunteers who cover local events and create new cable production; and train residents who wish to learn and get involved in television production.

She replaces Robert Belliveau, who recently was named program director for Continental's Scituate cable system.

Duggan received a Bachelor of Arts in Visual Communications from Norwich University in Vermont, where she was involved in directing and producing several short documentaries. Before joining Continental, she worked for Adler Associates, a Boston production company specializing in broadcast-quality video projects.

Stop & Shop update

A special thank you to all of the Osgood parents, teachers, and friends who have sent in their Stop & Shop receipts.

Thanks to Jordan Fiore, Dylan Carruth, Todd Bestick, Kevin Andrews, and Adam Friedman for organizing and calculating the totals. The recepit box is located near the front door. Keep those receipts coming!

Academic Awards night

Cohasset High School's Academic Awards Night is tonight, October 19 at 7:30 p.m. in the High School auditorium.

Those students who have made the honor roll for all four quarters of the 1988-89 school year will be honored and receive a certificate. Students who made high honors for the year will receive a certificate and varsity letter.

The PSO will provide refreshments after the presentation of awards.

Trick or Treat for Apples!

"Trick or Treat — Give us a Stop & Shop receipt."

Why not suggest the children chant this while trick or treating at neighbors homes this Halloween? And be ready to give a Stop & Shop receipt yourself or you might get tricked!

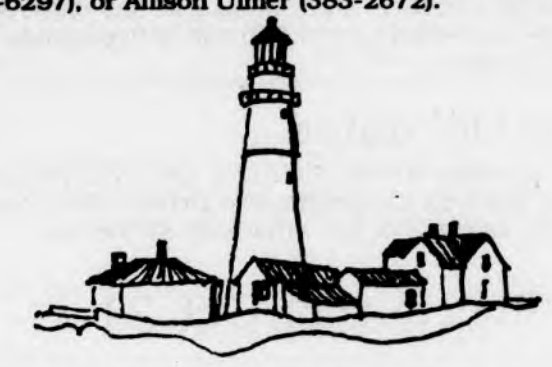
Cohasset High school dance

Sharon Weber's Dance Repertory Workshop, "It's a Small World," will hold its first auditions Wednesday Oct. 25, at 2:45 to 4:45 p.m. in the CHS auditorium.

This workshop is being offered through the Cohasset PSO Curriculum Enrichment Committee and is an opportunity to learn more about all aspects of dance, costuming, set design, etc.

All interested students in Grades 7 through 12 are invited to come and find out more!

PSO Monte Carlo Night



The fourth annual PSO Monte Carlo Night will be held November 4 from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the Cohasset Community Center.

This event is both an enjoyable social evening and a major fundraiser for the Cohasset Parent School Organization.

Once again, recommended attire is "creative black tie," which has traditionally resulted in some creative interpretations of formality. For the less adventurous, the rule of thumb would be to dress as you would for an evening at a nice restaurant.

Although gambling is available, the purpose of the event is to bring together the community for an evening of fun. Chips will be sold for use at black jack, poker, roulette and craps tables, as well as a big 6 wheel. All dealers are volunteer parents from our community. Winnings may be redeemed at the end of the evening, may be donated to the PSO, or can be used in an auction of outstanding items. The auction is a new addition this year and will include items such as getaway overnights at the Boston Harbor Hotel at Rowes Wharf and Guest Quarters Suite Hotels at Boston/Cambridge and Waltham; dinners for two at several area restaurants and much more. All proceeds will be used to benefit the Cohasset Public Schools.

Hors d'oeuvres will be provided by Roebuck's of the British Relief Restaurant in Hingham. There will be a cash bar which will benefit the Community Center. Tickets may be purchased for $15 at the Community Center, from any PSO Board Member or by calling Cheryl Bugley (383-9482), Mary Margaret Senechal (383-6297), or Allison Ulmer (383-2672).

Osgood news notes

Is there a leader among you??? We are looking for some volunteers to be Girl Scout Leaders...some for the Daisies (Kindergarten) and some for the First Grade Brownies. There are many little girls waiting to participate in the Scout Program and we do not have enough leaders. If interested please call Lottie Cook (2714). Lottie will help any interested mom get started with a troop.

Congratulations to our PSO Rep., Linda Keller, for starting a much needed service in our community. Her early morning childcare service provides working parents with a warm and safe environment for their children before school. Interested parents can call Linda at 383-6873.

Cushing anniversary dinner

Cardinal Cushing School and Training Center will honor William F. DiPesa, managing partner of Charles E. DiPesa & Company of Boston, and his wife Mary Jane at the school's 42nd Anniversary Celebration on Oct. 20.

Since 1947, when the school for developmentally delayed youngsters opened its doors to 35 students, there has been a tremendous growth and program development. Today, more than 150 special needs children from six to 22 years old receive academic and vocational training, guidance and encouragement in a stimulating and caring environment. The goal for all Cushing students is to discover and develop their own special talents and abilities in preparation for productive and fulfilling lives within the community.

Together the DiPesas for more than 25 years have provided invaluable support to Cardinal Cushing School. DiPesa serves on the Board of Directors of Cardinal Cushing School, Cushing Residence, and St. Coletta's of MA. Mrs. DiPesa has organized numerous special events at the school, including "Springtime"– the largest fundraising event held annually in May.

Their son, David, attended Cushing School from the mid '60s to the early '70s.

An evening celebration will be held in the Sister Shawn Center of the school located on Route 53 in Hanover. Cocktails will be served at 6:30 p.m. followed by a Cushing Performance and the Award Presentation. The dinner/dance will begin at 8 p.m. Tickets are $100 per couple.

Edison-McGraw scholarships

Eastern Edison Co. has announced plans for the ninth annual Thomas Edison/Max McGraw Scholarship Program.

The program is open to students in grades 7-12 in public, private or parochial schools nationwide. Ten students—five each in grades 7-9 and 10-12—will be designated finalists. Two of the finalists will be selected as Grand Award Scholars, and will receive a $5,000 scholarship each and an all-expenses-paid trip to the final judging. The remaining eight finalists will each receive a $1,000 scholarship.

The Edison/McGraw Scholarship Program is sponsored by the Max McGraw Foundation. It is jointly coordinated by the National Science Supervisors Association and the National Science Teachers Association.

Eastern Edison President Arthur A. Hatch explained: "Max McGraw was an important pioneer in the electric industry of this country. He was a contemporary of Thomas Edison. McGraw's company—the McGraw-Edison Co.—still exists."

There is no formal entry form. Entrants are to submit a proposal on a completed experiment or a projected idea which would have practical application in the fields of science and/or engineering, and a single letter of recommendation from a teacher or sponsor.

Entries are judged on how the project best exemplifies the creativity and ingenuity demonstrated by the lives and work of Thomas Edison and Max McGraw.

Students interested in receiving a complete copy of the entry requirements should contact Ruth Stetson at Eastern EdisonCo.(508-580-1213 or 1-800-242-5810). Entries must be mailed no later than Dec.1, to: Dr. Kenneth R. Roy, NSSA, National Director, LISE, Room 227, Copernicus Hall, Central Connecticut State University, New Britain, CT 06050.

"This scholarship program is open to students in grades 7-12 in public, private or parochial schools throughout the nation," Hatch said. "Its purpose is to encourage outstanding students who are interested in pursuing science or engineering careers and recognize those who demonstrate the creativity and perseverence of Edison and McGraw."

Finalists and Grand Award Scholars receive their awards upon graduation from high school.

Eastern Edison Co. provides electric service to more than 170,000 customers in the Brockton and Fall River areas. It is one of two retail electric utilities of Eastern Utilities Associates (EUA), an investor-owned holding company.

Drama workshops

The Cohasset recreation department and the Cohasset Drama Club will hold children's acting workshops for those in grades one through 12 Saturday mornings at the Cohasset Town Hall.

John Macero, a theater graduate from Boston University with 15 years of acting and directing experience, will led the workshops. He is also a drama teacher at Everett High School and member of the Saugus School Committee.

The workshops will start in November and end with a performance in April. The cost is $20 per month with a one-time $5 registration fee.

Call Cohasset recreation, 383-6791 for information.

Former coach receives winning homecoming

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

It was a special homecoming for Norwell High School football coach Jim Sullivan at Cohasset's Milliken Field last Saturday.

The rookie coach returned to his old stopping grounds for the first time since 1987. Prior to that, he had spent five years as an assistant for current Skipper mentor Phil Pisano.

Holding back personal ties to the other of the field, the Norwell players rewarded Sullivan by taking advantage of excellent field position, as well as some costly penalties by Cohasset on the way to their 27-0 victory over the Skippers.

"It was a very emotional game for me," said Sullivan. "I have known Phil for 11 years. Before I joined his staff here, we were assistant coaches at Scituate for six years.

After a scoreless opening period, the Clippers (3-2 overall, 3-0 in the South Shore League Small Schools Division) put together an impressive, 13-play, 49-yard drive following a short Cohasset punt. A three-yard burst by fullback Steve Mohr (16 carries, 109 yards) provided the six points and Tony McLaughlin added the first of three kicking points. The key plays that set up the touchdown were the running of Mohr (six carries, 40 yards) and the questionable pass interference call on fourth down-and-14.

Norwell's noseguard PatrickO'Neillthen pounced on a Cohasset fumble at the 21. Two plays later, Mohr scored his second TD (his third of the season), this time from six yards out.

The lead increased to 21-0 just before halftime when halfback Eric Menconi (nine carries, 61 yards) scored on a five-yard run.

"You simply can't make mistakes against a team like Norwell because they have the talent to make you pay," said Pisano.

Cohasset (1-4, 1-3 SSL) refused to quit, however, as an inspired defense led by Joel Whitman, Sean McCarthy, Sean Bishop (fumble recovery), Curt Ludlow and Pat Conroy held the Clippers (304 team rushing yards) in check until midway through the final stanza. Reserve halfback Paul Hillman closed out the scoring for Norwell with a 16-yard jaunt.

From there, Cohasset (101 total offensive yards) tried to avoid the shutout on their next possession. A 19-yard completion to split end Mike Dockray from lefty quarterback John Bowen, who was starting his second consecutive varsity game,and a roughing-the-passer penalty on the same play put the ball inside Norwell territory (the 37-yard line). In fact, it marked the first time in the contest that Cohasset had crossed midfield. The drive stalled when Bowen was tackled short of the first-down marker on the fourth-and-three keeper. Norwell took over and utilized their ball-control offense to run out the clock.

Ludlow (12 carries, 61 yards) was Cohasset's leading rusher of the afternoon, while Conroy followed with seven carries for 30 yards.

It is homecoming day at Cohasset this Saturday when the Skippers face Bourne in a non-league battle. The game will start at 10:30 a.m., instead of the usual time of 1:30 p.m.

Girls' soccer coach Kennan Startzell and his players watch the action from the sidelines during a recent varsity victory.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. Debra M.Tranberg
Chiropractor

IN STEP WITH HEALTH

One down-to-earth application of the knowledge gained by earth-orbiting astronauts relates to exercise and its affect on bones. NASA officials noticed during the 1970's Skylab project that the astronauts experienced losses in bone mass. Circling the Earth for up to eighty-four days without gravity, the astronauts began to suffer from osteoporosis. The reason for the bone loss, experienced by Russian cosmonauts as well, was linked with a lack of high-stress exercise. Research on exercising and non-exercising subjects on Earth has confirmed this fact. Exercise is a most effective method for preventing bone deterioration. Chiropractic has long encouraged patients to exercise their way to wellness. Studies such as the one mentioned here underscore the benefits of a good diet, exercise, and an unimpeded flow of nerve energy.

You can feel "out of this word" and in great shape when your body is functioning at its optimum. Chiropractic applications provides for the natural flow of energy and instructions from the brain to every organ and extremity of the body. Thus a state of total well-being can exist. For more information on the benefits of chiropractic, call SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC today. Located at 80 Front St., Scituate Harbor. Tel. 545-7366. By appt. Early morning and late evening appts. Workers Comp cases, VISA, M/C and most insurance plans accepted.

HINT: The use-it-or-loose-it approach to bones applies to muscles as well.

Candidate's corner...

Hussey attends meetings

State Senate Candidate Don Hussey attended last week's Cohasset special town meeting which dealt with budgetary items because of lower-than-expected state aid.

Hussey, a candidate for State Senate also attended last week's Norfolk County Republican Club meeting to discuss the MWRA's plans to locate a sludge landfill facility in Walpole.

And finally, candidate Hussey was guest of honor at the home of Karen and Daniel Noonan in Scituate. Approximately 45 guests attended the event to discuss State issues with Hussey.

Hedlund names chairman

State Senate candidate Bob Hedlund of Weymouth named Attorney J. Alan MacKay of Hingham as his campaign chairman.

MacKay, a former candidate for U.S. Congress, has been an active Republican for many years on the South Shore. He was a Reagan delegate to the 1976 Republican National Convention and served as parliamentarian to the State GOP Convention in 1978. MacKay is a practicing attorney in Boston.

Hedlund is seeking the Republican nomination for the Norfolk-Plymouth State Senate District which includes Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth.

For additional information on the Hedlund Committee, call 773-4848 or 740-4920.

McDonald proposal made

Brian J. McDonald of Weymouth, Democratic candidate for the Norfolk and Plymouth state Senate seat, proposed that state legislators be limited to serving no more than five consecutive terms in either branch.

State legislators serve two-year terms. McDonald's five-term limitation would prevent legislators from serving more than a total of 10 years in the House of Representatives or in the Senate.

Pumpkin carving at science center

The South Shore Natural Science Center is planning two special programs for children to celebrate Halloween: the Third Annual Pumpkin Carve and Animal Costume Making.

Families are invited to the Third Annual Pumpkin Carve, Wednesday, Oct. 25, Thursday, Oct. 26, 3:30 to 5 p.m. You bring the pumpkin; we'll provide lots of decorative items, tools, candles, and anything else you might need to make your own special Jack-O-Lantern.The cost to Science Center members is $6 per child and $9 per child for non-members. All children must be accompanied by an adult. Refreshments served.

Reserve Saturday, Oct. 28, 9:30 to 11:30 a.m., for children 8 years and up, for an Animal Costume Making program. Children will study some animals to get a closer look at their special features, and then create costumes to look like their favorite. Later, they will take a walk outdoors to search for the creatures and their homes. All materials are supplied. A Halloween treat will be served. Cost: $7 for Science Center members; $10 for non-members.

AARP meeting Oct. 26

The regular meeting of the South Shore Hingham Chapter #1139 AARP will meet Thursday, Oct. 26 at the Sons of Italy Hall, Rte. 3A in Hingham at 1:30 p.m.

The speaker will be State Senator William Golden.

Mormon open house

The doors will be opened Saturday, Oct. 21 at 7 p.m. as The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (the Mormons) at 379 Gardner Street in South Hingham play host to residents of the South Shore.

Come, "meet the Mormons", tour the meetinghouse facility, and learn why this church is different.

The chapel is located on Gardner Street in Hingham just off Rts. 228 and 53.

This open house is being planned by Susan Edmunds of Duxbury and John Alico, ward mission leader. Admission is free.

Science center nursery class

Nature Nursery classes for tots through kindergarten-aged children will begin at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell during the week of Oct. 30.

Designed to develop the children's understanding and respect for the natural world, the six-week Nature Nursery classes involve sensory awareness experiences, outdoor excursions, and creative activities such as crafts, drama, games, and stories.

Parents & Tots, which begins either Wednesday, Nov. 1, 10 to 11:15 a.m., or Friday, Nov. 3 from 10 to 11:15 a.m., is designed so that parents may rediscover the natural world by sharing time in the outdoors with their preschoolers. Class dates are Wednesdays, Nov. 1, 8, 15, 29; Dec. 6, 13, or Fridays, Nov. 3, 10, 17, Dec. 1, 8, 15.

Threes, a six-week program for three-year-olds, begins Tuesday, Oct. 31, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. The children's natural curiosity of their surroundings will be enhanced as they take short hikes through the autumn woods and to the pond and take part in sensory awareness activities. A snack is provided. Children must have turned three by Aug. 31, 1989.

Class dates are Tuesdays, Oct. 31, Nov. 7, 14, 21, 28, Dec. 5.

Fours & Fives, which begins Thursday, Nov. 2, 9:30 to 11:30 a.m., stimulates the children's learning curiosity and confidence. In addition to walks and activities, naturalist Barbara Devine will tell nature stories and encourage the children to borrow a book from the nature library each week. A snack is provided. Children must have turned 4 by Aug. 31.

Class dates are Thursdays, Nov. 2, 9, 16, 30, Dec. 7, 14.

Kindergarten, which begins Monday, Nov. 27, from 9 to 11 a.m. teaches children about the basic needs of animals and how they adapt to survive their special habitats. They will explore woodlands, fields, swamps, and ponds. Children must be 5 by Jan. 1, 1990 or be in kindergarten. Class dates are Mondays, Nov. 27, Dec. 4, 11, 18, Jan. 8, 15.

Auction party to be held

The annual Co-op 6 Auction Party will be held Saturday, Oct. 21, at the Old Ship Parish House, 107 Main Street in Hingham Square.

Several prospective Democratic candidates will serve as auctioneers.

Co-op 6 is a cooperative group of the Democratic Town Committees of 6 South Shore towns: Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth.

Doors will open at 6 p.m., with the auction beginning at 6:30 p.m. Admission is $5 per person and may be paid at the door. Advance ticket sales are being made in each of the towns by members of the Democratic Town Committees.

In Hingham, tickets and information are available from Mary Sofis at 749-3830.

Antique show and sale

The 13th antique show and sale will be held Saturday, Nov. 4, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Deer Hill School, 206 Sohier Street (off Route 3A) just before the Music Circus in Cohasset.

Admission to the show with a card or ad for one or two persons is $1.50. Regular admission is $2. Admission cards are available from dealers and members of the Beechwood Congregational Church.

Antiques such as glass, silver, jewelry, primitives and other collectibles will be on display and for sale. A public snack bar will be held in the school cafeteria with sandwiches, hot dogs, homemade squares, coffee, tea and cold drinks. Homemade baked goods will be on sale at the ticket area.

Silk painting art class

Silk Painting taught by Joan Hausreth will meet for two days, Tuesday and Thursday Nov. 14 and 16 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Learn to paint shimmery washes and pattern effects on silk in this hands-on workshop. Papermaking taught by Brenton Welsh will meet Saturday, Nov. 18 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

These workshops preceed and complement the upcoming Contextures II Exhibition from Nov. 17 through Dec. 22 which will feature art to wear and will focus on new directions in fiber.

Registration is required for all courses and workshops. For more information or for a complete list of all workshops and courses, call the South Shore Art Center weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 383-9548.

Halloween story hour

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library invites grade-school-age children and their parents to a Halloween Family Story Hour on Monday, Oct. 30, at 7:30 p.m.

Karen Wesoloski of Brockton will be the guest storyteller.

The program will include a Swedish ghost-story, "Skinny Jack", described as a "grandmother's tale that rises again", and, from a time before jack-o-lanterns, the "Tale of the Pumpkin Giant".

Because of the nature of the stories, it is advisable that children younger than first grade not attend. Parents are invited and urged to accompany their children to the story hour.

The program is free; however, because of limited space, no one will be admitted without a ticket. Tickets must be picked up at the library, from Thursday, Oct. 26 to Monday, Oct. 30. There is a limit of 50 tickets. The program will last about an hour.

Spinners Guild to meet

The South Shore Spinners Guild will meet Thursday, November 2, from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Second Parish Church, 685 Main Street (Rte. 228) in Hingham for a Spin-In.

Non-members are welcome to bring wheels for analysis, or call 545-1076 for information.

Art center seeks contributions

The South Shore Art Center recently conducted a three-day telethon at the Hingham Institution for Savings in order to match a recently contributed $25,000 gift toward eliminating the construction mortgage.

Twenty-five volunteers reached over 400 members and friends of the art center to inform them of the generous matching gift and to update them on the growth and new programs at the SSAC.

The gift must be matched by the end of the year and all contributions are welcomed. Donors of over $1,000 will be recognized at a Patron dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Williams of Cohasset, Oct. 19 with featured speaker, Diane Korzniak, from the Massachusetts College of Art.

With state and local funding for the arts at an all-time low, financial support is vital. For information on how you may help, call 383-9548.

Flower painting workshop

The Scituate Arts Association is offering a two-day workshop on flower painting with watercolor by Phyllis Howard Nov. 11 and 12.

Classes will be held at the Old Ellis House Art Center, 709 Country Way, from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The fee is $40 for SAA members and $50 for non-members. For further information or to register, call Nancy Coveney at 545-0449 or the gallery at 545-6150.

Howard is known for her expressive interpretation of flowers with emphasis on color and composition.

A demonstration and critique will be given during this session as well as individual assistance in problem-solving.

Intermediate and experienced painters are invited to attend and bring their own materials and lunch.

Howard holds a bachelor of fine arts degree from Massachusetts College of Art and has exhibited in every major juried show on the South Shore.

She is also noted for her landscapes and bird paintings and designs Christmas cards and note paper for the National Wildlife Federation.

Her original paintings are on display at the Scituate Arts Association Gallery, 131 Front St., and are for sale.

Beechwood Church services

Sunday worship and school at the Beechwood Congregational Church will begin at 10 a.m.

Our prayers and love go out to our pastor and his wife, the Rev. Stephen S.J. Hall and Marge, who are recovering from a serious automobile accident in England.

The visiting pastor for October 22 will be Wally Cedarleaf.

The church Congregational Club will meet at 6:30 p.m. for a pot-luck dinner Thursday, Oct. 19. All are welcome.

Kerygma Bible study meets every Tuesday at the church starting at 7 p.m. Theme four will be discussed "God's People have Leaders." All are welcome.

St. Mary's parish programs

St. Mary of the Assumption Sodality's first Mass of the season will be at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 19 at St. Ann's. First speaker in this seven-week program will be Dr. Michael O'Loughlin, who will speak on the Bible as a source of prayer. The program will be led by the Rev. Kevin Crowley the remaining six Monday nights at 7:30 p.m.

Respect-for-life prayer meetings are held at 6:30 p.m. Mondays at St. Ann's. Following the Oct. 30 prayer service there will be a Respect Life Committee meeting and informational session in the church's community house behind St. Ann's.

Brothers receive awards

Todd and Matthew Woodbury, sons of Beau and Kathy Woodbury, received two of Scoutings highest awards Friday night.

The Woodbury family, until recently of Whitney Woods Lane in Cohasset, returned from Connecticut for the Court of Honor of Troop 110 held at the "LDS" Church in Hingham.

Matthew, 14, received the Eagle Scout Award. He completed all of the requirements to begin work on his Eagle project by December 1988. Early in January he was reading articles on the topic of Lyme Disease. He decided then to make his project one that would be a learning experience for young school children, one that would inform the children of this serious disease now reaching epidemic proportions in Massachusetts, and a project that would promote the Scouting image to those still in Cubbing.

Matthew was able to instruct 308 students and teachers at the Foster Elementary School in Hingham, completing his Eagle Scout project by early May before the family left for New Canaan, Conn.

For Todd, 17, a Medal of Merit was presented to him, an award from the National Boy Scouts of America. Todd saved his father's life about a year and a-half ago. His dad, an attorney in Boston, had just returned home one night and was hurriedly eating a piece of meat when the food became lodged in his throat, and he was unable to breathe. Todd rushed in from the garage and performed the Heimlick Maneuver on his dad.

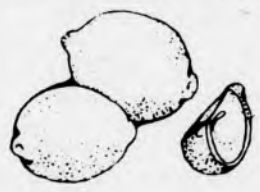
Todd earned his Eagle Award two years earlier by instructing school children in New Jersey in this method to relieve choking victims.

Plans begin for Village Fair

The Village fair will stage its 49th edition around the town's historic common Staurday, Dec. 2, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

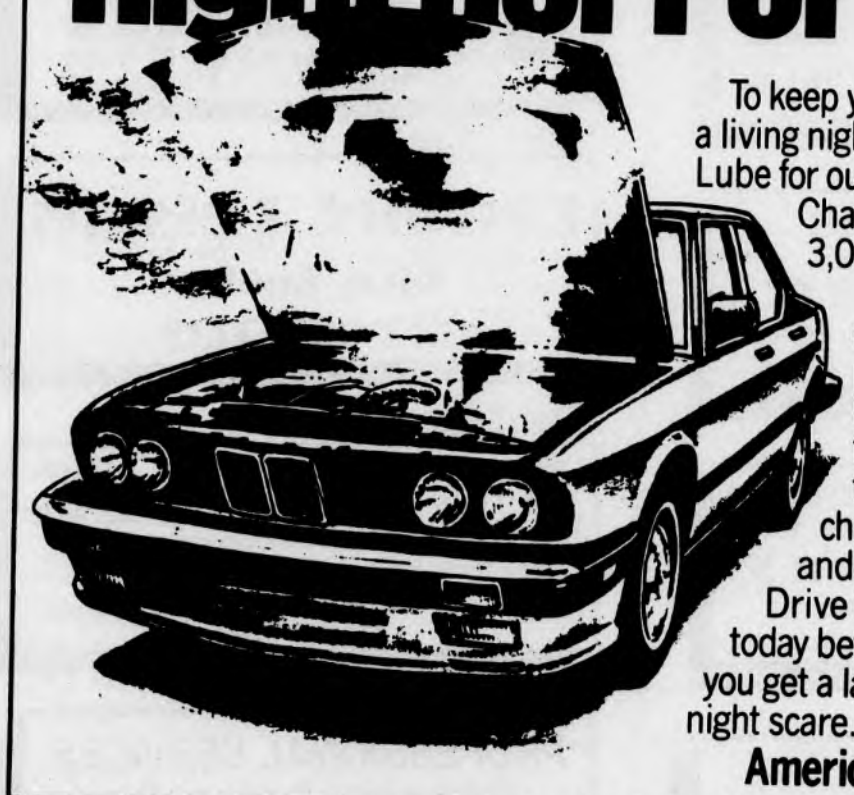
Many committees are at work crafting the items and lining up donations that will attract hundreds to the town on Village Fair day.

Under the system of rotating leadership, Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, is the host church this year. Cindy Dedes is chairperson, with the help of a central committee of other church representatives. The other churches that will work for and benefit from the Fair are Second Congregational, St. Anthony's Roman Catholic, and St. Stephen's Episcopal.



Work groups of parishoners in the four participating churches will now be stepping up their schedules and recruiting other workers to join them in the final flurry of activity as the date approaches.

Church representatives on the Central Committee are Debbie Anderson and Sue Cameron from Second Congregational; Nancy Brock Swatek and Sheila Wallingford from St. Stephen's; Lou Simeone and Kathy Brennock from St. Anthony's' and Eugenia Syrmopoulos and Eva Sedell from the host Panagia church. Joining the Central Committee are Linda Argos, Secretary, and Jim Hooper, Treasurer.



This 49th edition of the historic Fair will include virtually all the successful features of the past, with principal attention on Christmas gifts and decorations. A major focal point will be the Boutique in the Town Hall, matched by the sale of wreaths which are often sold out early in the day despite the production of hundreds of these by an energetic committee.

Other attractions during the day will include the popular Secret Room where children can shop in private for gifts, Santa Claus with a "photo opportunity," baked goods, food, Greek pastries, special cheeses, books, dolls, balloons and grabs. Already raffle tickets are on sale by church representatives for an assortment of donated items, services and gift certificates at local restaurants and stores.

Traditional wind-up of the day will be the Village Fair dinner to be held in Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Church at 7 p.m. It is being arranged by Mike Vallas.

Information to be distributed on station repairs . . .

The problem is, according to Moore, the work on the police and fire station still needs to be done.

When asked what repairs are most critical to the Elm Street building, Moore and member Gerald could not compile a finite list of items. The boiler will not make it through the winter, committee member Bill Higgins told them. The building remains unaccessible for the handicapped and still does not have separate facilities for women, both of which are required by state law.

"We tried to piecemeal this project, but that is very difficult," Moore told selectmen. A $700,000 project will cause a $44 increase on the tax bill of residents the first year, with a lesser effect in subsequent years. By eliminating $100,000 to $200,000, that tax rate will only be reduced by a few dollars, she said. "So it's almost illogical to chop this up into piecemeal," she said, noting that for every year the town waits, the renovations will increase in cost.

Currently, Moore said, the town is in violation of state law because there are not separate but equal facilities for female employees in the police and fire departments.

"This violates codes and the law and common courtesy that entitles women to the same facilities as men. Women are not lesser citizens but that is the message this town is sending. I'm not trying to be inflammatory, but at this point I feel very strongly about this." The Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination has found cause to file a complaint against the town for failure to provide a female police officer with separate toilet facilities at the station.

Moore questioned how the project could be financed when voters have previously defeated a proposal to increase their taxes for that purpose.

"We must make it very clear to our friends and neighbors that the issue is the building, not the people within that building. Keep personalities out of this issue," she said, noting that even if the town decides to regionalize its safety departments in the future, the present building would be inadequate for that purpose.

"I think the chances of our regionalizing with other fire departments are very remote. We have little to give. We'd have a tough row to hoe to offer Hingham and Hull what we have in our little dinky fire department," Pratt countered.

The committee study, Moore explained, did not take into account any increases in either department. If there is an influx of crime or drugs in the community and the residents require additional police officers, the space to house them was never taken into consideration, she said.

Moore suggested there could be ways in which the project could be completed for less money, but those alternatives have never been seriously studied. They include, she said, piecemealing the project so that individual items will total less than the state law which requires public bidding and prevailing wages for union laborers.

Town counsel Richard Henderson quickly explained that a single major project cannot be divided into smaller projects to avoid the public bidding process.

"I'm ready to wave the white flag," Gerald told selectmen. "It's getting frustrating."

Selectmen encouraged the committee to continue its educational efforts. They noted that among the capital budget items prioritized for the next five years, the police and fire station now ranks first.

Cohasset Mariner

Vol. XII, No. 5 | Thursday, October 26, 1989 | 60 cents

Local ministry is celebrated

For 20 years, Rev. Edward Atkinson has been minister of the Unitarian Universalist congregation. A long tenure, he agrees, but it is merely the continuation of a local tradition.

"This parish has really been outstanding," he notes. "There have only been 15 ministers since 1721, so the average stay for a minister has been 15 years- and two of those ministers were here only a year."

Rev. Edward Atkinson of First Parish

This past weekend, the First Parish congregation celebrated Rev. Atkinson's ministry with a special worship service and reception. Rev. Atkinson arrived in Cohasset in April, 1969 and was installed as its minister on October 19 of that year.

Last Sunday was a dual celebration for the church and its religious leader as Rev. Atkinson also celebrated 25 years in the ministry. He was ordained in June, 1964.

Rev. Atkinson was ordained in the Arlington Street Church in Boston. Dr. Jack Mendelsohn was minister of the church at that time, and participated in Rev. Atkinson's anniversary celebration last weekend.

Following his ordination, Rev. Atkinson was called to a Unitarian church in Stowe. Five years later he was called by the congregation in Cohasset, and was installed as their minister in April of 1969.

"This is a rather long tenure. but I"m not even near the record set by the late Dr. Joseph Osgood," he recalls. The former First Parish minister served the congregation for 56 years. During that time, he also distinguished himself

Advisors prepare for future budgets

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

If the advisory committee has any say in the matter, the town's financial matters will be handled a little differently this year.

It is a consensus of the committee that if an override is necessary next year, the election will take place prior to the 1990 annual town meeting.

In addition, town department heads will now be asked to submit two separate annual budgets to the committee - one zero-based budget which includes employee salary increases, and a supplementary budget which includes a prioritized "wish list" of items.

"The whole thing that is going on here is that we're trying to come to grips with what people want their government to do," said advisory committee member Ray Kasperowicz, noting that negotiated salary increases will probably force the town to seek an override again next year. "It may come to pass that some town departments no longer exist."

Tuesday night, the committee was briefed on the projected financial status of the town by its chairman, Jane Goedecke.

After meeting last week with town department heads, Goedecke explained that the town will have about $325,000 more to spend next year. But town

State overturns local decision to block plaza liquor store

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission overturned selectmen's decision to block a liquor license transfer to Cohasset Plaza, calling their action "arbitrary and capricious."

With this ruling, the town may see two new package stores along a mile stretch of the state highway.

Peter Logan, owner of Cohasset Liquors, has asked selectmen to approve the transfer of his license to Curtis Liquors Inc. That corporation is planning to construct a 13,000 square foot liquor store at Tedeschi Plaza, site of the former Stop and Shop store. A hearing on that request is scheduled before selectmen on October 30.

Developer Donald Staszko, owner of the Rte. 3A plaza, last month requested that selectmen transfer the liquor license from Cohasset Central Market to a 2,500 square foot liquor store under construction at Cohasset Plaza. Selectmen denied the request, saying the town already has a sufficient number of package store licenses.

Last February, selectmen revoked the Central Market liquor license because the store had been shutdown for nine months. Just prior to that decision, Staszko offered to purchase the business and license from owner James Finuacane, but the board voted to revoke the license. Finucane appealed the decision and the ABCC ruled that selectmen should give the store owner more time to sell his business.

Staszko then attempted to lease the Central Market building from Cohasset Savings Bank, but that was not successful. He later applied for a transfer of the liquor license to the plaza currently under construction on Rte. 3A.

In the ABCC's October 17 ruling, the state noted that the Rte. 3A plaza was an appropriate site for a liquor store. "The location is business zoned and

Committee talks about addiction among aged

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

No one is ever too old to develop a drug or alcohol problem.

The Cohasset drug and alcohol committee was told Tuesday night that many senior citizens are struggling with addictions.

For some, the addiction is long-standing. Others develop the problem in reaction to the crises of old age-- ill health, loss of a loved one, financial difficulties. Some avoid alcohol and illegal drugs only to get hooked on medications prescribed by their doctors. Regardless of how and when the problem starts, it is compounded by loneliness and isolation, according to William Spinks, executive director of the South Shore Council on Alcoholism.

He told the Cohasset drug and alcohol committee the elderly are an extra difficult population to reach. Too many of the health professionals who deal with the elderly have little training in identify-

Information to be distributed on station repairs . . .

The problem is, according to Moore, the work on the police and fire station still needs to be done.

When asked what repairs are most critical to the Elm Street building, Moore and member Gerald could not compile a finite list of items. The boiler will not make it through the winter, committee member Bill Higgins told them. The building remains unaccessible for the handicapped and still does not have separate facilities for women, both of which are required by state law.

"We tried to piecemeal this project, but that is very difficult," Moore told selectmen. A $700,000 project will cause a $44 increase on the tax bill of residents the first year, with a lesser effect in subsequent years. By eliminating $100,000 to $200,000, that tax rate will only be reduced by a few dollars, she said. "So it's almost illogical to chop this up into piecemeal," she said, noting that for every year the town waits, the renovations will increase in cost.

Currently, Moore said, the town is in violation of state law because there are not separate but equal facilities for female employees in the police and fire departments.

"This violates codes and the law and common courtesy that entitles women to the same facilities as men. Women are not lesser citizens but that is the message this town is sending. I'm not trying to be inflammatory, but at this point I feel very strongly about this." The Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination has found cause to file a complaint against the town for failure to provide a female police officer with separate toilet facilities at the station.

Moore questioned how the project could be financed when voters have previously defeated a proposal to increase their taxes for that purpose.

"We must make it very clear to our friends and neighbors that the issue is the building, not the people within that building. Keep personalities out of this issue," she said, noting that even if the town decides to regionalize its safety departments in the future, the present building would be inadequate for that purpose.

"I think the chances of our regionalizing with other fire departments are very remote. We have little to give. We'd have a tough row to hoe to offer Hingham and Hull what we have in our little dinky fire department," Pratt countered.

The committee study, Moore explained, did not take into account any increases in either department. If there is an influx of crime or drugs in the community and the residents require additional police officers, the space to house them was never taken into consideration, she said.

Moore suggested there could be ways in which the project could be completed for less money, but those alternatives have never been seriously studied. They include, she said, piecemealing the project so that individual items will total less than the state law which requires public bidding and prevailing wages for union laborers.

Town counsel Richard Henderson quickly explained that a single major project cannot be divided into smaller projects to avoid the public bidding process.

"I'm ready to wave the white flag," Gerald told selectmen. "It's getting frustrating."

Selectmen encouraged the committee to continue its educational efforts. They noted that among the capital budget items prioritized for the next five years, the police and fire station now ranks first.

Local ministry is celebrated

For 20 years, Rev. Edward Atkinson has been minister of the Unitarian Universalist congregation. A long tenure, he agrees, but it is merely the continuation of a local tradition.

"This parish has really been outstanding," he notes. "There have only been 15 ministers since 1721, so the average stay for a minister has been 15 years- and two of those ministers were here only a year."

Rev. Edward Atkinson of First Parish

This past weekend, the First Parish congregation celebrated Rev. Atkinson's ministry with a special worship service and reception. Rev. Atkinson arrived in Cohasset in April, 1969 and was installed as its minister on October 19 of that year.

Last Sunday was a dual celebration for the church and its religious leader as Rev. Atkinson also celebrated 25 years in the ministry. He was ordained in June, 1964.

Rev. Atkinson was ordained in the Arlington Street Church in Boston. Dr. Jack Mendelsohn was minister of the church at that time, and participated in Rev. Atkinson's anniversary celebration last weekend.

Following his ordination, Rev. Atkinson was called to a Unitarian church in Stowe. Five years later he was called by the congregation in Cohasset, and was installed as their minister in April of 1969.

"This is a rather long tenure. but I"m not even near the record set by the late Dr. Joseph Osgood," he recalls. The former First Parish minister served the congregation for 56 years. During that time, he also distinguished himself

Cohasset's week

Flu shot clinic Oct 28

The Cohasset Board of Health and the Social Service League of Cohasset will hold their second influenza vaccination clinic, on Saturday, Oct. 28, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall for Cohasset residents.

The flu vaccine is trivalent and will protect against three different strains of flu.

Campaign promises

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt will be running for re-election.

"Let's set the record straight. As of this date, Oct. 23, my intention is to run for re-election in the spring," he said Monday night. Pratt wanted to publicly state his intentions before the start of the campaign to offset the "rumor mill."

In a cable television interview following the October 10 town meeting, Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she would be running for re-election this spring.

Approval for dramatic club

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will be allowed to hold childrens' acting workshops every Saturday at the Bates Building on Elm Street.

Selectmen gave permission to the organization to use the town-owned building for $25 per day. The club originally asked to use the town hall auditorium, but because of a malfunction with the heating system, the expense of heating the auditorium would be exorbident. According to Greg Doyon, executive secretary, the auditorium cannot be heated without heating the entire town hall building. It would be too expensive for the town to absorb the heating cost, and for the organization to pay.

He suggested that if the auditorium is rented, organizations should pay $50 per weekday and $100 per day on weekends. Selectmen agreed that price was too high.

They suggested the club use the second floor of the vacant Bates Building. Selectmen will ask club representatives if the $25 per day rate is acceptable.

The club uses the town hall auditorium for rehearsals and their fall and spring productions. They have already supplied $750 in plumbing repairs in exchange for the use of the hall, which selectmen agreed was sufficient payment for the year.

They waived any fee for the club's use of the auditorium, but asked their representatives to notify them of any changes in their production schedule.

Liquor license okayed

The Cohasset Community Center was granted a one-day liquor license by selectmen for a private Christening that will be held there next month.

"We're getting practically one (liquor license) request per week," Selectman Burt Pratt noted, although selectmen Ned Tebbetts and Diana Kornet said they would be "happy" to support the center's fundraising efforts to reduce its mortgage.

Center director Judy Volungis explained that an attorney for the center applied to the state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission for a permanent license to sell liquor, but they were told the non profit organization is not eligible for anything other than one-day licenses.

Selectman Pratt said he would once again vote against the license request, because he is concerned about the liability of the center selling alcoholic drinks and taking the profit from the sale.

Support for outreach worker

Selectmen will support a request from the Council on Aging to fund a parttime outreach worker in next year's operating budget.

Senior center director Kathy Bryanton explained Monday night that the state discretionary grant which funds a major portion of that position will be eliminated after June 30. The council can contribute $2,488, but they asked whether the town would willing to finance the remaining portion of $3,667 in next fiscal year's budget.

Bryanton explained that since outreach worker Sue Connolly started at the center, she has assisted 390 seniors. She recently started a senior-to-senior program at the high school where senior year students are matched with senior citizens. "We are very concerned about losing this position," Bryanton said, noting that the position is fully funded until the start of the next fiscal year which begins July 1, 1990.

"For that amount of money, I don't know what we can possibly do. I can't see how we cannot support this," Selectman Rocco Laugelle said.

Selectman Diana Kornet agreed. "It is very important not to cutback for our growing number of seniors."

Selectmen voted unanimously to support a budget item of $3,667 for the Council on Aging fiscal '91 annual budget.

Center fire fund started

A special fund has been set up at the Rockland Trust Company to help the South Shore Natural Science Center recoup some of its losses from the Wednesday fire.

Administrator Faith Burbank said that while the Center does have insurance, not all the losses will be covered.

"They could run as high as $75,000," she said.

"Or better," Richard McMullan, chairman of the Board of Trustees added.

Those wishing to donate to the fund may send checks to: South Shore Natural Science Center Fire Fund, PO Box 57, Rockland Trust Company, Accord, Ma., 02018.

Science Center officials have also asked that all those who signed up for programs through November call the Center at 659-2559 to reconfirm because some records were lost to the flames.

Cohasset's week

Street light plan postponed

The proposal to shut off 49 street lights throughout town has been postponed.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon received information from Eastern Edison Co. which said the town would be assessed an unspecified amount for each disconnected light. Doyon explained that when Eastern Edison installed a new sodium vapor brand, the cost was to be amoritized over several years. That extra installation charge is currently part of Eastern Edison's rate structure to its consumers. If the lights are disconnected, the town would be charged the remaining cost of that conversion, Doyon said, although Eastern Edison has not specified an amount.

Doyon originally figured that disconnecting 49 street lights would save the town $4,500 each year. But without the conversion charge information, Doyon was unsure if the plan would save the town any money.

"This places our cuts in jeopardy," he said.

Selectmen decided to postpone any street light disconnections until they receive more information from the electric company.

Selectmen said they have each received numerous calls from residents who said they would be willing to privately pay the cost of the street lights which were to be disconnected.

Committees have openings

There are currently vacancies on a number of town boards and committees.

There are two vacancies on two separate Cohasset subcommittees of the South Shore Coalition. Anyone who would like to serve on either the housing or the water resources subcommittee should contact the selectmen's office.

There is also a vacancy on the town's cable television advisory council and the personnel board. John Brady, a member of the personnel board, submitted his resignation to selectmen this week. Anyone who would like to serve on either of these committees should contact the selectmen's office at town hall.

Variety of topics on cable

Noel A. Ripley, Chairman of the Cohasset Historical Commission and James W. Lagrotteria, Chairman of the Cohasset Board of Assessors will be Wigmore Pierson's guests on Pierson to Person Thursday, Oct. 26 from 8 to 9 p.m., on Continental Cablevision Channels 53 and 3.

Ripley will be discussing the restoration project of the old watch tower from Minot's Ledge Lighthouse on Government Island, Cohasset.

Lagrotteria will review the new real estate property evaluations and the new 1990 tax rate established by the assessors after the October 10 Cohasset Special Town Meeting.

"Pierson to Person" is aired live on Channel 53 in Hull, Hingham, Norwell, Hanover, and Scituate and on Channels 53 and 3 in Cohasset each Thursday night from 8 to 9 p.m.

State overturns decision to block license transfer

presents noparking or traffic concerns. The nearest all acohol package license is more than a mile away," according to the decision.

"The evidence before the Commission was that there was no location to which the board would have been willing to transfer the license," it stated. But last month, the board approved a request from Cohasset Meat and Produce for a beer and wine license.

According to the ABCC, "the board would be justified in refusing to issue a new license based on a finding that the town has more licenses than required by the public need, but that is not an appropriate standard in the case of transfer of an existing license.

"The Board's action in issuing an additional beer and wine license just this year casts some doubt on the consistency of its practices in this area . . . whatever standard the board adopts as public policy should be applied to all applicants."

Selectmen have 30 days to decide whether they will appeal this verdict to superior court. They have yet to vote on that matter.

Developer Staszko said he was pleased with the commission's decision, but added, "I always have to go this far with this town to prove that I'm within my legal rights. I've never asked for anything more than what I am legally allowed."

At a meeting of the planning board last week, a representative of Tedeschi Realty Corp. explained that a liquor store will occupy a section of the 53,000 square feet of space within the former Stop and Shop store.

In addition, there are plans to locate a CVS drug store in that area. Woolworth's will remain in the same space, but Noble's Camera Shop will be expanded from its site into the former grocery store area. Cohasset Jewelers will remain in the same site, but that store will also be expended.

Quincy Cooperative Bank will be moved into a separate building planned for the nothern edge of the parking lot near the South Shore Bank structure.

John McWeeney of Tedeschi Realty Corp., proposed that they be allowed to eliminate a 3,000 square foot mezzanine area within the former supermarket, and construct a 2,400 square foot bank building in exchange for fewer parking spaces in the parking lot.

The Tedeschi Plaza curently has 295 parking spaces, about 235 less than required by the parking bylaw. If a business adds more than 200 square feet, a site plan review is required so the entire project complies with current zoning bylaws.

In addition, McWeeney proposed that a third of the parking spaces be placed in reserve so a landscaped buffer could be constructed between the lot and the state highway. Board members were unsure whether that would be allowed because it is a non conforming parking lot.

They also suggested that Tedeschi Realty eliminate one of the three entrances and exists to the plaza to enhance safety in that area.

Town counsel will make a decision on the two proposals.

Transfer station negotiations ended

Negotiations between the town and its transfer station contractors are over and the facility will soon be in operation.

Transfer station committee chairman Anson Whealler told selectmen Monday night that a $60,000 construction cost overrun has been converted into a $13,115 surplus for the town.

Originally, SEA Consultants Inc. figured 50 yards of ledge would have to be removed from the landfill site, but that proved to be a conservative estimate. During construction, Sciaba Construction Co. uncovered 655 cubic yards of ledge, and they agreed to remove it at the contract price of $100 per yard. That resulted in a $60,000 cost overrun for the entire project.

As a result of negotiations among selectmen and the two companies, a compromise was finally reached, Whealler explained. First, $41,000 will be taken from the project's contingency fund; a retaining wall, loam and seed will be eliminated from the project for a reduction of $10,500; and 378 yards of paving will be eliminated for a $4,914 reduction. Sciaba has agreed to cut $12,000 from its ledge removal estimate and SEA will absorb an extra $3,500 for the work. Also, he noted, $1,700 has not been used in the clerk of the works account.

In total, Whealler explained, $73,615 remains from the $500,000 project budget. Balancing that against the $60,000 cost overrun, and the town has ended up with a $13,115 surplus, he said.

The committee chairman recommended that a railing be installed in front of the refuse pit at the transfer station, and that fencing be installed in the front of the station. Those items will not be completed until the committee knows how much it will cost and whether the surplus can cover the expense.

Whealler noted that the state Department of Environmental Protection inspected the site last week and he believed "everything went well." Board of health chairman William Baird said they expect the station will open soon, but not until they receive approval from the state.

Vice President and Trust Officer Sandra Sevigney on Retirement Planning.

"IF YOU'RE OVER 25 AND YOU PLAN TO MAKE IT PAST 60, YOU'D BETTER SIT DOWN."

Unfortunately, the last thing most people want to think about is how they are going to finance their retirement.

But the truth is, it's never too early to start planning.

At Rockland Trust, we can help you set up the retirement plan that's right for you. We can help you wade through the confusion of IRA, Keogh, Profit Sharing and 401(k). If you change jobs, we can help you protect your profit sharing and pension benefits. And we can provide you with all the records and documentation you need at tax time.

With the right plan, you can save tax dollars today and make sure you have a comfortable income when you retire.

So if you want your golden years to be truly golden, now you know who to talk to.

State overturns decision to block license transfer

presents noparking or traffic concerns. The nearest all acohol package license is more than a mile away," according to the decision.

"The evidence before the Commission was that there was no location to which the board would have been willing to transfer the license," it stated. But last month, the board approved a request from Cohasset Meat and Produce for a beer and wine license.

According to the ABCC, "the board would be justified in refusing to issue a new license based on a finding that the town has more licenses than required by the public need, but that is not an appropriate standard in the case of transfer of an existing license.

"The Board's action in issuing an additional beer and wine license just this year casts some doubt on the consistency of its practices in this area . . . whatever standard the board adopts as public policy should be applied to all applicants."

Selectmen have 30 days to decide whether they will appeal this verdict to superior court. They have yet to vote on that matter.

Developer Staszko said he was pleased with the commission's decision, but added, "I always have to go this far with this town to prove that I'm within my legal rights. I've never asked for anything more than what I am legally allowed."

At a meeting of the planning board last week, a representative of Tedeschi Realty Corp. explained that a liquor store will occupy a section of the 53,000 square feet of space within the former Stop and Shop store.

In addition, there are plans to locate a CVS drug store in that area. Woolworth's will remain in the same space, but Noble's Camera Shop will be expanded from its site into the former grocery store area. Cohasset Jewelers will remain in the same site, but that store will also be expended.

Quincy Cooperative Bank will be moved into a separate building planned for the nothern edge of the parking lot near the South Shore Bank structure.

John McWeeney of Tedeschi Realty Corp., proposed that they be allowed to eliminate a 3,000 square foot mezzanine area within the former supermarket, and construct a 2,400 square foot bank building in exchange for fewer parking spaces in the parking lot.

The Tedeschi Plaza curently has 295 parking spaces, about 235 less than required by the parking bylaw. If a business adds more than 200 square feet, a site plan review is required so the entire project complies with current zoning bylaws.

In addition, McWeeney proposed that a third of the parking spaces be placed in reserve so a landscaped buffer could be constructed between the lot and the state highway. Board members were unsure whether that would be allowed because it is a non conforming parking lot.

They also suggested that Tedeschi Realty eliminate one of the three entrances and exists to the plaza to enhance safety in that area.

Town counsel will make a decision on the two proposals.

Transfer station negotiations ended

Negotiations between the town and its transfer station contractors are over and the facility will soon be in operation.

Transfer station committee chairman Anson Whealler told selectmen Monday night that a $60,000 construction cost overrun has been converted into a $13,115 surplus for the town.

Originally, SEA Consultants Inc. figured 50 yards of ledge would have to be removed from the landfill site, but that proved to be a conservative estimate. During construction, Sciaba Construction Co. uncovered 655 cubic yards of ledge, and they agreed to remove it at the contract price of $100 per yard. That resulted in a $60,000 cost overrun for the entire project.

As a result of negotiations among selectmen and the two companies, a compromise was finally reached, Whealler explained. First, $41,000 will be taken from the project's contingency fund; a retaining wall, loam and seed will be eliminated from the project for a reduction of $10,500; and 378 yards of paving will be eliminated for a $4,914 reduction. Sciaba has agreed to cut $12,000 from its ledge removal estimate and SEA will absorb an extra $3,500 for the work. Also, he noted, $1,700 has not been used in the clerk of the works account.

In total, Whealler explained, $73,615 remains from the $500,000 project budget. Balancing that against the $60,000 cost overrun, and the town has ended up with a $13,115 surplus, he said.

The committee chairman recommended that a railing be installed in front of the refuse pit at the transfer station, and that fencing be installed in the front of the station. Those items will not be completed until the committee knows how much it will cost and whether the surplus can cover the expense.

Whealler noted that the state Department of Environmental Protection inspected the site last week and he believed "everything went well." Board of health chairman William Baird said they expect the station will open soon, but not until they receive approval from the state.

Rev. Atkinson celebrates ministry with First Parish as school superintendent and an influential community leader.

Rev. Atkinson says service to community is embedded in the philosophy of the Unitarian Universalist religion. "Our religious imperative is to be involved in community service. Religion is community service - to create a better world," he says. The minister points to several members of the congregation who also serve as town leaders - Selectmen Diana Korne, Ned Tebbetts and Martha Gjesteby and school committee members Nancy Sandell and Barbara Bliss, to name a few.

"This is very typical of the congregation since its inception. And the ministers have been very involved, too," he says. Rev. Atkinson has taken that philosophy to heart, and has served as chairman of the Council on Aging and as first vice president of the Parent Student organization. He was also a commodore of the Cohasset Sailing Club and was vice president of the South Shore Mental Health Assn. Currently, Rev. Atkinson is a trustee of the Paul Pratt Library.

"I just can't tell my congregation to be involved. It can't be a case of do what I say, not what I do. I have to be as involved as they are," he says.

The position of library trustee is the first elected position the minister has held. But he can't rule out the possibility of future political contests.

"I don't know," he responds when asked if he will run for another elected office. "Some of the other offices are extremely demanding. I won't rule it out, but for myself, I try to pick one thing at a time and do that as well as I can."

Continuing on the theme of service to community, Rev. Atkinson says he has never shied away from speaking his mind about important contemporary issues.

But, he emphasizes, at no time does he stand as a spokesman for the members of the congregation. When he voices an opinion from the pulpit or at town meeting, he does so as Edward Atkinson, concerned citizen.

"I think the thing so many people miss is that when the minister speaks, he speaks for the entire congregation. When I speak, I speak for myself," he explains. Only through dialogue by the minister and his congregation, is his ministry strengthened. When he voices an opinion from the pulpit, he desires a reaction from members of the parish. Rev. Atkinson frequently invites members of the congregation to the pulpit to express their opposing points of view.

"I challenge the church community. I do not speak for them," he says. It is part of the minister's covenant with a parish to "speak the truth in love." It is that understanding between minster and congregation that allows the free exchange of ideas and philosophy, he adds.

It is more likely that a Unitarian congregation would dismiss their minister for being too dull rather than for his outspokenness, he says.

The First Parish, he notes, has been "superb in honoring that convenant" between minister and congregation.

"Truth grows out of dialogue," according to Rev. Atkinson. "We must not suppress that dialogue. That's a uniqueness of this religion. Most religions are founded on a revealed truth. Our religion is based on a continuing revelation of truth. That's why opinions and dialogue must never be shut off.

"None of us knows the absolute answers. It's better when we can share ideas," he says. That has never been a problem for the members of the First Parish in Cohasset. They have continually allowed their minister to speak his mind on a variety of issues on a local and national level.

Nearly three years ago, the congregation voted to allow Warner Brothers use of their church building for the filming of Witches of Eastwick. Rev. Atkinson agrees with the decision, noting that the community allowed the filming and the congregation wanted to continue that spirit of cooperation.

Secondly, he says, the church members saw this film as one way to express a certain philosophy or belief. Whether they agreed with the viewpoint or not, they could agree with the filmmaker's right to express those views. "There is nothing more fundamental to us than the freedom of expression," according to Rev. Atkinson. "It would be totally against our vision of the religious quest for us not to permit ideas to be expressed."

Their permission to film the movie in the First Parish Meeting House should not be confused with an endorsement of the product, he emphasized. It was Warner Brothers' portrayal of a John Updike novel, and did not necessarily reflect the beliefs of the congregation, he says.

The moviemakers, he recalls, were completely responsible professionals. Although many objected to the goulish protrayal of the devil in the church, Rev. Atkinson said the congregation was mainly concerned that the building be cleaned in time for a wedding. As promised, the church was immaculate by the start of the wedding.

His dealings with the producer and director were cordial and professional, Rev. Atkinson recalls. His only disappointment was that director George Miller did not use Atkinson's suggested script changes for the minister in that scene.

"It's always been my complaint that Hollywood continues to refuse to depict a competent minister," he says, noting that he turned down an offer to play the role in the Warner Brothers movie. "It would have been a compromise to my integrity. After all, we allowed the use of the church for the movie.

"However, I did rewrite the part of the minister. But they didn't play it the way I felt it should have been played."

One positive result of the filming, he says, is the large donation the parish received from Hollywood. That $25,000 check has been put to good use by the congregation. By a vote of the parish, the money was used to renovate an area of the parish house which is now being used to temporarily accommodate a homeless family.

"The parish decided the money was a gift to us, and we wanted to make a gift to the wider community," according to Rev. Atkinson. "We placed it in a fund to be used for outreach services. With that money we have been able to renovate a space within the parish house. It's not an apartment, but a space within this building that was once used as a residence. They are the guests of the parish."

In addition to housing a family, the parish house is used by 37 different community organizations, including the Council on Aging, the 60+ Club, the Boy Scouts and Alcoholics Anonymous.

Looking back on his time spent in Cohasset, Rev. Atkinson says he never had a long-range goal to stay in one place. But he remembers a phrase used by the parish search committee when he was being considered for the position of minister. "Cohasset will grow on you," they stated in a brochure." "And it has been very true.

Celebration of a long ministry

It's obviously a beautiful place and I knew that. And I was immediately impressed with the congregation and its search committee.

"But it is also a Yankee kind of town, a place where long-standing relationships are nurtured and cherished. My three children have grown up here and consider Cohasset their hometown. It's been a very important place for us.

"It has provided 'adoptable roots" for us. We have been able to become connected with the community. That's very special about Cohasset - that's probably why they've only had 15 ministers in more than 200 years," Rev. Atkinson notes.

Despite his obvious love for the congregation and the community, Rev. Atkinson says he cannot dispell the possibility that someday he may leave. A minister, he says, must always be prepared to move on.

"Once in a while I can feel the itch," he says, recalling how he initially thought his ministry would lead him to an urban congregation with an immense population. "Then I start to think of these bonds I have made, and I say no, I want to stay here. This is where we have taken root."

Addiction a problem for elderly

ing substance abuse problems, and the symptoms of alcoholism and drug abuse may be ignored by family members, he said. Even if identified, there are virtually no treatment programs and few social support systems to deal with the special needs of the older alcoholic or drug addict, Spinks explained.

The Council has experimented with training home care workers and establishing AA meetings in senior housing, according to Spinks, but more education, outreach, and training is necessary.

The gap between needs and services is not unique to the elderly. Resources for adult women are also scarce.

"The problem of addiction is a community-wide problem," said Spinks. "Unless somebody steps in and does something, the reality is that it's a fatal disease."

Because of the effectiveness of health education and community outreach programs, many people are reaching out and asking for help. In an era of budgetary constraints, it is often difficult to provide the assistance that is necessary.

The most cost-effective and desirable thing to do is to prevent addiction or to catch it in the very early stages.

"Prevention is the direction we must go in," he said. "The longer someone goes before treatment, the more difficult it is."

Cutting through denial that a problem exists and being well-informed is the key element in a successful community prevention program.

Spinks told the committee that the best thing they could do would be to start by educating themselves thoroughly. The second step is educating the community.

"We must help people to be more informed about the choices they're going to make and help them to make healthy choices," added Cheryl Gayle, director of Prevention Resources.

Prevention Resources is a regional Substance Abuse Prevention Center that provides training, consultation, community organizing assistance, and resource materials to 40 cities and towns. Funding for the center comes from the Department of Public Health and the United Way.

Both Spinks and Gayle offered their expertise and services to the committee and to the community.

Committee member Wigmore Pierson asked them for recommendations of programs that worked and the names of communities that the committee could get ideas from.

Programs that she recommended as effective included:

- Peer leadership programs that train high school students to work with elementary school kids.

"Kids listen to kids. A ten year old is really going to listen to a 16 year old," Gayle told the group.

Although Cohasset High School has a peer counseling program, it has not used the program in this way. Michael Gill, health coordinator for the school system, told the group that he plans to add a peer leadership component. The high school students who go through the training would work with fifth and sixth grade students to supplement and reinforce the drug and alcohol education.

Gill told the committee, "We have to be very careful. We need a commitment from these kids to be alcohol, drug, and tobacco free" because the high school students serve as role models and referral agents.

- Small group, neighborhood based outreach programs have been used successfully in other communities.

"We will train a couple who then invite two or three sets of parents over for coffee and spread the information through the neighborhood," Gayle

- Community task forces also work to increase general awareness.
- Alcohol-free community and family events are important because they send a message to kids that you can have fun without getting high.

Both Spinks and Gayle told the committee that one of the most helpful things the committee could do would be to work against the Not In My Backyard attitude that prevents treatment programs from coming into a community.

Chairman Jack Golden told the committee that he had logged 87 calls since the committee had begun its work and had been approached on the street by numerous residents. All were supportive of the work and hoping for concrete recommendations.

The volunteer committee holds open meetings in the Town Hall every Tuesday evening and encourages residents of all ages to attend.

❑ Steven D. and Elizabeth C. Pinkus of Beechwood Street are the parents of a boy born October 13 at South Shore Hospital.

❑ Caren (Hall) and Frank Wheelwright are a mighty happy pair these days, they had a son on October 3 at South Shore Hospital. Congratulations!!

❑ From the small-world, ultimate coincidence department...you could have knocked them all over with a feather, let alone a baseball bat when two almost-neighbors came face to face at a distant location not so long ago. Bill Ketchum lives on Beechwood Street, not far from Leo Fiori on Schofield Rd; Bill was visiting some family in Cooperstown, New York and, of course took his son to visit the Baseball Hall of Fame. Leo, with a friend, had decided on a trip to the museum as a mini-vacation from the gas station. You can just imagine the surprise of both when Bill and son walked in to see Leo looking over the exhibits! Best of all Ketchum's son was wearing a Leo Fiori Red Sox Little League jersey, having been a member of the Fiori-sponsored team during the summer!

❑ It may be too late now, but try to take a look at the spectacular display of impatiens that has been bringing oohs and aahs from customers of Cohasset Savings Bank's North Scituate Office. After years of trying to find a plant or shrub that would work in the covered alcove above the entrance, Carl Sestito hit on the uniquitous and forgiving impatiens to provide a rainbow of colors.

❑ We want to congratulate Susan (Guilty) and Peter Roy on the birth of their son, Kyle Michael Roy. Kyle was born on October 9 (his Uncle Chris' birthday) and weighed in at 7 1/2 pounds. He joins his brothers Peter and Chris at home. Mom and Dad sure have a lot of joy with "their three sons." Lots of work too!! Can't you just see Santa's visit to their house this year? What fun!!!

❑ Had a wonderful note from Ellery Clark last week, with an update on his medals that won in the senior olympics. Most recently, at ages 79 and 80, he has won 10 medals in eight events, a fact that he attributes to "Good clean living, no alcohol, no cigarettes and no drugs!" He enclosed a list of his medals and awards, along with his father's, and it is such fun to compare! In one hundred years of combined father and son competition, they set a new first in United States Amateur History of Tract, 1889-1989! Ellery Clark Sr. won 65 firsts to Junior's 39; 50 seconds to Jr's 17; 24 thirds to Jr's 14, 0 fourths to Jr's 2 for a total of 139 medals to Jr's 72!! Other prizes were 101 for Ellery Clark Sr., and 12 for Ellery Clark Jr. See what "good clean living" does for one? Mr. Clark should be an inspiration to all of the youngsters of today!!

Dennis Kobray performed as Beethoven for the students of Deer Hill School. The special musical program was sponsored by the Cultural Enrichment Committee of the PSO. (Staff photo/Dave Sullivan)

❑ There was a special awards night at Cohasset High School last Thursday night (October 19) where several students received their Academic Awards for being on either honors or high honors for all of last year. We do salute them. That's a wonderful feat to accomplish!

❑ Congratulations to Richard J. Ryan, who has been elected to membership in the Boston Chapter of Financial Executives Institute. Mr. Ryan is Chief Financial Officer and Executive Vice President of Finance and Administration at Child World, Inc., in Avon, Mass. Prior to this current position, he has been President of Jim Walter Doors, a Division of J. Walter Corporation, and President of Ophthalmic Labs, a division of Bausch and Lomb.

❑ We think that Wayne Sawchuk's idea of sending every 1989 graduate from CHS a "care package" at college this year is a nifty one! How nice it will be to know that our town's businessmen are thinking of them!! Can you imagine the looks the students will receive from fellow roommates. Hats off to you, Wayne, and to the Chamber of Commerce for following through on a super idea!

❑ Don't forget that the PSO Monte Carlo Night is November 4 from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the Cohasset Community Center. It is a major fundraiser for the PSO, and it is tons of fun! They are asking that you dress in "Creative Black Tie" for the occasion, so use your imagination and have lots of fun! You can purchase tickets for $15 at the Community Center, from any PSO member or by calling Cheryl Bugley (383-9482), Mary Margaret Senechal (383-6297) or Allison Ulmer (383-2672).

❑ That's it from here for this week, please don't forget to call me with your news!

❑ Have a happy Halloween, and don't forget to set your clocks back Saturday night!

Recreation program schedule . . .

The Cohasset Recreation Department's first trip will be held Sunday, Dec. 17, to Loon Mt.

This first trip will be done in conjunction with the Massachusetts Ski Club. The cost for this trip is $38 per person, and $44 per person for the beginner package which includes transportation, novice slopes lift ticket, lesson, equipment rentals.

For the $44 non-beginner package, you are provided with transportation and full-mountain, (except gondola) lift ticket. Rentals for non-beginners, are $13. Bring your rental money with you the day of the trip.

This trip is ideal for those who have never skied before. For $44 you will be fully outfitted and participate in a lesson. Seasoned skiers will be provided an early start on the ski season.

Because this trip is being conducted through the Mass. Ski Club, early registration will be required. Arrangements and payments must be made by Thursday, Nov. 30. To register, call the recreation department office at 383-6791. Payment is the confirmation of your reservations, and must be made at the recreation office in town hall, or mailed along with a parental info/permission form.

JOB OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM

Each year the Recreation Department receives a number of calls from residents who need various yard work help and babysitting. Any Cohasset youth who feels they might be interested in mowing lawns, babysitting or performing odd jobs, should come to the recreation office and complete a job opportunity application form.

Once the form is filed, the department will refer you to the various jobs as they are called into the office. Last year there were far more job opportunities than applicants to fill the jobs.

The recreation department acts as a clearing house for jobs/workers. Individual employees and employers will arrange scheduling of hours, hourly pay rates, etc.

If you are seeking any sort of part time employment, call the Cohasset Recreation Department Office at 383-6791 for a job application. If you are a resident seeking help, call the recreation department at the same number.

Village Fair preparations underway

Groups of Cohasset parishioners are collecting the treasures and treats that will be offered at the 49th annual Cohasset Village Fair, Saturday, Dec. 2, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Committee chairmen have set up work meetings until the day of the fair. They are inviting everyone to join in the activities.

The boutique committee has been meeting regularly in Bates Hall of the Congregational Church at 7:45 each Monday.

Beginning Wednesday, Nov. 1, preparations for the wreath sale begin under the leadership of Jean Manganaro and Merle Graham. The workers will gather at the home of Cathy Pratt, 482 King Street, at 9:30 to work until noon. They will meet each Wednesday morning until the final week before the fair when the scene will shift to the Congregational Church for daily work sessions.

An appeal for useful, used articles for the bargain bazaar has been sent out by a group headed by Carol Sandblom, Marsha Silvia and Linda Campbell. This committee has arranged for donated items to be left in the basement of St. Anthony's Rectory on South Main Street. Volunteers will be present from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. Wednesdays and Saturdays beginning November 1 to accept donations.

St. Anthony's Rectory will also be the depository for the recycled books. Helen Hooper, chairman of the book committee, or some of her co-workers, will be at the rectory on Mondays to receive the donations.

Peggy Clapp will head the committee arranging the plant table, and Ava Sweeney of St. Stephens will be organizing the childrens' activities to be held in Community Center. Rose and Chris Kierce have been welcomed as representatives to the central committee from St. Anthony's Church, taking over from Lou Simeone and Kathy Brennock who now have additional assignments.

Joining the central staff of the fair are Claudia Story and Tish Jordan as assistants to Jim Hooper, treasurer. They are handling the finances of the fair.

A hallowed eve

Halloween is approaching, as anyone with kids knows. Paper pumpkins grace restaurant and school windows, and the question of the day is, "What are you going to be?

So, who cares? Besides the candy, card and costume industries, not many people over the age of 12. But that's not always been so.

Let's take a few minutes to reflect on the other meaning of Halloween.

We don't often hear sermons reminding us to think of "the true meaning of Halloween" as we do at Christmas.

That may be partly due to the fact that while this is a religious festival, it is not one of the more hopeful days on the theological calendar.

Halloween is a contraction meaning "All Hallows' Eve– the eve of All Saints' Day. Traditional Catholics go to Mass on Nov. 1 to honor the saints and to pray for their help and guidance as we struggle to follow them into Heaven.

But the evening before has been shrouded in the darker mysteries of the spirit. It combines Christian and pre-Christian ideas with the awesome forces of the natural world.

The fall equinox, when the sun moves across the equator, forbodes the onset of winter in the northern hemisphere, particularly those regions, like ours, where seasons are marked strongly.

For primitive people, the most important event of the year, the harvest, came at this time.

In Britain and northern Europe, where many of our Halloween traditions were born, those ancients were totally dependent on what they saw as the earth-spirits to grant them a life-giving harvest.

The Druids, a pagan culture in Britain, built bonfires to keep at bay the evil spirits thought to reside in the surrounding darkness.

Apples, cakes and other "treats" were fruits of the harvest, shared at festivals and offered to deities including the earth mother, who was Demeter to the Greeks, and Pamona to the Romans.

The earliest costumes were disguises worn to fool evil spirits, and tricks were played to emulate them.

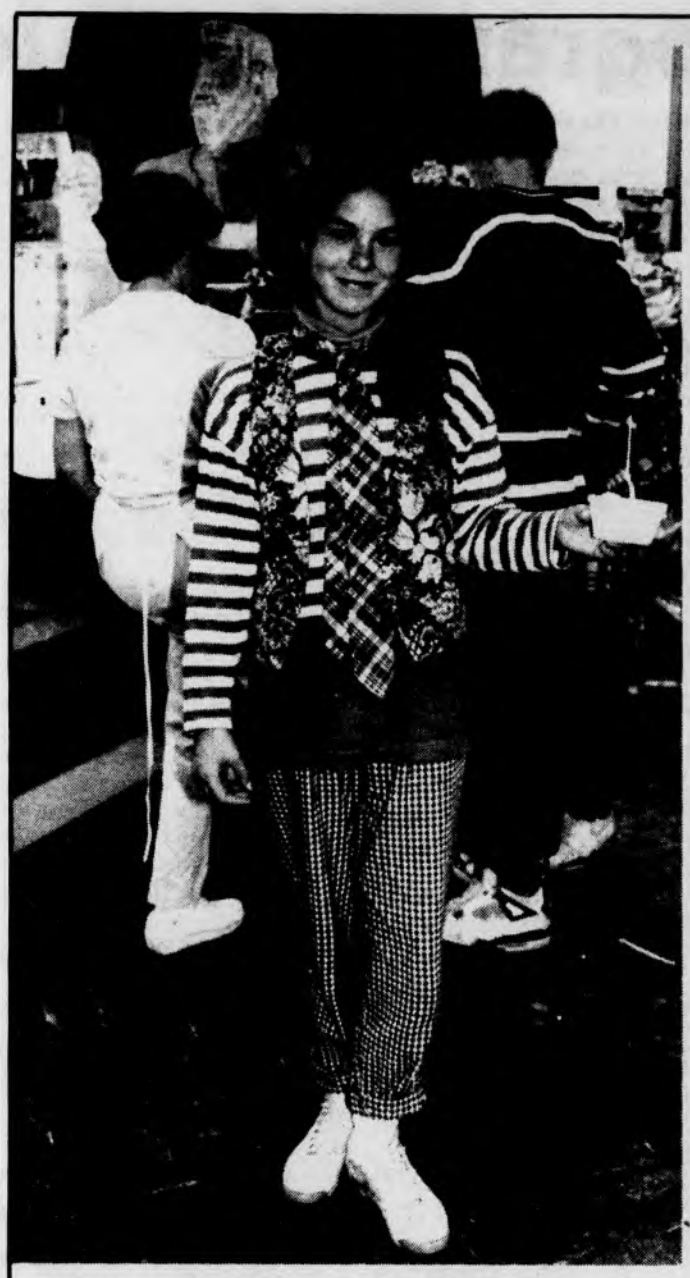
The jack-o-lantern symbol is based on the Celtic legend of a man who after death was not allowed into Heaven because of his miserliness. Because he had once tricked the Devil, he was not welcome in Hell, either.

So he was doomed to spend eternity roaming the world with his lantern, halfway between good and evil, between death and salvation.

To us he has become a silly pumpkin face. The original lantern of Jack was a turnip containing a live coal. Now we use one of the popular fruits of our own New England harvest.

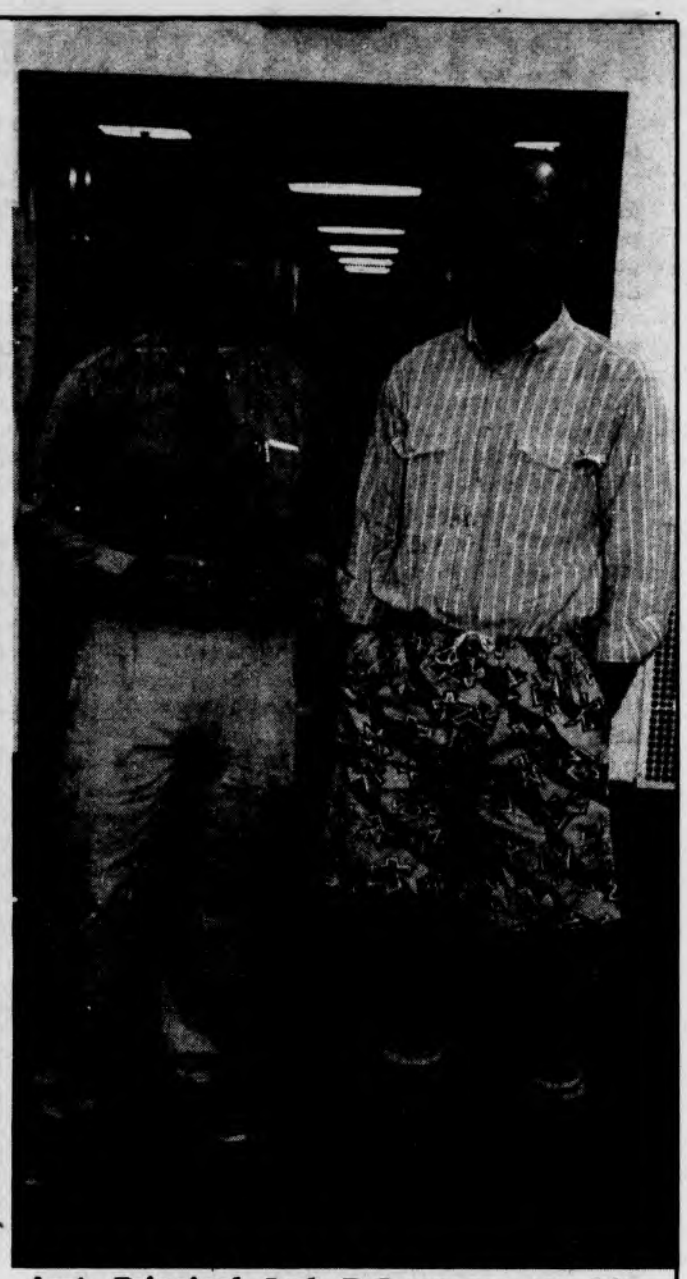
The witch has become another symbol, of one who uses supernatural powers to harm the living. But as late as the 17th century in our part of the world, witchcraft was not only believed in, but the cause of widespread hysteria which sent many a hapless victim to the gallows.

When the early Christian church designated All Saints' Day at the time of the ancient new year marked by harvest and the sun's departure from the northern hemisphere, many powerful symbols were united.



Homage was paid to the power of death and the hope of resurrection, to the mysterious force that makes the earth bear life-giving fruit, but can just as easily leave her barren and cold.

The Easter season in the spring marks the hopeful phase, of renewal and birth. This season, Halloween, marks the other end of that cycle.



So, have fun at the party, and enjoy the cute costumes of young trick-or-treaters while saving a few Hershey minatures to munch later.

But let us also remember that "civilization" will never quite drown out the voices of our ancestors calling out to the spirit world.

Each of us walks through life carrying our own lantern, trying to light the way among the forces of good and evil in ourselves.

Shona Hislop explained to our photographer, "The clothes are supposed to clash."

Asst. Principal Jack DeLorenzo wore his favorite tie, and teacher Jack Buckley dressed up for the occasion of last week's Clash Day activities.

Pet owners must act responsibly

Letters

To the Editor:

The pup was cute, all small, friendly, soft, cuddly and trusting you to take care of him, no matter how or where you purchased him, breeder, pet store or shelter. It was fun at first. Well, maybe not the teaching how to go outside but, somehow the pup learned. Hopefully through dilligence and kindness on your part, spending a great deal of time at first watching for those signs. Nevertheless, the dog grew up and now the weather is changing, it's dark earlier and colder.

Oh, let the dog out on his own he'll come right back! WELL HE DID NOT! Dogs don't realize where their property line ends. They like to sniff and wander to explore. Unfortunately, black tar pavement is for a vehicle weighing two tons or so and the dog weighs only 25 to 150 pounds. NO MATCH! POOR INNOCENT DOG! In the town of Hingham this past week alone the Animal Control Officer has had to pick up and notify seven owners and in Cohasset the ACO has had to notify four owners of the death of their pets, mostly at night. Lets take a minute here to THINK. The town of Hingham has a leash law, and Cohasset has an animal control bylaw. This is to first protect the dog from being hurt. He is the one who suffers the most. A walk with your dog any time of year can provide the owner with a good opportunity to get excellent exercise and companionship. If you are sick or if the weather is bad maybe you should provide a fenced in area of your yard or a trolly chain to secure the dog when you can not go out walking with him. Oh yes, and never have the dog leave home without his Town dog license which you have renewed each year or you may never see him again. At night when the ACO is off duty he becomes heart sick when called out to pick up those injured or killed by cars. Be a RESPONSIBLE PET OWNER so, you can enjoy their companionship, their trust and well being which is in your hands.

Please remember also your cats as well should be in by the fire place rug at night. Their fate is worse as they are not licensed and there is no way to notify an owner unless they have an expandable collar with your name and number on it. But why have them suffer? Remember too, if you are the unfortunate person to injure or kill a dog you must by law notify the nearest police station of when and where the accident occurred. There is a fine for not doing so. If you see such an accident and the person does not stop, take the license number and notify the police.

Support local services for seniors

To the Editor:

The South Shore owes much to the non-political, non-profit, caregivers and advocates of the Visiting Nurse Association, and the Social Service league of Cohasset.

We are consumers of the products they produce; blood pressure, screening, the health fair, hints for better living and health protection, guides to home care, etc. The list could go on forever. They are our special people and always need word-of- mouth support and encouragement. When there is a "drive" it is worth small sacrifices to support them in their caring endeavors. These groups are our friends and our 1989 "good Samaritans." I think the Visiting Nurse Associations have been in existence for about 80 years — helping us always and steering us from pitfalls.

There is a move on foot to go "make a buck" — and I, personally, feel we must never let this valuable asset slip from our midst to the profiteers of big business and those who might feel that this is an opportunity for cash profit. We all know where this has led us now. Cherish them and support their efforts and our causes by public relations. However disgruntled we may get about a variety of things, these groups are our allies. They are important to us. And we know from or own Mary-Ann (Hansen) and the others in Social Service — we sure need them all — every one. As they say at the close our religious services; "Thanks be to God" — Amen.

Orientation adventure for CHS ninth graders

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Everything changes when you start high school.

According to Cohasset guidance counselors, everybody-- students included-- expects more from the new freshmen. This transition comes at a time when they are struggling with trying to figure out who they are, what they believe in, and what they want to do with the rest of their lives.

For Cohasset kids, the transition is harder because they start high school in the same building they've been in since seventh grade.

To help the students ease into their new role, the guidance department and humanities teachers developed a weekend camp-out orientation program. This is the second year the program has been offered.

Students who participated in this year's program left Cohasset High School at 8 a.m. on Friday, Sept. 15 for a three hour bus trip to Camp Marist in Center Ossippee, N.H. The lake-front camp is set on 350 acres in the lakes region of New Hampshire.

The orientation was enthusiastically received by the current crop of ninth graders-- 76 out of a class of 85 went along for the ride. The bulk of those who didn't attend stayed behind because they were in the first freshmen football game of the season.

Cost of the weekend was minimal. Social studies teacher Joseph Bouchard arranged the accommodations at no cost. Bouchard works at the camp in the summer.

Students had to come up with money to cover transportation and food costs. The tab was $30 per pupil this year. The school committee guaranteed funds would be available for any student unable to pay.

Assigning students to the groups they would working in took a lot of time and thought.

Groups were designed to get kids talking, said guidance counselor Ann Porter. They intentionally separated friends and broke up clique members.

"We broke down barriers," said Cronin. "They got to know some of the other kids in the class that they didn't know before."

Students said they were aware of the manipulation. They thought it was a good idea, although one freshman girl admitted that everyone went back to the same group of friends at the end.

Students worked on issues like goal setting, values clarification, and self-esteem. Discussion wasn't the only way they approached the subjects. They kept journals, played games, and did a variety of activities. The most popular activity cited by participants was the "blind trust walk".

For this activity, students were blind-folded and led up-hill and down-dale, forced to rely on information from their leaders about obstacles and hazards in their pathway.

Free time was rare. When not involved in the highly structured small group activities, the students were swimming or playing organized sports.

According to Frances Cronin, English teacher and one of the orientation organizers, by the time the kids were sitting around the camp fire at the end of the first day, "they were begging to go to sleep."

In fact, the biggest complaint among the ninth graders was that there was "too much to do."

Their solution? "Add a third day!"

In addition to the organizers, the students were chaperoned and led through the process by Cohasset teachers and peer counselors.

Getting to know teachers as "real people" was cited by both teachers and students as a plus. Likewise, getting to know the peer counselors before a crisis strikes was seen as a way of making it more likely that the younger students will turn to the junior and senior counselors in time of trouble.

Juniors Sophie Redfield and Kerri Miele are first year peer counselors. For them, it was an opportunity to get involved and comfortable with their role as counselors.

Both are wildly enthusiastic about peer counseling and the orientation camp out.

"It's perfect at the ninth grade level," said Redfield.

Ninth grade students participate in their favorite orientation activity, the blind trust walk .

Participants in the recent ninth grade orientation program wrote "warm, fuzzy" descriptions about each other with help and support from one another.

"It gave them a focus for their high school years."

Miele agreed. "It brought a lot of them out of their shell," she said.

Their class didn't have a camp out. Both said they wished the program had been around when they were freshmen.

"I was really jealous that our class didn't get to go," said Redfield.

Redfield and Miele agreed with the ninth graders that a longer camp out would be helpful.

"It took them different amounts of time to open up. You can't build trust in a single day," said Miele.

"Some didn't take it seriously until the second day," added Redfield.

But they agreed with the guidance counselors that the program should only be offered at the ninth grade level.

"It's special the first time. If they did it every year, then kids would take it for granted," they said.

But the process didn't end when the kids broke camp on Saturday. At least half the class is continuing the work in small groups at the high school.

The ninth graders summed up their experience by saying, "Do we get to go next year?"

Conservatory grateful for Rep. Murray's support

Letters

To the Editor:

(This letter was written to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray. Ed.)

Dear Mary Jeanette,

On behalf of the trustees of the South Shore Conservatory, I am writing to say how much we appreciate your ongoing support and dedication to the cultural life of Massachusetts and to thank you for the role you played in making our Merit Aid award possible.

In view of the serious reduction in funds appropriated by the Legislature to the Arts and Humanities Council this year, we at the South Shore Conservatory are particularly grateful and pleased to have been awarded $9,400 in Merit Aid for Fiscal 1990. This vital funding supports, in part, our Public School Outreach Program (providing direct aid to music departments in eight South Shore school systems), community concerts and plays, our Summer Wind Ensemble day camp program, and, probably most importantly, provides cultural access for the diverse population here on the South Shore.

With your help, the South Shore Conservatory can continue to grow as a vital center for all the performing arts on the South Shore and as a leader in arts education.

Many, many thanks for your support!

James C. Simpson, Jr.

South Shore Conservatory

Annual antique show and sale

The 13th antique show and sale will be held Saturday, Nov. 4, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m at the Deer Hill School, 206 Sohier Street (off route 3A) just before the Music Circus.

Admission to the show with a card or ad for one or two persons is $1.50. Regular admission is $2. Admission cards are available from dealers and members of the Beechwood Congregational Church. Antiques such as glass, silver, jewelry, primitives and other collectibles will be on display and for sale. A public snack bar will be held in the school cafeteria with sandwiches, hot dogs, homemade squares, coffee, tea and cold drinks. Homemade baked goods will be on sale at the ticket area.

It's happening . . .

Drama club production

Tickets for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's November production of "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown" are now on sale at the Cohasset Hardware Company in the Village. Group ticket purchases should be made in advance.

The play dates at the Cohasset Town Hall stage are Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Nov. 16, 17 and 18 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Nov. 19 at 2 p.m. The ticket price is $8.

Now into its third week of rehearsals, Director Martha Sawyer is shaping a show with appeal to all age groups.

Starlight Ball Oct. 28

The Cohasset Community Center is planning a "Starlight Ball" Saturday, Oct. 28. All proceeds will benefit the Cohasset Community Center's Mortgage Reduction Campaign. The success of the "Starlight Ball" will mean more funds for programs and events which benefit the entire community.

Everyone is invited to attend. Your donation is tax-deductible. To obtain tickets or more information call Judy Volungis at 383-0088 or Holly Holway at 383-1763.

Cancer Society Auction set

An eight-day vacation for two at a Jamaica resort including round-trip air fare, tops the list of items being offered at the "Harvest of Happiness" Cancer Society Auction to be held at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham Friday evening, Nov. 17.

Viewing of auction items begins at 7 p.m., with bidding at 8 p.m. Sunburst Holidays of Newton has donated the Jamaican vacation in support of the Society programs.

Among the other unusual donations that will be auctioned is a Lo-Jack system, a Merry Week-End and a Merry Evening at the Sheraton Tara in Braintree, a visit with Eileen Prose on the Channel 5 "Good Day Show," a one-hour training session in TV production with Rex Trailer, and tickets to a variety of sports events. Hors d'oeuvres will be served and music provided by a live combo.

Tickets to the auction are being sold throughout the South Shore by committee members.

For information about tickets or donations, call Barbara Sullivan at 848-9414, or the Unit Office at 341-4210.

Art Etc. Auction Nov. 3

The South Shore Art Center is sponsoring an Art Etc. Auction Friday Nov. 3 at 8 p.m. It will feature items and services as well as fine art donated by over 75 South Shore businesses and professional artists.

Some of the artists who have given pieces of their work include Syma, Claffy Williams, Chris Rifkin, Eleanor Gorman, Judy Rossman, Tom Rebek and Mary Lizotte. Other items to choose from are a tour of Channel 7, viewing the 6 p.m. news and meeting the stars; a sailboat cruise for four with lunch and wine; a Cohasset shopping spree; four skybox Celtics tickets; a canoe trip for two on the North River with gourmet lunch; Red Sox autographed baseballs; a movie package for 75 of your friends including wine, hors d'oeuvres and popcorn; and an airplane ride for four to Nantucket for brunch.

The evening's fun will feature auctioneers Wigmore Pierson, Bruce Tuthill and Mandy Avery. All of the artwork may be previewed at the center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Oct. 28 to Nov. 3.

Friday Nov. 17, the South Shore Art Center will present an Artful Apparel Fashion Show at 6:30 p.m. to kick off the upcoming exhibit, Contextures II.

Sixteen Massachusetts and Connecticut fiber artists and clothing designers will participate in both the fashion show and the exhibit.

Both events will feature a cash bar and refreshments.

Tickets for both events are available at the art center.

For tickets and information, call the art center weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 617-383-9548.

Artists may submit work

Artists in all media are invited to submit work December 1 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. to the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, for consideration for Gallery Membership and/or a Bancroft Gallery Exhibition.

The Gallery Selection Committee will jury Saturday, Dec. 2. Interested artists should submit a resume and five original works. Photographers must submit 20 pieces. They must be matted in white, off-white or black. Twenty slides may be submitted but are optional. Artists submitting work for an exhibition may also supply a written proposal for a specific type of show.

Invitational exhibitions will be juried once a year while the Gallery Artist Membership will be juried twice a year. Gallery artists enjoy the privelege of exhibiting throughout the year in the Dillion Gallery as well as in satellite exhibitions.

For more information, call the South Shore Art Center weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 617-383-9548.

School news

Deer Hill artist of the month

Thanks to the great effort of the Deer Hill volunteer parents, the work of Mary Cassatt was presented to the school in October.

For those of you who have not had the opportunity, there is still time to see the Mary Cassatt exhibit at the MFA. The exhibit is continuing through Nov. 5.

There will be a brief meeting of volunteer parents, Wednesday, Nov. 1 at 10 a.m. in the Deer Hill Art Room, to discuss the November artist, Winslow Homer.

If you are unable to attend but would like to volunteer in your child's room, please call Lee Jenkins (383-0024). The success of this program is entirely dependent on volunteers.

Osgood weekly news notes

Halloween Fair — The Community Center will hold its 5th Annual Halloween Fair for children Sunday, Oct. 29 from 2 to 4 p.m. on the common. Decorated pumpkins should be dropped off at 1 p.m. for judging. The children will gather at 2 p.m. for the traditional Halloween Parade around the common. There will be face painting, games, balloons, penny candy store and more. See you there.

Computer Class — Robin Balch will be offering computer classes on Wednesday afternoons from 3 to 4 p.m. Please call the Osgood Office or your classroom teacher to reserve space.

Playground Thanks — Many thanks to all the parents who worked Saturday "sprucing up" our Playground! They sanded, added peastone and did a general fix up — we know the children appreciate it and will enjoy it for years to come.

Cohasset Boosters — The Cohasset Boosters Sports Sales will be on Saturday, Oct. 28 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Deer Hill cafeteria. Any sports related items may beconsigned or donated on Friday, Oct. 27 from 2 to 5 p.m. at Deer Hill cafeteria or by calling Ernie Grassey, 383-6857, Lucy Marsac, 383-9845 or Eileen Corbett, 383-6467.

Dates to Remember: October 27, no school — Teacher's convention.

Cheerleader captains and football team captains joined together during last week's spirited pep rally as the players and fans prepare to do battle against Bridgewater-Raynham.

Log 'n Line exhibits artwork

The spirit of Halloween is abundant at the Log 'n Line. Once again, Peter and Judy Kulturides show their support for the Cohasset student art program by hanging a creative and colorful Exhibition of Deer Hill School art work.

The 4th grade students' latest art project was to create a mask. This served as the vehicle through which they learned how to construct a 3-dimensional paper sculpture, and experimented with the exaggerated and distorted characteristics found in expressionistic art.

The results are imaginative and fun to look at. They can be enjoyed for the next two weeks at the Log 'n Line.

Recycling signs made

The Alternative School students are in the process of making signs for Cohasset's new Recycling-Transfer Facility. The signs will direct town residents to the appropriate stations for the disposal of their newspapers, glass, aluminum, metals, returnables, and yard waste.

Initial progress has been very pleasing to Mrs. Sharon Becker of the Board of Health. Mrs. Becker has generously supplied the students with the necessary materials and encouraged their support of both the environmental issue of recycling and the community.

The eighth graders got into the proper spirit as they help to decorate the backboard for last week's pep rally at CHS. The students included: Sarah Kirk, Cilla Goff, and Sarah Atherton.

CHS artist of the month

Dan Curtin is the Artist of The Month at CHS for October. Dan has a show of drawings hanging in the "CHS Art gallery" near the Art Room. His main theme is imagination and fantasy. Dan is a student in the alternative school at CHS and is a member of the Art Major Class.

Education Task Force

On Wednesday, Nov. 8, educational, business and government leaders will meet to discuss the critical state of the American educational system and its repercussioins at 7:30 p.m. in Scituate High School on Route 3A.

An open invitation is extended to those interested in the education of today's youth — tomorrow's leaders.

Sources as varied as MIT and Fortune magazine have published reports indicating the American educational system is failing to produce a skilled, competent workforce, causing the U.S. to lose leadership in the new knowledge-based global economy; and the results are impacting society at every level.

Hosted by the South Shore Coalition Education Task Force, this evening will offer varying perspectives on the issue and will attempt to forge a joint venture approach to addressing the needs within the public educational system.

Scheduled speakers include Paul Tsongas, Chairman of the State Board of Regents, and Ronald E. Zooleck, CEO of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. Senator William Golden will serve as moderator for the evening. Group discussion will be encouraged.

Local town boards, community and business leaders, educators, parents, PTO's, and senior citizens will be represented at this ground-breaking roundtable. All those interested in becoming part of the solution are urged to attend.

The South Shore Coalition Education Task Force is a regional coalition of ten communities working together on local and state educational issues; Chairman, Dr. John P. Kulevich. For further information, contact Paula Norton, 837-0115.

Art club begins at CHS

The Art Club began at CHS. Oriental Arts was the topic for the October 10 meeting with brush painting, calligraphy and Kimono design. The art club will devote its energies to the scenery for the school musical "Bye Bye Birdie" for the next few weeks, with meetings planned for October 16, 17, 23, 24, 30.

New flag for Deer Hill

The Deer Hill School is sending a letter to Congressman Gerry Studds asking for a new American flag for the school. The school hopes to receive a flag which has been flown over the Capitol building to replace the torn and tattered flag now used by the school.

ELDER AFFAIRS SECRETARY OFFERS INFORMATION ON GOOD ORAL HYGIENE

Massachusetts Executive Office of Elder Affairs Secretary Paul J. Lanzikos reminds elders of the importance of good oral health.

"Often, older adults ignore an important part of health — oral health," said Secretary Lanzikos. "Part of feeling good and enjoying an active lifestyle means being repsonsible for proper dental hygiene. The Masachusetts Dental Society recommends that you follow a program that includes daily oral care, nutritious meals, and regular dental visits."

The Massachusetts Dental Society can provide you with information and tips on good dental hygiene. The Society's Speaker's Bureau has speakers who, free of charge, will speak to groups of elders. A slide show on good oral health and nutrition practices is also available.

By practicing proper dental care, you help your digestive system, your comfort, your overall health. For more information, please contact Peg Polland at the Massachusetts Dental Society between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. (617)651-7511 or 1-800-342-8747.

TUESDAY LUNCHEONS

The Cohasset COA is pleased to have M. Rose Kierce helping out this year with the Tuesday Lunch Program. Along with the new caterer from the Cohasset High School, I hope this will be a great year of growth, and a time to meet new friends. But, we need volunteer helpers for two (2) hours a week (only once a month) to make this program work. The meals will be served at the First Parish House, 23 No. Main St., at noon time during the school year. If you would like to help out or if you would like to make a reservation for lunch, please call the COA office at 383-9112. Jobs include: reservation desk volunteers, table set-up, servers, clean-up, financial aides, & kitchen help.

SUE'S NEWS

The Senior to Senior Volunteer Program will be underway by the end of the month.

The program involves matching up a high school Junior or Senior with a Senior Citizen. Our goal is to match people with similar interests. For example, one woman who enjoys painting and music has asked to have a student interested in these areas visit her. The program will consist of social visits or task-oriented duties. Some Seniors have expressed interest in having a student visit only on a social level, while others would like to have yard work or light housework done.

Dr. Winn Merrill will be our co-ordinator. On an initial visit, he will accompany the high school student to introduce both parties and be there to answer any questions. He will also be the person you contact in the event of any problems.

The high school students appear quite eager to make a go of the program. If you are interested in this project, please call Sue Connolly, 383-9112 on Wednesdays, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., or at 848-7813 any other time.

Costly offense errors cause defeat

Fueled by an 18-point second quarter, Bourne spoiled Cohasset's homecoming football game, rolling to a 38-8, non-league victory last Sunday.

"We played good defense in sports, but we made costly errors on offense," said Cohasset coach Phil Pisano.

Curt Ludlow scored from five yards out in the fourth quarter, enabling Cohasset (1-5 overall, 1-3 in the South Shore Smalls Division) to avert the shutout.

For Bourne, Derek Civilinski threw three first-half touchdown passes, including 25- and 55-yarders to Reggie Ford. Derek Johnston also scored twice for Bourne, who picked up their first victory of the season.

The game also featured the return of CHS senior quarterback Noah Hill, who missed the first five games of the season with a knee injury.

Cohasset will now prepare for Hanover (1-5) this week. The game will start at 1:30 on Cohasset's Milliken Field.

BOYS' SOCCER

Jim Reidy scored three goals and assisted on two others, and Linc Marsac scored two more for the Cohasset High School boys' soccer team, powering the Skippers to a 9-0, lopsided South Shore League victory over Hull October 16.

Jason Cameron, Travis Coley, Josh Stevenson and Brian Schultz also scored for Cohasset (10-2).

Netminder Joel Reidy stopped four shots for Cohasset.

Bill Modestino

Historical Society meeting

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its 1989 Annual Meeting at Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House Thursday, Nov. 9.

The catered dinner and special program will highlight the evening. Dinner will be preceeded by a social hour at 6 p.m. The catered meal follows at 6:45 p.m., with a short annual meeting for reports and election of officers and directors.

The special program, following at about 8 p.m. is titled "A Hit Parade of Historic Homes."

Society Curator, David Wadsworth, who did the principal research for the Commonwealth's Historical Commission survey, will share some information about many historical houses and buildings in Cohasset.

A special invitation is being sent to the present residents of these houses to join in the presentation.

Reservations for the Society's annual dinner meeting and special program are $12 per person.

Checks should be sent to Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset MA 02025, or may be dropped off in the mail recepticle at the Lothrop House on Summer Street.

Adult art center workshops

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset is sponsoring several workshops in November.

Watercolor, Monotype and Collage Workshop taught by Judy Hochberg will meet Tuesday, Nov. 14 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. By painting on acetate and mixing watercolor paints with waterbased inks, students can bring the spontaneity of "en plein air" work to printmaking.

Portrait Basics Workshop taught by Harriet Zabusky-Zand, will meet for three days. Wednesday through Friday, Nov. 15 to 17 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Students will learn basic portrait techniques and composition in this hands-on workshop for beginning portrait artists.

Cherokee Style Storage Basket taught by Dianne Stanton will meet Friday, Nov. 3 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Students will each complete a large and colorful basket made of dyed and natural flat reed with a square "filled" base, patterned sides and a sturdy round rim.

Fabric Painting and Decorating Workshop taught by Ann Murphy will meet for two Thursdays, Nov. 9 and 16 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Using simple techniques, students will learn to use fabric painting, stenciling, applique and application of stones, sequins, studs and other trim to transform plain T-shirts, sweatshirts and jerseys into original boutique creations.

Silk Painting taught by Joan Hausrath, will meet Tuesday and Thursday, Nov. 14 to 16 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Paint a scarf to wear or give as a gift for the holidays using shimmery washes and pattern effects.

Papermaking taught by Brenton Welsh will meet Saturday, Nov. 18 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Registration is required for all courses and workshops. To register, or for more information, call the South Shore Art Center weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 617-383-9548.

Rafferty's sponsors roadrace

Rafferty's Pub 6th Annual 5-mile roadrace will be held on Nov. 12 at noon. The race features a challenging out and back course.

Awards will be given to the first male and female junior (18 and under), first three male and female open (18-39), first three male and female masters (40-49), first three male and female seniors (50-59), first male and female grand seniors (60+).

T-shirts to the first 150 entrants. Beer and chile will be available to the runners. Pre-registration fee is $6.00 and $7.00 on race day.,

Rafferty's Pub is located at Marshfield Shopping Center (Route 139). Take exit 12 off Route 3 to Marshfield Plaza.

Pick up an entry blank at Rafferty's Pub or send a self addressed stamped envelope to Rafferty's Road Race, P.O. Box 1343, Marshfield, MA. 02050

Acting workshop for children

The Cohasset Dramatic Club and the Cohasset Recreation Department will be co-sponsoring an acting workshop for children in grades 1 through 12 Saturday mornings.

It will be taught by John Macero. He has a degree in theater performance from Boston University and fifteen years of acting and directing experience. Macero is currently the drama teacher at Everett High School and a member of the Saugus School Committee.

The workshop will run from November 18 through the end of April and will culminate in a special performance for all of the children's "fans." The cost will be $20 per month with a one-time registration fee of $5.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791.

Beechwood Congregational

Our pastor Steve Hall and his wife Margie continue to recover from their car accident in England. Steve stood up for the first time the other day which indicates his physical therapy is well underway.

Sunday, Oct. 29, our Pastor Emeritus, the Rev. Robert L. Campbell, will be our pastor helping lead our church in Reverend Hall's absence. Service and Sunday School at 10 a.m.

Church members are encouraged to contact Cheryl Kristiansen if they can help with our annual antique show (383-0070).

Our annual neighborhood Halloween get-together will meet at the church Tuesday, Oct. 31 at 5:30 p.m. We will have some treats and a picture-taking session before the kids go out trick or treating.

Religious students honored

Congregation Sha'aray Shalom will have a Consecration ceremony honoring all new religious school students, during the Friday night Family Service Oct. 27, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Thirty-nine students, including 25 kindergarteners, will receive a miniature Torah, a decorative certificate and a private blessing from Rabbi Stephen Karol.

The kindergarten teachers, Mary Karol and Barbara Stoller will welcome their students.

Sunday, Oct. 29, at 11:15 a.m., Rabbi Stephen Karol will be meeting with parents whose children will become Bar/Bat Mitzvah in 1990.

He will be presenting information and answering questions regarding tutoring, involvement in services, catering, use of the Temple, Bar/Bat Mitzvah as part of the total experience of Jewish education, and participation in the Soviet Jewry twinning program.

For further information or questions regarding these events, call the temple at 749-8103.

Evensong on Oct. 29

A service of Evensong with the combined choirs of St. Stephen's Church and St. John's Church of Duxbury, will be held Sunday, Oct. 29 at 6 p.m. at St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Avenue in Cohasset.

An organ recital by Daryl Bichel will precede the worship. Bichel is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music and will perform the Durufle Prelude and Fugue on the name Alain, and the Mendelssohn Sonata No. 1.

The service of Evensong will feature William Matthias' "Let the People Praise Thee" written for the royal wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana.

Evensong is a traditional offering of prayer for the Church and the World, which incorporates the beauty of music and the participation of the congregation.

A second Evensong will be held Sunday, Nov. 12 at 6 p.m. in Duxbury. All are invited to the Evensong at St. Stephen's in Cohasset on October 29 and later in Duxbury.

If you would like more information, call St.Stephen's Church, 383-1083.

Missionaries to be honored

The family worship hour Sunday, Oct. 29 at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, in Hingham, will honor Wade Garrison, 19, son of Dan and Nancy Garrison of Berkley Circle in Hingham.

Wade has been called by the Church to serve a mission and is being sent to the Canary Islands. As a missionary Elder Garrison will devote the next two years to teaching the gospel and introducing the programs of the Lord's church.

Members of the Garrison family will speak of the Church's great missionary program where young men and young women interrupt their daily lives to leave home and friends in service to the Savior. They do so at their own expense, then return later to resume their education. Wade has been a student at Ricks College, Idaho.

The morning service will begin at 9 a.m. and is followed by Sunday School classes for all age groups.

Healing power workshop

Loretta LaRoche, a health educator and humorist, will conduct a workshop, "The Healing Power of Humor," Tuesday, Nov. 14, at 9:30 a.m. in Walton Rodgers Hall at St. Stephen's Church.

The program is open to the public. Reservations, on a first come – first serve basis, may be made by sending a check for $10 to the Social Service League, 16 Highland Ave., Cohasset, Ma 02025. Tickets may also be obtained from Social Service League members.

The workshop explores the role of humor as a tool for maintaining health and a sense of well-being. LaRoche says it will help individuals examine their humor potential, reduce stress, improve their immune systems and prevent hardening of the attitude.

Six years ago, LaRoche founded Wellness Associates, a Plymouth-based company that sponsors workshops by experts in various fields.

VILLAGE FAIR

Plans ate underway for our annual Village Fair. Thank you to all of you who volunteered to help in the past few weeks. Some notes for your information:

Bargain Bazaar—Please check the Beacon for the times when items will be accepted at St. Anthony's Rectory. If you have any questions or items to be donated, please call Debbie Anderson, 383-6345, or Sue Cameron, 383-1549.

Books for Village Fair—Books may be left at St. Anthony's Rectory, 129 So. Main St., on Mondays ONLY from 9 to 5 p.m. from now through Monday, Nov. 27. The Book Committee welcomes hardback and paperback books of almost all kinds, as well as record albums, video tapes and audio tapes. However, the Committee cannot accept out-of-date textbooks, Reader's Digest books or National Geographics, since there is no market for these. Smithsonian, Gourmet, Antiques magazines and the like are most welcome.

Bargain Bazaar—Our church's responsibility this year — NEEDS HELP!! From now until the fair, we need volunteers to accept and price items on Wednesday and Saturday mornings at St. Anthony's rectory. To offer your services, call the church office or Marsha Silvia (383-0500) with a time you would be willing to help out on this crucial task.

FOR AN IDEA OF HOW DIRTY YOUR ORIENTAL RUG IS, RUB THIS AND LOOK AT YOUR FINGER.
Oriental rugs are constantly picking up various types of soil. Some are greasy and some are gritty. But they all can eat away at your treasured possession.
For your Oriental rug to retain its beauty and value, it should be cleaned at least once every three to five years.
At Grillo Oriental Rug Cleaning, we carefully examine each rug, then give it the most suitable treatment. Sometimes that means gentle machine-washing, other times it means our 'Art-Safe' hand-washing. And our exclusive equipment and methodology enable us to remove the deep-set grit that others miss.
Furthermore, unlike harsh commercial cleaning, our individualized, museum-quality care is always safe, always effective.
For more information, or to have your rug picked up, call (617) 871-6500. Outside this area code, call 1-800-649-7707.

PLEDGES TO BE GATHERED

Pledge cards have been handed out or mailed out to everyone in the parish. If you have not received one, please call the office and you will be given one. What is a pledge? It is what we plan to give financially to St. Stephen's in the next year. It is a recognition that all we have is a gift from God. It is a thanksgiving and a response to that wonderful awareness. A yardstick to measure our giving is the tithe or giving back 10 percent of what we have received. Your significant pledge allows God's work at St. Stephen's, and dreams for our future together, to become a reality. Please return your pledge to the parish office or place it in the collection plate by Sunday, October 29.

STAINED GLASS WINDOW DEDICATION

A generous anonymous gift has allowed us to renovate the stained glass window by the pulpit. We will dedicate this glorious window Sunday, Oct. 29. The Gospel lesson for that day is the parable of the Pharisee and the tax gatherer, which is depicted in the window.

RETREAT TO REVIEW EVENING COFFEES

The Vestry of St. Stephen's will spend Friday and Saturday, October 27 and 28, reviewing the comments and vision generated by the "Evening Coffees" stewardship program this year. Your thoughts and suggestions will become part of our goal setting process and long-range planning. Thank you for your participation.

MORE VOLUNTEERS WELCOME

Habitat for Humanity is busy renovating a house in Marshfield for a family of seven. St. Stephen's will be helping out at the house on Saturday, Nov. 4. If you are a skilled, semi-skilled, or unskilled man or woman and would like to help with this project, please call Kitty Whitley at 383-6312.

PLANS FOR VILLAGE FAIR

The Village Fair will be held Saturday, Dec. 2, and plans are underway to make it a day of fun and fellowship. We need volunteers to partake in the Plant Table; to help with Children's Activities such as pony rides and organizing craft-making and cookie-decorating for children on that day; and volunteers for the Candy Table, to make or supply candy and to staff the table when it is sold. These are volunteer activities tht are fun and can be done without a lot of pressure in the coming month and a half. If you would like to help in any of these ways, please call Nancy Swatek at 383-9992. We are all looking forward to a great day on the 2nd!

First Parish services

Rev. Edward T. Atkinson, Minister,
Parish House (617)383-1100,
23 North Main Street.

MARRIED AT THE MEETING HOUSE on Oct. 14 were Stephen Edward Bonvie and Patricia Jean Carvallo.

WOMEN'S BOOK GROUP

The Women's Book Group will meet on October 24 at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Kay Meacham, 47 Black Rock Rd., to discuss the book The Life and Loves of a She Devil, by Fay Weldon. All are welcome to join!

FALL CIRCLE DINNER

Participants will be divided into Circles of 8-10 persons, sharing the tasks of the meal among them: host household, hors d'oeuvres,casserole, salad, and dessert. Make your reservations now by calling the church office (383-1100) or Shelley Weir (383-1590) or sign the list at the Meeting House on Sunday.

NICK PAGE SONG FEST

Join us in something new !! First Parish in Cohasset and the Old Ship Church in Hingham will be joining voices to co-sponsor a very special afternoon of singing on Saturday Nov. 4, from 3:30 to 6 p.m., at the Old Ship Parish House, 107 Main St., Hingham.

Obituary

Helen M. Jason

Funeral services were held Wednesday, Oct. 25 at the Second Congregational Church for Helen (McGaw) Jason, 83. Mrs. Jason died Sunday, Oct. 22 at South Shore Hospital. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mrs. Jason was born and raised in Abington and moved to Cohasset several years ago.

She was a former deaconess of the Second Congregational Church, and was past president of the Cohasset Women's Club.

A former member of the Friends of the South Shore Hospital, she was a volunteer there for many years. Mrs. Jason was also a volunteer for the Cohasset Fish organization.

Past president of the Harborview Tenants Association, she was past treasurer and chaplain of the Cohasset 60 Plus Club, and a former matron of the Scituate Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star.

Wife of the late Edward R. Jason, she leaves a daughter, Jane F. Richter of Manchester, Conn.; a son-in-law, Atty. Donald P. Richter of Manchester, Conn.; a grandson, Christopher P. Richter of Rochester, Minn.; a granddaughter, Cynthia L. Eisenman of Trumbull, Conn.; and several nieces, nephews and cousins.

Memorial donations may be made to charity.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home in Cohasset.

Workshops set for community center

Upcoming workshops at the Cohasset Community Center will offer a variety of learning experiences with a diversity of appeal:

HABITS, NOT DIETS: Wednesday, November 8, from 7 to 9 p.m.

Pat Messing, a licensed nutritionist, discusses dieting myths and more effective strategies for dieters. Learn how to eat more, enjoy exercise, lose weight, and steer clear of the self-defeating dieters' syndrome. Information call Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088.

FINANCIAL PLANNING FOR NEW PARENTS: Thursday, Nov. 9 and 16, from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Members of the class of 2010 will need $130,000 for a college degree. Plan your child's education funding now. Sandra Manzella, a certified financial planner, will explore education funding alternatives and discuss effective tax planning strategies. Information call Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088.

FINANCIAL SURVIVAL FOR INDEPENDENT BUSINESSMEN: Saturday, Nov. 18, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

If you are trying to grow your business or run it efficiently, this day-long seminar will cover all major financial issues confronting small businessmen. Dr. Michael McNamara and a panel of experts discuss Legal Issues, Financing Issues, Tax and Accounting Issues, Retirement Planning, and Insurance Considerations. Information call Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088.

FABRIC PAINTING AND DECORATING: Friday, Nov. 3, from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

Using simple techniques with no sewing required, students will learn to use fabric painting, stenciling, applique and application of stones, sequins, studs and trim. Information call Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088.

VICTORIAN CHRISTMAS TREE AND WREATH-MAKING: Thursday, Nov. 16, from 7 to 10 p.m., and Friday, Nov. 17, from 9 a.m. to noon.

Create beautiful Victorian Christmas fantasies for gift-giving or home decoration. Begin with a realistic-looking 24" tree or 16" diameter wreath and add moss, baby's breath, silk rosebuds, ribbons, lace and tiny lights. All materials are provided. Information call Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088.

STRESS MANAGEMENT: Wednesday, Nov. 15, from 8 to 9 p.m.

Strategies for coping with stress are taught by a counselling psychologist, Dr. Helene Lieb. Information call Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088.

Advisors want override vote before meeting . . .

employee salary increases at a six percent level will eat about $165,000 of that, with an additional $250,000 needed for school employee salary hikes.

"So right off the bat it looks like we'll be $90,000 in the hole," she explained. In addition, it is projected that the town's health insurance may increase by $120,000. "We all agree we're at the edge of the precipice again - how should we proceed from here?"

Assuming that an override will be necessary next year, the advisory committee unanimously supported the idea of having an override election prior to the annual town meeting.

"I just want to be on record of never wanting to go through what we went through last year. It was the most futile experience I have ever gone through," committee member Christine Bassett said.

This past year, town meeting approved appropriations for all articles requiring an override, but voters subsequently defeated them at the election. The annual town meeting was continued to a second session where voters again approved all budget items, but the majority of override articles was again defeated at a second election. The budget imbalance continued until a special town meeting was held earlier this month.

Scheduling the override election before the town meeting would allow voters to decide on an override first, then appropriate the money for the specific item at town meeting.

The town elections and the override ballot questions will appear on the same ballot, according to Goedecke.

The advisory committee members endorsed the concept, saying it was a natural combination. "The override and whether the candidates are pro or con is going to be a major question," according to Bassett.

The committee also proposed that town department heads prepare two proposed budgets next year. One budget will be zero-based level-funded, including all expected salary increases. The second budget will include a supplementary list of prioritized items which may require an override appropriation.

Chairman Goedecke questioned whether town departments realize when budget cuts are made next year, they may not be made on an equitable percentage basis. "Decisions will be based on their priority to the town," she said, noting that it is ultimately the advisory committee's responsibility to prioritize one department's needs against another's.

"It is agreed that it is no longer possible to cut evenly across the board," she added.

Member William Lean noted that certain budget items will be cut in favor of others as it is deemed necessary by the advisory committee. "It may come down to elimination because we think other things are more important. It's a value judgement," he said.

They agreed that if town departments want to keep their budgets intact, it may mean a choice between one budget item or an employee.

"It hasn't sunk into people's heads. Don't complain about only getting six percent (salary increase). We may have to be happy that we can provide the jobs. The mentality has to change.

"It's a life raft mentality," Kasperwicz said.

Goedecke agreed, saying, "The town unions do not seem to come grips with the idea that if we push for higher salaries, there will be fewer salaries."

The commitee also discussed the possibility of including more capital budget items within the town's operating budget. The success rate has not been high for capital budget items, such as the police and fire station repairs, which must be approved by town meeting and then by the override ballot.

"At what point do the people running this town feel that a capital item must be funded with or without an override?" Goedecke asked. "And if they can identify those expenditures, are they willing to cover them within their operating budget if an override fails?"

Goedecke pointed to the failure of the police and fire station repairs, saying "it's not the type of 'sexy' item that will ever pass an override.

"Now it's a political nightmare that may never happen, and repairs at that level can't be covered from an operating budget."

The committee decided that a consensus of town officials should be formed to decide how to deal with future capital budget projects. If the items cannot be absorbed into the operating budget, then the committee should be aware of what items will require an override vote next year.

A meeting between the advisory committee and town department heads to discuss these budget matters will be held November 1.

Contamination found in practice playing field

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

An unknown source of contamination has forced the practice field behind Cohasset High School to be declared off-limits.

For the past several weeks, parents have complained to school and town officials about the smell from the uniforms worn by high school athletes during practice.

They notified the athletic director and the town's health agent about the problem. After water samples were taken from the standing puddles on the field, Athletic Director Clark Chatterton ordered the field off-limits to the students.

Health Agent Joseph Godzik said the tests taken October 3 indicate fecal coloform counts as high as 101,000 parts per million in one area of the field. To put that into perspective, Dr. Godzik explained, a beach would be closed to swimming when the fecal coloform count reaches 200 parts per million.

The continuing problem, he said, is that the source of the contamination is unknown. It could possibly be from residential s eptic systems, although Dr. Godzik said that is doubtful since the nearest homes are not in the vacinity of this particular field.

There is the possibility that the contamination could be caused by droppings from seagulls which frequently gather on the fields. Soil tests were conducted this week, which will help to locate the source. Those results should be prepared sometime next week, he noted.

If it is found that seagulls are contaminating the field, there are some successful procedures to rid the area of the birds. A high-frequency noise

Milliken groups to clear out field

by Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The Milliken/Lillard Field Study Committee wants to clear out the dead wood this winter. Committee members hope that by clearing the underbrush from the field townspeople can see how much space is available for kids to play-- safely-- on and will give the project a green light.

Preliminary engineering plans drafted by Bruce W. Fuller and Associates show 3 new fields in addition to the existing football/ baseball and soccer fields and track.

"The criteria I gave was as much space as possible," said committee chairman Wayne Sawchuk. The new fields are flexible enough to be used for a wide variety of sports, including football, soccer, lacrosse, and girls' field hockey.

The engineer kept in mind the lessons learned from the heavy rains experienced recently.

"The field has been designed so when we have a heavy rain, it dries out instantly," said Sawchuk. The rain water will drain off into a holding pond that will feed an automatic sprinkler system in

The students of the high school alternative school want residents to get into the recycling act. The students recently created signs to encourage residents to participate in the town's mandatory recycling program. Teacher Jack Buckley initiated the sign-making project, with his students, Mikki Finegan, Jason DuMoulin, Jon MacIeo and Dan Curtin.

Tax bills should be out next week with new $9.60 rate

Now that the state has approved Cohasset's $9.60 tax rate, the bills should be in the mail by the beginning of next week.

That rate reflects a 65 percent reduction from last year's rate of $14.63 per $1,000 of valuation. However, with the new property valuations, the average Cohasset homeowner can expect to pay about five percent more in real estate taxes this year, according to the assessors.

The value of an average home in Cohasset is $300,000. That means the average homeowner will pay about $2,880 per year in taxes, according to assessor James Lagrotteria.

He noted that the tax rate of $9.60 represents a true tax rate of $9.28 plus an additional 32 cents caused by the approval of a $203,800 Proposition 2 1/2 override last June.

Tax payments will be due by the first of December, according to Treasurer-Collector Elizabeth Ripley. She expects the bills will be mailed to Cohasset's 2,800 property owners by the beginning of next week.

The tax bills are late this year because of a combination of factors, Lagrotteria explained. First, the state "cherry sheet" revenues were delayed until August because of the continuing confusion about the state's fiscal situation.

The assessors' calculations could not be completed without knowing what the state would be giving back to the town and how it would affect Cohasset's operating budget, he said. When the Residents urged to start recycling

The old town dump ain't what it used to be.

The new $550,000 transfer station has been constructed and will be operational within a matter of days. Recycling is now mandatory and will co-exist alongside the transfer station. Hauling trash to the landfill will soon cost residents $52 each year.

Residents can no longer back into the Cedar Street dump, dispose of their trash in one huge lump, and expect to drive away.

The days of the town dump are drawing to a close. Technology has arrived in Cohasset, and residents are facing some serious lifestyle changes.

This message has not been lost on the students of Cohasset. And members of the high school's alternative school have helped to spread the word.

Jack Buckley, head of the alternative school, is encouraging his students "to take the lead" in helping to save the environment. The students are just beginning their environmental studies, but Buckley thought their new-found knowledge could have a practical application.

He received a call from board of health member and recycling enthusiast Sharon Becker. She has provided the push this town needed to begin a serious recycling effort. Becker suggested that students from Buckley's class could help advertise the landfill recycling center by making much-needed signs for the various receptacles.

"Six of the students expressed an interest in the project, so we went to the landfill and first took a look at the center itself," Buckley explained. "They sketched out some designs and decided to keep it simple."

The signs, which are now in place at the landfill's recycling center, direct residents to the proper receptacles for paper, glass, plastics, aluminum, metals, yard waste, tires, and returnable cans and bottles.

Recently, the alternative school students returned to the landfill with their finished signs. Becker was impressed with the craftsmanship, and

Chamber of Commerce news

A number of worthy causes were aided by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce Auction held Oct. 21, at the Community Center.

Bill Higgins of Harbor Mechanical Contractors, donated a $400 garbage disposal and installation package to be auctioned for the benefit of the Santa Cruz, CA Chamber of Commerce. This money will be used to help businesses hurt by the earthquake. Also benefitting from the auction were the Community Center itself, which received all of the excess hot dogs, chips and cookies to be used for their "Birthday Party;" and the Cohasset Schools' "Apples for Students" drive. The Chamber offered free door prize chances to anyone bringing a pink Stop & Shop receipt with them. The response was overwhelming — $1799.99 in receipts were donated for the PSO computer drive. The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce would like to thank all who donated to this auction, and everyone who joined us to bid on them. Special thanks go to the Stop & Shop for donating all of the food, condiments and paper products for the evening.

Rep. Flynn to speak

Rep. William J. Flynn, Jr., a candidate for the state senate, will be the guest speaker at the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee monthly meeting Wednesday, Nov. 1, at the Lothrop House, Summer Street in Cohasset. Rep. Flynn is running for the seat vacated by Sen. William Golden.

Election change proposed

Selectman Burt Pratt has proposed a change in the way the board of selectmen is elected.

Pratt, who has announced his intention to run for re-election this spring, emphasized that any change will not affect his candidacy since it can be put into effect only after a vote of town meeting.

The current procedure calls for two members to be elected one year, two members the second year and one member the following year. In effect, Pratt said, incumbents who run for re-election are forced to campaign against themselves.

Pratt is proposing that each seat on the board be challenged on a two-year,two-year, one-year staggered basis. "That way," he said, "each seat stands on its own."

The selectmen chairman has discussed the proposal with other members of the board. Selectman Rocco Laugelle noted that during his 11 years on the board he has served with 11 different members, although many of those incumbents resigned or did not run for re-election.

"An incumbent should be challenged or not on his own record," Pratt said. "This has been a concern to me. During the last four or five years, there has been a turnover every two years on this board. That's not stable. I have talked to a number of citizens and some are concerned that there should be a change.

"There is a lack of continuity. People get in there and make a contribution and then, bam, they're gone."

Selectman Diana Kornet said the current process which awards a seat on the board to the top vote-getters helps avoid confrontational situations which could arise if opponents are running against each other for specific seats.

And Selectman Ned Tebbetts noted that, using Pratt's proposal, if two seats are up for election and there are three candidates for each, it is conceivable that the person with the fourth highest tally could still win a position on the board.

Pratt said he intends to bring the proposal before the annual town meeting in April.

MBTA extends boat service

The South Shore commuter boat service will continue for at least three years through June 1992.

Contract extensions were approved with Boston Harbor Commuter Service (BHCS) for $3.3 million and with Massachusetts Bay Lines (MBL) for $4.65 million. More than 2500 passengers use the service daily, with boats operating every 15 minutes during peak commuting periods.

Following public hearings held in early September, the MBTA announced that fares will increase Nov. 4. Fares will rise from $3 to $4 for a one-way trip, with a $6 discount offered for a 10-ride ticket.

The new monthly commuter boat pass will be sold for the first time at the end of December and cost $136 per month. It will be good for unlimited travel on all T services — boats, trains, streetcars, and buses. The MBTA will also build a 2000 space parking lot at the Hingham site.

For additional information on routes and schedules, call the MBTA Customer Service Center at 722-3200.

Milliken committee gets set to clear land . . .

drier weather.

The committee wants to get the work underway as soon as possible.

"We need to give everybody in town an idea of what is in there and that something is happening," said committee member Joseph Connolly. He urged the committee to put up a sign on the field that would show townspeople what was planned for the area.

There are also financial benefits to be drawn from clearing the land.

Sawchuk told committee members that he had to turn down an offer of clean fill recently.

"You can't dump fill and then bulldoze it over brush," he said.

Clearing the brush needs to be done in the winter because the undergrowth is too heavy during the growing season.

"It's a jungle in there," said Sawchuk.

Clearing the land has an estimated price tag of $5,000 to $10,000 dollars to flush cut the field and get rid of the wood. There would be an additional cost to remove the tree stumps.

Money is a big problem for the committee.

The town has voted for the project on three separate occasions, but the selectmen are chary of allowing the committee to exercise the borrowing authority granted at town meeting.

Executive secretary Gregory Doyen sent the committee a letter imposing a variety of restrictions on the project. He wants them to get input on the project from the selectmen, school department, and tree and park superintendent. Doyen wrote that close cooperation was necessary ". . . since this project is expected to be done with no expenditure of Town funds . . ."

Committee members think it is unlikely that they could raise the $282,000 budget through private donations.

"There's no way in my mind we could raise $140,000," said Connolly. He suggested corporate sponsorship might be the only way to go.

Stephen Endris added, "Our source of funds may have to go to user fees." That sparked a discussion of the limitations on the amount that can be charged for user fees under Mass. law and the relative unpopularity of user fees with residents.

Ultimately, raising the money to start the project will fall to a new group that will be known as "Friends of Milliken Field" or "Friends of Cohasset Recreation". The study committee formally established the new group -- now all they need are members.

Cohasset residents who are interested in raising funds to build the new fields can get on board by contacting the study committee through John Worley, town recreation director.

There is also a vacancy to be filled on the Milliken/Lillard Field Study Committee.

The all-male committee said they hoped some women would express an interest in working on the project.

Contamination in playing field . . .

emitter is one such method, Dr. Godzik explained.

In the meantime, the schools' eight athletic teams have been juggled around the remaining playing fields - Milliken Field and the field hockey field in front of the school - an adequate playing surface itself.

Twice last week the junior high school had games on Milliken Field which forced four practicing varsity and junior varsity teams onto the remaining field.

According to Chatterton, the varsity soccer team was practicing on the front field with the girls' field hockey team.

"This is a bad situation," the athletic director said.

"We're the laughing stock of the entire league."

During a varsity girls' soccer game last week, the varsity football team came out to practice on Milliken Field during halftime.

At least twice a week for the past couple of weeks, 200 kids have been jammed into Milliken Field for practices.

"It's an absolute farce," Chatterton said. "You should have seen it out there - it looked like Kenmore Square after a Red Sox game."

Earlier this month, tests at Milliken Field indicated high contamination and it was temporarily shutdown. The counts weren't nearly as high as on the practice field, Dr. Godzik said, and the field was eventually reopened.

The health agent is planning to conduct more tests after Tuesday night's rainstorm to see if the coloform counts are high in the standing water. The field behind the high school, he noted, is almost saucer-shaped, with the middle portion at the lowest level. That's where the rainwater tends to gather and become stagnant.

The situation, according to Chatterton, might be easing because field hockey and girls' soccer is over for the fall season.

"But we've got the boys' soccer tourney so we'll wait to schedule the junior high school games on Thursday and Friday. They won't be able to play if the tournament is still going on the end of the week. If we have tournament, the varsity football team won't be able to practice for Saturday's game.

"I'm telling you, the fields in this town are an absolute farce," he said.

College handbook available

Prospective and current college students can find out how and when to apply for state, federal, and college-supported financial aid programs in the new 1989-90 Handbook on College Admissions and Financial Aid in Massachusetts, published by the Association of Independent Colleges and Universities in Massachusetts (AICUM).

The 24-page AICUM handbook tells prospective and current students and their families how to find out if they are eligible to receive financial aid, where to get the application forms they will need, when to apply, and where to get more information. The handbook is free.

The handbook also contains information about the various sources of money for financial aid, including the Massachusetts State Scholarship Program. The scholarship program is now funded at $53 million.

The program provides grants to needy Massachusetts undergraduate students. Students attending independent colleges and universities may receive grants from $800 to $3,800, depending on their financial need. Funds for all of the 11 State student aid programs now total $80 million.

Also included in the handbook are current enrollments, tuitions, application requirements, and application deadlines for 58 independent colleges and universities in Massachusetts.

The Handbook on College Admissions and Financial Aid is available free by calling or writing: AICUM, Suite 1224, 11 Beacon Street, Boston, 02108-3093.

Selectmen to decide on liquor license transfer

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Once again, the topic of liquor licenses dominated the conversation at Monday night's selectmen's meeting.

With a roomful of neighbors and friends, Peter Logan, owner of Cohasset Liquors, asked selectmen to approve the transfer of his liquor license to a new business which will be located in the now-vacant Stop and Shop store.

Ten people voiced their support for the license transfer to Curtis Liqours Inc., which plans to operate a 13,500 square foot liquor store within the Tedeschi Plaza on Rte. 3A. Only one person, a local liquor store merchant, offered his opposition to the proposal.

Selectmen have 30 days to make a decision on the matter.

The subject seldom strayed from the size of the proposed liquor store. Logan's business now occupies about 3,000 square feet of space on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Curtis Liquors, Inc., the business that plans to operate in the vacant Stop and Shop store, will be about four times that size. a matter that concerned some selectmen.

"We have two other small (liquor store) merchants in town," Selectman Rocco Laugelle noted. "You're buying volume that these guys can't compete with."

Atty. Eugene Blanchard, representing Curtis Liquors Inc., said the space within the former supermarket was larger than they needed, but that was the only configuration they were offered by Tedeschi Realty Corp., owners of the plaza.

The former Stop and Shop store has been vacant for nearly two years. Tedeschi Realty Corp. wants to locate the liquor store, a CVS store, and a larger Noble Camera Shop, within the former supermarket area. Cohasset Jewelers will remain at the plaza along with Woolworth's.

In the past several months, several businesses along Rte. 3A have struggled to survive and many have failed, including Harborlight Boat Sales. Cohasset Meat and Produce, located within Cushing Plaza, just recently filed for bankruptcy, as did its predessor, Bildner's and Sons.

Thirty percent of the Curtis liquor store will be used for storage and seventy percent will be used as the sales area, Blanchard explained. The largest portion of the sales will be in wines, with the remaining percentage divided among imported and domestic waters, beers, crackers, glasses and accessories.

The store intends to employ three fulltime and 20 parttime positions.

Richard Curtis Jr., the proposed owner and manager of the store, explained that in towns where he currently owns stores, in Weymouth and in Whitman, smaller stores have survived despite the larger volume of his stores. "They are diametrically opposed. They each fill a different nitch in the community," he said.

"We will continue to serve town residents without the contraints of (Logan's) building and parking," he continued. "We would like to continue the family touch the Logans brought to Cohasset. I have been taught that a business must be an asset to the town where it is located."

His father, Richard Curtis Sr., owner of several small convenience stores in the South Shore, wanted to downplay the proposed size of the store. "Everyone in Cohasset does not buy their liquor in Cohasset. An increased volume will not bother the other merchants," he said.

"The accurate impression we want to leave is that this will be an upscale operation. It is not going to be a wall-to-wall cut-rate discount liquor store," Blanchard added.

"This is not going to be a discount store?" Laugelle questioned.

The attorney noted that a discount store could mean a place where the product is cheaper, but the store "has bumpy floors and no decor." Through larger volume, Curtis Liquors Inc. will pass the savings onto the customer. But, he emphasized, it will be a high-quality business.

Blanchard also noted that extensive renovations will be made to the interior and exterior of the former supermarket.

Logan told selectmen he wanted to leave the stress of operating a small business. He knew Curtis as a reputable family businessman in the area, someone who knew the business but also had the ability to continue a family operation.

"Rick is a gentleman who knows the industry well and will provide my customers with a good product and selection. He was the best I know to replace myself," Logan said. The owner of Cohasset Liquors presented selectmen with a petition signed by 375 registered voters expressing their support of the license transfer.

Several residents, including many neighbors, attended the Monday night meeting and expressed their support for the license transfer.

Nancy Garrison of King Street said she was concerned with the fagility of the various shopping centers along Rte. 3A. "I feel as a citizens and neighbor that the rejuvenation of the area is critical to Cohasset and the area. Whatever is proposed here is a step in the right direction for Chief Justice Cushing Highway."

Dorothy Mantin of Ledgewood Drive, said although she will miss Cohasset Liquors, she believes the revitalization of Tedeschi Plaza will be good for the neighborhood. "It's an excellent solution to a 'missing tooth' on Rte. 3A," she told selectmen.

Brian Noble, manager of the camera shop at Tedeschi Plaza, said the renovation plans "are gorgeous." He also noted that the Curtis' have a reputation built on integrity, similar to the way the Logan family has done business for many years in Cohasset.

Regarding the small versus big business argument, Noble said he has maintained a successful small business for many years, despite competition from larger corporations in the area. "It makes me more competitive and aggressive," he told selectmen.

The only resident to voice opposition to the proposal was Tom Churchill, owner of Harbor Liquors on Elm Street. "There is now the potential for two liquor stores on rte 3A," Churchill said, referring to the liquor license request for a proposed store at Cohasset Plaza. "Are you telling business that they have got to get to Rte. 3A if they are going to make it as a businessman in Cohasset?" he asked.

Selectman have until November 12 to make their decision.

Rep. Flynn sets his sights on the senate

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Rep. William Flynn, Jr. took the the abortion and gay rights issues head on during a speech to supporters in which he announced his candidacy for the state Senate.

Flynn, who has represented the fifth district made up of the towns of Norwell and Hanover for 15 years, officially threw his hat into the ring for the state Senate seat, being vacated by William B. Golden, last week, at LaRossa's Function Hall in Weymouth. About 200 invited guests attended.

Several members of the audience attended solely to hear Flynn's position on abortion. Rep. Robert Ambler (D-Weymouth) who is also running for Golden's seat, switched his stance on abortion last summer. Ambler now says he supports a woman's right to choose.

EMOTIONAL ISSUE

"The abortion issue is so emotional, so complicated, so personal," Flynn told the audience. "The magnitude will be as far reaching as the civil rights movement.

"Until all of us as reasonably thinking people go to the discussion table and think this issue through, the unborn child is going to lose," he said.

Flynn explained that although he respects a woman's right to choose, the rights of the unborn child have to be reconciled.

Flynn said he was "not waffling" on the abortion question and that he was proud of his pro-life voting record in the state house.

"The focus of the issue should be abortion on demand," he said. Flynn cited abortions undergone because a woman doesn't like the sex of a child as an example of abortion on demand. He said that abortions under circumstances like rape, incest or the life of the mother were "important considerations."

'PRO-LIFERS' SPEAK OUT

Two men in the audience, who said they were 'pro-life', asked Flynn to come out on one side or the other.

"Both sides (pro-life/pro-choice) say abortion is a bad answer — but a worse answer is abortion on demand," said Flynn. Flynn said he would not work to overturn Roe vs. Wade (the Supreme Court decision which legalized abortion in 1973) — and that the all-or-nothing approach is what has polarized the abortion issue.

After his speech, Flynn told the Mariner that as long as people are on one side or the other — no progress will be made on the issue.

"If we all say abortion is a bad solution — then in a civilized society can't we come together to work towards a common goal — reducing abortion as an option," Flynn said.

"When the nine greatest minds (referring the the US Supreme Court) are divided on the abortion question — that gives some sense of the magnitude of the question," Flynn explained.

NOT FANATICAL

Bob Berlo, a Quincy resident and member of Operation Rescue and Citizens for Life (two anti-abortion groups) said he doesn't consider himself "fanatical" but he is basing his support for any candidate solely on the abortion issue.

He said he was disappointed in Ambler's stance and would need time "to digest" what Flynn said on the issue.

Hanover resident Jerry Finnerty said Flynn's move would (to the state Senate) be a "loss to the constituents" of Hanover and Norwell — and that it was too bad some voters have "tunnel vision" referring to the abortion question.

GAY RIGHTS "PHONEY ISSUE"

Flynn said the state Gay Rights Bill is a "phoney issue."

"In terms of needing that law — it borders on absurdity," he said.

Flynn explained that by passing the bill, the legislators were "putting their stamp of approval on that (gay) conduct.

"That's sending the wrong signal," he said. "That's encouraging and expanding that kind of activity."

Flynn said, "I don't want to bother these people (gays) but putting the stamp of approval on that life style is just not the thing to do."

Flynn explained that only one other state — Wisconsin — has passed gay rights legislation. He said the Wisconsin law deals with employment discrimination only. The Massachusetts law deals with employment, housing, and insurance issues, he said.

Flynn also said the state legislature was wrong in supporting the health care bill, and wrong in voting for the 15 per cent tax increase.

ANSWER BACK

Flynn told the audience state legislators are making "decisions in your name," and the best way "to answer back is through the people you elect."

In addition to State Reps. Ambler and Flynn, Weymouth selectman Brian MacDonald has also announced his candidacy for the Senate seat. The seven-town district includes Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury.

Flynn said he was running for the state Senate because he felt he would have greater impact in the Senate as opposed to the House.

"The last place to stop the wrong things is the Mass. Senate," he said.

Flynn's current term in the House expires in December 1990.

Debate over reserve fund monies

The advisory committee wants selectmen to establish a policy which specifies how town departments should allocate their dwindling supply of overtime budget money.

The advisory committee members are town government's financial advisors. They recommend budgets to the town, and allocate the town's reserve fund for various municipal expenditures.

Recently, the advisory committee was asked to take $876 from the reserve account to fund employee overtime salaries for the Tree and Park Department. Although the committee approved the request, they wanted to make it clear to selectmen that continual requests for overtime payments will not be tolerated when selectmen originally cut those overtime accounts to accommodate a reduced operating budget.

"That's not what the reserve fund is for," advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke told selectmen Monday night. "You can't keep looking to overtime to bridge the gap between budgets and need. You can't rely on our reserve fund to cover the shortfall in the operating budget."

Goedecke explained that the advisory committee originally reduced the Tree and Park overtime account by $5,000. After the second general override failed, the advisors reversed themselves and recommended that the $5,000 be reinstated. Selectmen then decided to take it out again as a way of reducing the town's overall operating budget.

Since the beginning of this fiscal year, the Tree and Park Department has asked for $2,000 from the reserve fund to cover overtime costs incurred by two storms. Goedecke argued that overtime for the town department is not unforeseen. She disagreed with selectmen's decision to reduce the account, only to expect it to fund it with reserve fund money.

Selectmn Diana Kornet argued that overtime policies have been altered because of the reduced budget. Supt. Peter Laugelle was asked this summer to reduce his lawn mowing services and to avoid using overtime if the department is running behind on certain tasks.

"I wasn't in favor (of cutting the overtime) the first time,' Selectman Martha Gjesteby said. She favored giving people time off rather than providing them with overtime salaries. She also said there was a problem with the current per-hour system of paying the superintendent, noting that the superintendent must be paid time and a-half for any overtime work.

"At the time we made this cut we knew we were gambling," Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt told Goedecke. "If you say there is no more money for him (Supt. Peter Laugelle) in the reserve fund, I don't know where we'll get it."

He also said the advisory committee was wrong to think they reduced the overtime account in favor of keeping clerical help within that department. "The two are completely separate."

Goedecke noted the same procedure was used by selectmen regarding the wire department, where a substantial portion of that overtime account was reduced, only to be renewed by reserve fund transfers.

"We assumed you had a way of dealing with this. We"re saying, you can't fund this from the reserve fund."

Currently, there is about $125,000 remaining in the reserve fund - an amount which must last until the end of the fiscal year.

Selectman Kornet said the advisory committee has "put the board on notice. We will keep an eye on it so we will not run out by the end of the year."

The overtime budget cuts have devastated the Tree and Park Department, according to Supt. Peter Laugelle. He said he is simply following selectmen's orders to review each overtime expenditure and reserve fund transfer with the board. But he expressed anger for the reduction in his budget, and was puzzled as to the correct procedure.

"We're cutting overtime across this town," Selectman Kornet replied. "By cutting overtime we are encouraging everyone to look more carefully."

"We are cutting overtime very reluctantly," Selectman Pratt added. "If there is an emergnecy, we knew we'd be gambling.

"You do what has to be done to protect the public safety," he said. "And we'll find the money. It's the advisory committee raising this question."

But Goedecke disagreed with that directive. "You're saying do what's always been done and then come back to us. And we're saying that can't be done."

Stephen Wigmore, superintendent of the wire department, suggested that town department superintendents be given higher salaries with no overtime. "Compensate them more with no overtime and I think it will work out better," he stated.

Selectmen made no decision on the matter.

A fine mess

We sort of hoped, since they've been talking about it for years, that state officials would have ended the carnival approach to evacuating in case the Pilgrim Nuclear Plant in Plymouth melts down.

No such luck.

The 'big drill' -- a mock test of the emergency plan held recently -- went fine.

Except that there weren't enough telephones.

And the fax machine to the state wouldn't work, which is just as well, since they mistakenly ordered evacuation sirens activated.

And, since parents in a real emergency would presumably be interested in the whereabouts of their offspring, it was suggested that they trot down to the school (in the middle of a crisis, mind you) and look on the door, where a sign would no doubt be posted telling where their kids had been taken.

Nice. Very nice, indeed. Here we have a detailed, well-crafted, comprehensive plan of the quality we have all come to expect from the Commonwealth's experts.

Laurel and Hardy aren't dead. They're devising evacuation plans.

Nineteen months ago, when Act I of this farce was underway, the state decided that if disaster struck, thousands of residents in Marshfield, Duxbury and North Plymouth would jump in their cars and drive 40 miles to a DPW garage in Wellesley were they (and their children, and their dogs, and their cars) would be hosed off. Then, they'd all stand around, presumably, until the lethal cloud of radioactive dust moved on.

The experts concocted that silly scheme because there's plenty of free parking at the site, an answer that, to them, made perfect sense. There's nothing like the prospect of a massive emergency evacuation to send the Beacon Hill Brain Trust into fantasyland.

Plans have changed, but not for the better.

The new plans call for Plymouth schoolchildren to be bussed to Framingham -- or maybe Needham -- while Marshfield and Duxbury youngsters will be taken to ... well, someplace.

Why evacuate so far away? Is there no site closer to home that might minimize the trauma -- and the travel time?

Originally, state officials thought Hanover mall would make a good evacuation center. But Hanover and Norwell officials objected that radioactive contamination from cars and people would pollute the water supply.

The Wellesley site, the state reasoned, would have a "closed water" system to avoid the problem. Nobody mentioned that such a system could be installed in Hanover as well as Wellesley.

Officials say it will take 169 buses just to move the Plymouth students, never mind those from other towns. And not to mention the thousands of panic-stricken residents, suddenly forced to abandon their homes and businesses and head for God knows where. And this process our glorious leaders have entrusted to experts who don't have the foresight to install enough phones, and set off sirens erroneously.

The trip to Framingham, or wherever, should prove interesting, as anyone who has the slightest familiarity with Route 3 at rush hour could predict.

Imagine the inevitable traffic jams, fender-benders, break-downs and confusion.

What a grand opportunity for a State Police roadblock to make sure everyone's inspection sticker is current.

Autumn graveyard

This is not the scene I had wanted:

A colorless, hot afternoon shriveled to a creak and ripple;
Ghost wings blurred — off in the distance;
On a vanishing sand bank skeleton forms
bent, as if digging;
Leaves chirping near pallid paved stones.

Eyes staring —
Toward the horizon: (There is the faintest glint on tin that one can barely see it.)

The neighbor has veiled his skiff in marsh-gauze like an apparition.

Over this cove a salt scrim hangs so low that it mirrors its own solemn image.

Nearby, in a freshly shoveled mound,
a clump of golden lilies lifts its trumpets upward (as if for the last time) — shrieking suddenly, 'Sun! Sun!'

But, the sun has drifted off —
Into a new dimension.

Families gather to celebrate a year of METCO

by Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Peter Kovach takes a swing during the softball game held last Sunday after the annual METCO family dinner.

Cohasset ninth-grader Ray Jones sizzles in the role of teen heart throb Conrad Birdie. Jones brings his killer dimples to the stage when Cohasset Junior/Senior High School presents "Bye, Bye Birdie".

Jones has the talent to shine, but if it weren't for the Chittick family of South Main Street, Cohasset would be left in the dark.

Ray Jones is a METCO student from Dorchester. He is able to stay after school for play rehearsals because Ben Chittick and his parents have opened their home and hearts to him.

Jones gave METCO students, their families, and Cohasset host families a hint of what lies in wait for playgoers when he and his fellow cast members entertained at the Fall METCO Dinner on October 29. He wound up with a gaggle of adoring youngsters watching his performance from a distance of inches.

The METCO program is sponsored by the state Department of Education. Participation in the program is entirely voluntary.

Cohasset is one of 32 communities participating in the program. The community has a long standing commitment to METCO-- METCO has been around for 23 years and Cohasset has been welcoming METCO kids for 21.

D.O.E. provides the funding for the program. Cohasset's METCO director Pat Brown says the department has maintained the program for the past 3 years, but the budget has not kept pace with inflation.

"I tell my students that I am asked to spend $5 when everything costs $10," said Brown. The METCO programs are asking that this year's budget be a level services budget, not a level funded budget.

The biggest problem that METCO directors face is the constant increase in transportation costs. Since students can't walk to school, money must be pulled from other sources to fund those bus increases.

"We pray for no snow days," Brown admitted.

Non-transportation costs include staff salaries and special programs.

Brown has made it possible for METCO students to share their culture with Cohasset kids. Story tellers, gospel singers, and lecturers have come into the classrooms in Cohasset. There have also been reverse busing field trips where students get to see first hand the treasures in the METCO kids neighborhoods.

"We've gone to to the African Meeting House, walked the Black Heritage Trail, and visited Franklin Park Zoo," said Brown.

Each school system decides how many students that they will accept and then chooses from a pool of would-be students.

METCO director Brown said that Cohasset has a target goal of four students per grade. Given the size of the school system, that seems to be an ideal number. A mini-boom in the eighth and ninth grades have brought Cohasset to a total METCO population of 47 students.

At the present time, there are no Hispanic or Asian METCO students attending Cohasset, but Brown hopes that will change in the near future.

Deciding to participate in the METCO program is entirely up to the student, but getting in is a different matter. Competition for the slots is stiff and there is a long waiting list.

"You have a better chance getting in as a first grader," said Brown. But getting on the waiting list is no guarantee that you will get into the program.

Students who make the cut must be committed and extremely disciplined.

Lakeitha Smith's story is typical. Now in the eighth grade, Lakeitha has been a Cohasset student since the first grade. And since the first grade, Lakeitha has been getting up at 5 a.m. in order to get to Cohasset.

She spends a minimum of 40 to 45 minutes on the bus each way.

When asked how she survives her early morning ride, she giggled and admitted, "I sleep on the way here."

Lakeitha's parents, Freddy and Bernetta Smith, say that Lakeitha is very responsible about getting herself up and out in the morning. But it is clear that the parents of METCO students must be equally committed to the program.

The quality of the education that students get in Cohasset is definitely an inducement to participate in the METCO program. But the benefits don't all run in one direction.

METCO director Pat Brown is fond of speaking about "the treasures in your community". Treasures can be as obvious as historical buildings, museums, and parks; they most certainly can be people, and sometimes they can come in simpler and humbler forms.

One elementary school METCO student thought he had no treasures in his neighborhood. But Brown pushed him to really think about his neighborhood. And then he realized that living on the sixth floor gave him advantages that other children didn't have.

He decided that his treasures were being able to see the T for a block before it arrived at his stop, seeing snowflakes before they hit the ground . . . Once he got cooking on his treasures, Brown thought he'd never stop.

Most host families like the diversity and cultural richness that sharing their schools and homes brings them. Although not every family develops a close personal relationship with their student, all say that it is something that they are glad to be doing.

At least one student has two host families.

"Neither one is willing to give him up," said Brown.

Every METCO student has a host family this year. But families who have space and time to share with a student can still get in on the experience.

"We're always looking for families who can take an overnight guest," said Joan Kovach, chair of the PSO METCO committee. "Host families can't always be there."

Host families and their back-ups will have an opportunity to meet with their METCO extended families on several occasions. Plans are in the works for a Cohasset METCO night at Black Nativity, a METCO-wide picnic in Franklin Park, and a dessert meeting. Early release day field trips are planned for the students.

Pat Brown thinks of it as links connecting the treasures in Cohasset's community to the treasures in Boston's neighborhoods. For the two little boys playing who stood together giggling, it was as simple and precious as finding a new friend.

METCO students, their families, and members of the Cohasset host families gathered together last weekend for the annual METCO family dinner. Here, Chloe Chittick, Reena Selden, and Megan Fahey toss a few before they settle down to a great meal.

Center continues despite fire

Despite an October 18 fire which heavily damaged its first floor, the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell, is continuing with its programs as scheduled.

Unfortunately, program sign-up sheets were destroyed in the fire. While lists can be reconstructed through financial records, the staff asks anyone who has signed up for a program through November to call the Center at (617) 659-2559 to confirm your space and the program's location.

A fire fund has been established to help the Center recover from its devastating loss. Donations may be sent to: South Shore Natural Science Center Fire Fund, c/o Rockland Trust Company, P.O. Box 57, Accord, MA 02018.

Music fundraiser for LWV

A concert, entitled "Music for an Autumn Evening," will be presented by the League of Women Voters of Hingham Saturday, Nov. 4 at the Broad Cove House on Lincoln Street in Hingham.

The concert will combine the talents of the Unicorn Singers and Broad Cove Chorale under the direction of Margo Euler. The concert will be the year's major fundraiser for the Hingham League.

The program for the evening provides a variety of selections from madrigals to waltzes to pop/rock.

Music is followed by cheese, wine and conversation as guests can chat with performers and admire the historic Broad Cove House. Built by David Lincoln in the 1730s, it has had many owners, the most recent being Margo and Franz Euler.

"Music for an Autumn Evening" begins at 8 p.m. November 4. Tickets are $17.50 and are available by calling 749-6040 or 740-2548 and at Noble's Camera in Hingham Square.

Historical calendar on sale

The Cohasset Historical Society's alll-new 1990 wall calendar "Cohasset Shores and Harbor — Then and Now" is available at several local shops and stores, or at the Caleb Lothrop House on Summer Street.

The new calendar series shows scenes of the town's shoreline as it appeared a century or more ago, along with modern photographs illustrating the same sites. Included are numerous views of historically-important locations around the perimeter of "Ship Cove" or Cohasset Harbor, and along nearby shores. In the 19th century the harbor was a center of a thriving maritime industry including mackerel fishing, shipbuilding, fish-packing and saltpacking. Several family-owned businesses lined the harbor's edge including those owned by John Bates, Amos Lawrence, the Tower Brothers, Ephraim Snow and James Cutler Doane. Each maintained a wharf, vessels, and shop or store in the harbor area.

This unusual calendar, devoted to Cohasset's own history costs $7.50. For further information, call the Society at 383-6930.

Acting workshop registration

The Cohasset Dramatic Club and the Cohasset Recreation Department will be co-sponsoring an acting workshop for school age children in grades 1 through 12 on Saturday mornings.

It will be taught by John Macero, who has a degree in theater performance from Boston University and fifteen years of acting and directing experience. He is currently the drama teacher at Everett High School and a member of the Saugus School Committee.

The workshops will run from November 18 through the end of April and will culminate in a special performance for all of the children's "fans".

The cost will be $20 per month with a one-time registration fee of $5. To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791.

Art Center hosts fashion show

An Artful Apparel Fashion Show will mark the opening of the upcoming Contextures II Exhibition at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Rd. in Cohasset, Friday, Nov. 17 at 6:30 p.m.

The exhibit explores new directions in fiber with a special emphasis on art to wear. The fashion show will represent the work of 16 fiber and fabric, and clothing designers from Connecticut and Massachusetts. Some of the pieces will include woven fabrics in the designs while other garments incorporate the textures and types of fabrics to mold the designs. Each artist creates unique and one of a kind garments which under the individual influence of the artist become a piece of wearable art.

In addition to the fashion show items, the Contextures II Exhibition will have another whole selection of garments to choose for the upcoming holiday party dressing.

Tickets for the event are $12 each or $20 for a couple.There will be a cash bar and refreshments.

For more information or for tickets, stop in at the art center or call weekdays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. or Sunday 1 to 4 p.m. at 617-383-9548.

Society dinner meeting

The Cohasset Historical Society's 1989 annual meeting will feature a catered dinner and special evening program Thursday, Nov. 9.

Early homes of Cohasset, the oldest dating from 1695, will be the subject of a slide presentation by Society Curator David Wadsworth.

In a number of cases early photographs of the houses will supplement the modern pictures recently taken, in a "then and now" format. Houses shown span the years 1695 to 1800.

The society's dinner meeting will be held November 9 at the Unitarian Parish House on North Main Street. A social hour starts the event at 6 p.m., followed by the dinner at 6:45 p.m. Following dinner, a short annual meeting will be held for the election of officers and directors. The special slide presentation will begin at about 8 p.m.

Reservations for the dinner are $12 and may be mailed to the Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer Street in Cohasset. Advance payment is a must, as seating is limited. Further information may be obtained by calling the Society at 383-6930.

November art workshops

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset has scheduled several workshops during November.

Watercolor, Monotype and Collage Workshop taught by Judy Hochberg will meet Tuesday, Nov. 14 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. By painting on acetate and mixing watercolor paints with waterbased inks, students can bring the spontaneity of "en plein air" work to printmaking.

Portrait Basics Workshop taught by Harriet Zabusky-Zand will meet for three days, Wednesday through Friday, Nov. 15-17 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Students will learn basic portrait techniques and composition in this hands-on workshop for beginning portrait artists.

Cherokee Style Storage Basket taught by Dianne Stanton will meet on Friday, Nov. 3 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Students will each complete a large and colorful basket made of dyed and natural flat reed with a square "filled" base, patterned sides and a sturdy round rim.

Fabric Painting & Decorating Workshop taught by Ann Murphy will meet for two Thursdays, Nov. 9 and 16 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Using simple techniques, students will learn to use fabric painting, stenciling, applique and application of stones, sequins, studs and other trim to transform plain T-shirts, sweatshirts and jerseys into original boutique creations.

Silk Painting taught by Joan Hausrath will meet Tuesday and Thursday, Nov. 14 and 16 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Paint a scarf to wear or give as a gift for the holidays using shimmery washes and pattern effects.

Papermaking taught by Brenton Welsh will meet Saturday, Nov. 18 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Registration is required for all courses and workshops. To register or for more information call the South Shore Art Center weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 617-383-9548.

Auction tickets on sale

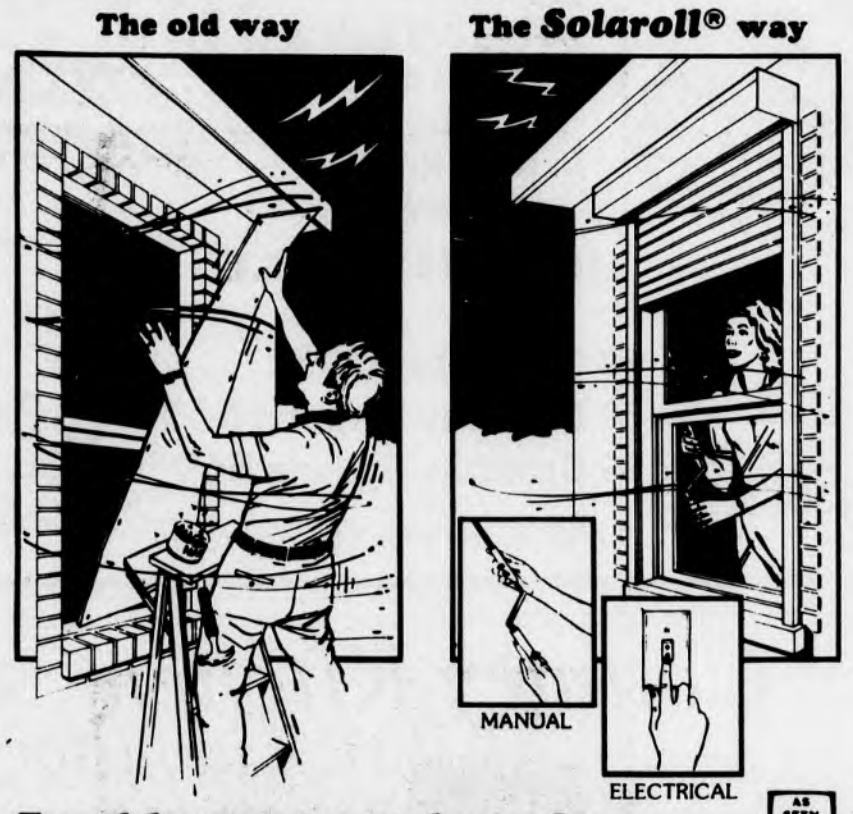
Tickets for the Art, Etc. Auction are on sale at the South Shore Art Center weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Auctioneers Mandy Avery, Wigmore Pierson and Bruce Tuthill will begin the bidding at 9 p.m. on over 100 items and services, as well as fine art donated by professional artists and South Shore businesses.

About half of the items are original pieces of art by leading south shore artists and half of the items are goods and services such as: "An Evening on the Town" which is dinner at Strawberry Faire and Nickerson Theater tickets for two; a "Birthday Party for 20" for two hours at the Carousel in Hull including a Christine Gilmore cake and "Hors D'Oeuvres for 8" by Yvonne Julian.

'Charlie Brown' on stage

For the first time, the Cohasset Dramatic Club will present a musical comedy on the Cohasset town hall stage. "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown" will be presented November 16, 17, 18 and 19.



Construction will soon begin on a set which will convey the appearance of a comic strip. "You're A Good Man Charlie Brown" with book, lyrics and music by Clark Gesner, is based on the comic strip "Peanuts" by Charles M. Schulz.

Two of the three artistic directors are new to the Cohasset Dramatic Club, but not new to South Shore theater audiences. Diane Flanagan of Hingham continues as choreographer, the same position she filled for last years' "Sugar Babies".

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present "You're A Good Man Charlie Brown" at the Cohasset town hall stage November 16, 17 and 18 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, November 19 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $8. Advance purchase of ticket is advised. They are available at Cohasset Hardware Company in Village. Further information call 383-1871.

Boston Light Vessels linger in memory

By David Wadsworth
Special to the Mariner

For eighty one years a familiar sight to local fishermen and yachtsmen was the bright red hull of the Boston Light Vessel, anchored several miles at sea off Cohasset's shoreline.

From the shore the lightship could be seen as a small red dot near the northeast horizon. From close aboard, however, the ship's two powerful lanterns were clearly visible atop twin masts, and large white letters on its hull identified the lightship by the name of its station – BOSTON. Established on October 1, 1894, the Boston Light Vessel Station served as a navigation aid for ocean-going ships approaching Boston Harbor. Its location was about three miles north of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse, and six and a quarter miles east southeast of Boston Light. Boston Light Vessel's primary purpose was to assist ships in locating the deepwater channel leading to the city's harbor facilities.

The first Light Vessel to serve at the Boston Station arrived there on October 1, 1894. Of 375 tons and 119 feet in length the first Boston Lightship had been constructed two years earlier at West Bay City, Michigan. Its first assignment had been at the famous Nantucket Shoals station where it remained until transferred to Boston. (Lightships always take the name of the particular station at which they are serving at the time; permanent identification consists of the vessel's official number as it appears on U.S. Coast Guard lists).

The first Boston Light Vessel was identified as lightship LV 54, later changed to WAL 502 on more recent identification lists. It was one of a class of four identical iron hulled, coal burning sister ships, capable of steaming at 6 knots and also rigged for sails. Its two powerful oil lanterns were supplemented by a fog bell weighing 1,000 pounds. Boston Light Vessel LV 54 was to serve on its station for more than 46 years. During that time the sturdy ship weathered the worst of ocean storms, and survived two severe collisions with oncoming merchant ships. In April 1915 it was rammed by the steamer "Quantico," and on December 20, 1935 by the British ship "Seven Seas Spray." In the latter instance the lightship's crew managed to keep it afloat by stuffing bags of coal into a large gash below the waterline, until the ship could be towed to Boston for repairs.

For a time during World War 2 Boston Lightship was withdrawn from its station and the position was marked by a temporary buoy. The veteran LV 54 returned to its station following the ending of the submarine threat in 1943, and served there until its retirement in 1946. Among the crew of the Boston Light Vessel in earlier days had been Cohasset's Frank Morris, who saw duty aboard LV 54 at about the turn of the century.

From 1946 to 1951 another veteran Light Vessel, LV 81 (later WAL 507) served at the Boston Station. That 130 foot long, 668 ton vessel had been constructed in 1904 at New York, and had served at Heald Bank, Texas, for much of its previous 32 years. It also had briefly replaced LV 54 on the Boston Station during 1940 to 1942. Following the veteran LV 81 at Boston was yet another of the older Light Vessels, identified as LV 85 of WAL 510. This was the first lightship at the local station to be equipped with electric lanterns. LV 85 arrived at Boston Station after serving at the Nantucket Shoals for 16 years, following which it had been the Relief lightship for Massachusetts waters, serving when the principal station vessels were forced to temporarily return to port. Cohasset Coast Guardsman Peter Wood served aboard LV 85 at the Boston Station. Of 683 tons, the 135 foot long LV 85 had been built in 1907 by New York Shipbuilding Co. at Camden, N.J. and remained at Boston Station from 1951 to 1962.

Decommissioned from the Coast Guard in that year it later became a commercial vessel based at Chicago, Illinois. Following LV 85 two more of the bright red light vessels served at Boston Station; LV 118 (WAL 539) from 1962 to 1972, and then the last one on that station, the modern vessel identified as WLV 189, a 630 ton ship built in 1946 at Bay City, Michigan. Of the last three Boston Light Vessels, LV 85 had been the first at that station to have electric lanterns and had served earlier at the Nantucket Shoals site. LV 118, constructed in 1938 by Rice Brothers of Boothbay Harbor, Maine, had seen service previously at Cornfield Point, Conn. and at Cross Rip south of Cape Cod.

The last Boston Light Vessel, WLV 189, had been one of the very few lightships constructed with an all-welded hull, and on its main mast carried a powerful beacon made of 24 locomotive headlights of high intensity. The 630 ton ship had been built specifically for service at Diamond Shoal, North Carolina, where it was located during the years 1947 to 1966, before its final assignment at Boston. By the 1970's the Coast Guard was retiring its fleet of light vessels, and replacing them with modern automated buoys.

The last Boston Light Vessel left its station in early 1975, to be replaced by "Boston Lighted Horn Buoy B." To land-bound Cohasseters perhaps the closest contact with the Boston lightships had been the sound of their powerful fog horns used whenever fog obscured visibility at sea. The last big red vessel stationed off the Cohasset shore carried a system of dual air diaphones sounding two distinctive tones clearly audible in the town's coastal areas, more than half a dozen miles from its point of origin. For yachtsmen the lightship frequently served as a turning mark for races held by the Yacht Club's fleet of International 210 class sloops.

The author Willard Flint, in his recent book titled Lightships of the United States Government notes, "For many years Mr. James Dean of Brookline and Cohasset . . . an avid yachtsman, had delivered Sunday papers to the lightship, weather permitting. At his death in 1942 his will placed $10,000 in trust, its income to be used for delivery of all Boston Sunday newspapers to the lightship on the Boston station." Later the tradition would be continued by Cohasset boatman Pat Reid whose power boat made the round trip to the lightship with regularity on Sunday mornings.

The bright red vessels of the Boston Light Vessel Station are a memory in Cohasset today, but for decades they served as a guide for ocean travelers from all parts of the world as well as for travelers of more local waters.

Artful Apparel Fashion Show Nov. 17

An Artful Apparel Fashion Show will mark the opening of the upcoming Contextures II Exhibition at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Rd. in Cohasset, Friday, Nov. 17 at 6:30 p.m.

The exhibit explores new directions in fiber with a special emphasis on art to wear. Awesome rocket lesson

Mrs. Tewksbury and Mrs. Clark's second graders had the exciting opportunity to learn first hand about rockets. Matthew's Dad, Mr. Pilczak, talked with their classes about rockets. Then they watched him launch two rockets. The rockets went so high before they returned to the field. It was awesome.

Osgood Apple update

Thank you for your continued support collecting Stop & Shop tapes. The Osgood School has collected over $100,000 worth of receipts. A special thank-you to the following students who have helped to add tapes on the calculator:

Patrick Murphy, Megan Waal, Ashley Koed, Kerry Sullivan, Lydia Crafts, Nicole Reid, Jimmy Figueiredo, Danny Mulligan, Aryanna Afshar, Justin Cullivan, Jordan Fiore and Todd Bestick.

Preparations for CHS musical

The scenery crew for the CHS Musical "Bye Bye Birdie" has been hard at work.

There are many scene changes, so they have been very creative in their designs and planning.

Stage managers are: Maureen Smith, Kasey Smith. Scenery Crew: Carole Smith, Kathy Smith, Nickie Vasseur, Kristin Niessink, Marisol Perry, Erin McDonald, Nicole Batts, Alyssa Sexton.

Keep November 10-12 free to see this great show!

Thank you, Mr. Litchfield

The pedestrians who use Sohier Street are truly indebted to our highway department and especially Harold Litchfield for the white line separating the sidewalk from the street. We are especially grateful because our young students, kindergarteners through third graders, have had to use this street twice a day because of the decrease in the bus budget.

Football Pasta Feast

Our second annual Spirit Pasta Feast was a huge success. The food was fantastic and all the players, cheerleaders and coaches were well fed.

Special thank you to all the moms of the freshman and varsity football players who so graciously prepared all the food. We would also especially like to thank the Gridiron Club for their support throughout the year and for providing drinks for this event.

We are very fortunate to have such a dedicated group of young people in this program and parents who are equally dedicated to their children.

The kitchen crew of Mrs. Bishop, Mrs. Conroy, Mrs. McCarthy, Mrs. Ritts, and Mrs. Whitman was outstanding again this year, thank you ladies!

Sincerely,
Sandy Theriault

Dan Curtin

Student of the Month

Dan Curtin, a member of Cohasset High School's alternative school, was honored as Student of the Month for September.

Dan was nominated by alternative school director Jack Buckley. "I am pleased to nominate Dan Curtin to be recognized as the Student of the Month. Those who know Dan realize that his accomplishments in the first month of school far exceed what he was able to do last year. And, when individuals make dramatic improvements they should be recognized for their growth. Dan's accomplishments to date, however, stand on their own merit: Artist of the Month, Perfect attendance, Satisfactory academic performance in five majors.

"Dan looks like a rebel and often behaves like one too. But he's a rebel with a keen wit, a great sense of humor and the ability to make astute observations. Above all, he is a student interested in learning and has so demonstrated that interest," according to Mr. Buckley.

TV show in the works

Cohasset High School students, under the direction of Audio-Visual Coordinator Jack Packard, are launching a weekly hour-long show on Channel 3 cable, featuring whatever video footage has been shot in each of the three schools the previous week.

The show will come on each Thursday evening, starting November 16 with Osgood's segment at 7 p.m.; Deer Hill's at 7:15 p.m. and Jr/Sr High's at 7:30 p.m. Debbie Duggan, the new Cohasset Community Television director from Continental Cablevision will also be available to assist in planning or shooting tapes.

Please tune in November 16 at 7 p.m.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. Debra M.Tranberg
Chiropractor

UNMASKING THE SOURCE

The most common symptom which drives a patient to seek help is pain. Many have been taking pills for years in their battle against pain and they finally have come to realize that pills bring no permanent relief. Pill-taking is a temporary measure which only serves to mask a symptom. It does nothing to address the underlying cause(s) of pain. In the meantime, the problem could become more firmly entrenched and may escalate to a chronic feature of ill health. Chiropractic hopes to uncover the source of pain while it is still a minor one. This requires an effort on patient's behalf to seek help in the early stages of his discomfort. The prospective patient who merely takes pain pills cannot hope to attain real relief.

Working together with you, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC offers the chiropractic exam that will address the source of your difficulty in a natural, knifeless and drugless approach. To help you feel good and to stay that way, we urge a routine of periodic chiropractic exams. Located at 80 Front St., Scituate Harbor. Tel. 545-7388. By appt, Early morning and late evening appts. Workers Comp cases, VISA, M/C and most insurance plans accepted. Chiropractic doesn't cost. It pays.

HINT: Television ads perpetuate the idea that many chronic health problems need only be approached with short-term pain-maskers.

Hannah Beggan and Hillary Lamp appeared from far-far away to join Sunday afternoon's Halloween festivities on the common. Also joining in the fun was "Goldie" the clown, who once again to be a big hit with the kids who flocked to the community center annual event.

Merissa Ryan, a beautiful princess for the day, rides atop her royal pony at the Halloween parade last Sunday.

Nathaniel Wilcox checked out his painted face which was handsomely decorated by artist-of-the-day, Barbara Henderson.

Pippi Longstocking, a favorite among young readers in Cohasset, made an appearance last Sunday at the community center's annual Halloween parade. Meredith O'Hare looked just marvelous in her costume.

Jr./Sr. High book fair

More than 300 titles and 1200 books, all of interest to students aged 12-18, are available during a Teen Book Fair Tuesday, Nov. 7, and Wednesday, Nov. 8 at Cohasset Junior-Senior High School. A Parents'/ Grandparents' evening will be held Tuesday, Nov. 7 from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

Sponsored by the Parent School Organization (PSO) of the Cohasset Schools, the Book Fair provides students and interested adults with ready access to a vast selection of mysteries, classics, biographies, sports, adventures, popular fiction, humor, and how-to-books. A book for every teen will be represented — even for the non-readers.

Art students are helping with the publicity and many parents have volunteered to make the event educational and productive. Proceeds will benefit the PSO's junior and senior high school programs.

Monte Carlo Night

Plans are rapidly drawing to a conclusion for the fourth annual PSO Monte Carlo Night which will be held Saturday, Nov. 4 from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the Cohasset Community Center.

The Cohasset Parent School Organization would like to thank the many individuals and businesses who have donated premiums or services which will be auctioned at the end of the evening.

Weekend getaways at the Boston Harbor Hotel at Rowes Wharf and the Guest Quarters Suite Hotels in both Boston and Waltham have been donated by Dick Senechal. Other items donated include dinner for two by Hugo's, a $90 Mary Kay Products Gift Basket by Angie Walsh, one hour of interior decorating consultation by Kathleen Fox of the Designing Woman, two floral arrangements by Claudia Story, cleaning services for four hours by Doreen Pride, a case of wine by Bryan Welz, a $50 gift certificate by Fleuri Home Fashions, a $25 gift certificate by Navona's Restaurant as well as Celtics tickets and a blue fishing excursion which are being donated anonymously.

Hors d'oeuvres will be provided by Arthur Roebuck of the British Relief Restaurant in Hingham. Decorations for Monte Carlo Night are compliments of Dee Dee Nicynski, Janet Amiri, and Rhonda Myers. Reed's Country Way Nursery will be loaning plants for the evening.

Tickets for Monte Carlo Night can be purchased for $15 each from the Commnity Center or any PSO Board Member.

Schools on video

Continental Cable channel 3 in Cohasset will premier "Cohasset Schools Video Time," Thursday, Nov. 16 at 7 p.m.

Coordinated by Dr. John Packard, this new addition to Cohasset local programming will feature items of current interest happening in Cohasset schools. Students and faculty from Osgood, Deer Hill and the High School will all be contributing pieces highlighting important events from each school.

"We are very excited about 'Video Time,' " says Dr. Packard, "It will give Cohasset parents an opportunity to see what their kids are involved in on a weekly basis, and the kids themselves will be able to share their week in a new way."

"Video Time" will air on Channel 3 at 7 p.m. on Thursdays, followed by "Pierson to Person," Cohasset's talk show with Wigmore Pierson at 8 p.m.

Vo-Tech SPED meeting

Regional school Assistant Superintendent Warren Anderson is asking the public to attend a meeting on the Special Education (SPED) budget and program for the South Shore Regional Vocational School.

The meeting, which is being called to review the SPED program, will be held on Nov. 9 in the school library. Refreshments will be served at 7 p.m., and the meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Much of the SPED budget is set by state and federal regulations, but a portion is determined by the school administration with input from the public. For example, the public will vote on continuing parental seminars that have been offered in previous years. The seminars are open to parents interested in addressing teenage development with a psychiatrist and a social worker. A support group was also formed in the past.

The school committee also accepted a grant for "Exploring South Shore Regional", an afternoon program for 14 to 22 year olds who wish to learn about vocational education. Ten programs, including career counseling, will be presented four days a week to those interested.

The program was successful two years ago, and more than 15 percent of the freshman class attended the 12-shop rotating program before deciding to attend the regional school.

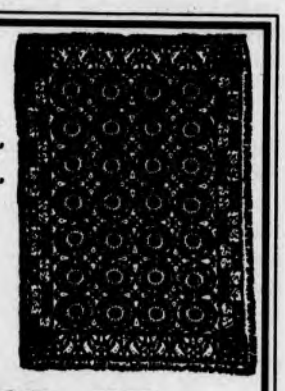
In other regional school news, the school committee appointed Richard Burgess SPED Coordinator, Maureen Curtain Reading Teacher, Henry Stafano Student Council Advisor, Catherine O'Donnell Freshman Basketball Coach, and Kimberly Borden Aide.

Pat Tolini, president of the Boosters Club, along with (rear) Eileen Corbett, Debra Smith, club treasurer, Kathy Brennock, and Jo-Ann Grew, joined together last Saturday to present a used sports equipment sale to benefit the local club.

Free Apple training

Personal Computer Resources will provide free training to schools that receive Apple computers as part of Stop & Shop's 75th Anniversary celebration, when PCR is selected as the Apple dealer to install the systems.

This training will include setup of the computer and peripherals, as well as training on any software provided with the system.



The firm is one of the largest dealers of Apple II systems in the United States, and supplies systems and training to many schools in the area, and to businesses.

PCR conducts an extensive training program during the year and has a service bureau that allows customers to rent time on Macintosh and other Apple computers, laser printers, scanners, and other products. The company also maintains a library of software for free trial by customers before purchasing.

For information regarding the free training available on Apple computers given away by Stop & Shop, please contact Mary Ann Stilgoe, Educational Coordinator, at 617-871-5396. For a demonstration of one of PCR's computer systems or software, stop in the resource center at 2100 Washington Street, Hanover, 02339.

Under-14 boys soccer team plays well

By Carol Riley
Special to the Mariner

Cohasset seventh and eighth grade boys played well against stiff competition in the newly-formed Greenbush Soccer League.

The league was formed this year to provide inter-town competition for boys too young for varsity and junior varsity high school play and too experienced for the grade school level.

Weymouth, Hingham, Norwell and Hull have entered at least one team in the league. The Weymouth and Hingham teams were previous state champions in the Spring Soccer League.

Cohasset's record is 2-2-2. Wes DeSantis, Ben Redfield and Chris Goodman have all played well in net registering 1.9 goals against average. Good defensive play by David Nothnagle, Brian Duffy, Brandon DeVoe, Ryan Freeman, Tyler Studds and Jim Magner has highlighted team victories. Chris Kondrat has anchored the mid-field, flanked by the skillful play of Mike Riley, Scott Theriault, Brendan Kinchla and Michael Shields. Cohasset forwards Eric Henry, Jeremiah Stevenson, Tim Brister and Charlie Endris have provided the goals, demonstrating good passing and dribbling skills.

Newcomers to inter-town soccer competition have progressed well. Forwards Bob Gentile and Gehrt Lubitz have come close on several scoring opportunities. Defensemen Bert Thompson and Spencer Henderson have exhibited fine improvement in their defensive skills.

The next Cohasset under-14 boys soccer game will be against Norwell Saturday, Nov. 4 at 9:30 a.m. at Milliken Field.

CHS Skippers play with a lot of spirit

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

The football battle between South Shore League Small School rivals Hanover and Cohasset generally goes down to the wire.

Not this year.

Mark McKeever (102 yards, 20 carries) and Dave Baldyga (101 yards, 17 carries) powered the Hanover ground game as the Indians throttled undermanned Cohasset, 21-0, last Saturday at Milliken Field.

"The kids played with a lot of spirit. I'm proud of them," said Cohasset coach Phil Pisano, whose 23-player squad dropped to 1-6 overall and 1-4 league. "We make just one substitution on the change of possession so, on a hot day like today, we do tire."

On the game's first possession, Cohasset came out throwing on three straight offensive plays — the second one was caught by Curt Ludlow for a 13-yard gain. However, the Skippers were forced to punt when the drive stalled at their own 45. A bad snap sailed over the head of Ludlow, giving the Indians (2-5, 1-3 league) excellent field position at the Cohasset 40. McKeever and Baldyga alternated runs to the Cohasset seven, but Cohasset's defense, led by tackle Greg Thomas' back-to-back hits on Baldyga, held at the 10.

Some fine punting by Cohasset's only scoring opportunity of the day occurred when southpaw quarterback Noah Hill, his second straight varsity start after missing first five weeks with a leg injury, completed three passes to move his team to the Hanover 39. A pass-lateral from Hill to Mike Dockray to Ludlow was the big play that covered 19 yards. But the threat ended when Hanover's Aaron May intercepted a Hill pass at the goal line to close out the half, 0-0.

Hanover finally got on the scoreboard early in the third period when Baldyga busted 35 yards down the right sidelines to the Cohasset five-yard line and scored from the one two plays later, 7-0.

Another May interception set up an eight-play, 58-yard Hanover scoring march early in the final period. Carries by Baldyga, McKeever and Craig MacDonald paved the way for quarterback Peter Drummey (70 yards total offense), who high-stepped it into the end zone on the five-yard roll out.

Hanover put the game out of reach when Drummey sneaked in from the one-yard line after Greg Stone's diving interception at midfield.

Hanover finished the contest with 313 total yards (243 on the ground), while Cohasset was held to 167.

Hill, meanwhile, passed for 127 yards (nine completions in 28 attempts), but was picked off by Hanover four times. Ludlow was the leading rusher (9 carries, 43 yards) and receiver (3 catches, 68 yards) for Cohasset.

Former linemen-turned-tight end Sean McCarthy caught two passes for the Skippers.

Cohasset will host Abington (4-3) this Saturday afternoon (1:30 p.m.) at Milliken Field.

Field Hockey

The Cohasset High School field hockey team missed qualifying for the EMass. tournament by one victory when they lost to Hull, 1-0, on the final day of the regular season October 30.

Cohasset's Barb Lagrotteria (12) and Carver's Renee Grennell fight for possession of the ball during a recent varsity field hockey match at Cohasset High School.

Lisa Tramontana's goal, three minutes into the second half, proved to be the winner for the tournament-bound Hull Pirates (11-4-1).

As a result of the defeat, Cohasset (5-9-2) finished fourth in the South Shore League Small Schools Division behind East Bridgewater and Norwell, who became the other school to qualify for the playoffs with their second-place finish (the MIAA rules — that if a team comes in second in their division, they receive an automatic bid to the tournament).

"We outplayed the league champions from the start," said first-year CHS coach Debbie Bostwick. "We had more corner kicks than they had but we couldn't capitalize on ours."

Cohasset fired 9 shots on the Hull goalie. Meanwhile, Candi Jones of Cohasset kicked out six of the seven shots she faced.

"We just couldn't get the lucky breaks this season. We would always come out tails instead of heads," reasoned Bostwick, who was recently named the new girls varsity basketball coach replacing the departed Bill Fallon. "We lost to Hull, 2-1, in the first game of the season. But the team was still learning my new offense. I think the kids have improved 100 percent from that opening game.

"We have no luck against opponents. I had the halfbacks move up to generate some offense but she (Tramontana) beats everybody to the ball and scores on the breakaway. She definitely caught us off-guard. Overall, I am very proud of this team. Five out of our starting 11 players have never played this game before. We have a lot to look forward to next year," said Bostwick.

The top scorers for Cohasset this season were Barbara Lagrotteria (10 goals-5 assists, 15 points); Laura Smart (6-4-10 points); Bridget Corkery (3-1-4) and Liz Deveney (3-0-3).

Lagrotteria, Jones, Corkery and Michele Rourke were recently named to the SSL All-Star team. Senior Juliana Chrittick was the alternate member for the

Cohasset sports action

Basketball registration

The Cohasset Recreation Department/Booster's basketball registrations will be held for girls and boys in grades 1 through 9 at town hall Saturday, Nov. 4, from 9 to 10:30 a.m.

The fee for the program is $25 with a $5 discount offered to second and subsequent children registering from the same family. Checks should be made payable to: "Town of Cohasset." There will also be a $5 per participant, team shirt charge, and checks for shirts must be made payable to: "Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club."

Registration at the prescribed time is essential because evaluations will be held during November. If you are unable to register Nov. 4, an alternate date has been scheduled on Tuesday, Nov. 7 from 2:30 to 4 p.m. at the recreation office.

South Shore Hockey action

The fans were once again treated to some really close contests this past Sunday when three goals decided all three games.

Bay State Auto Spring beat Sullivan Tire 4-2 in an exciting match. Tom Chisolm scored two goals while Glen Peterson and Big Harry Riley scored one each. Marty King and Bo O'Shaughnessy scored for Sullivan Tire. Sullivan Tire played a very strong game, out skating Bay State for most of the game, but came up short.

Gulph Construction squeezed by the Varmints 5-1. Gulph scored first when free agent Joe Megnia put it past Mike Houlihan of the Varmints. Varmints pulled ahead when Jamie Young scored 2 of his 3 goals less than a minute apart. Gulph scored twice before the Varmints tied it up. Charlie Enwright got the winning goal in the last four seconds for Gulph. Charlie had 2 goals and 2 assists for the night. Larry Fell scored one and Joe Megnia had two.

One victory away . . .

In addition, Lagrotteria (forward) and Jones (goalie) have been nominated for the Globe All-Scholastic team.

Boys Soccer

Seven minutes into the match, Jim Reidy converted a pass from Ryan Cibelli from 17 yards out, giving the Cohasset High School boys soccer team a 1-0, South Shore League Small Schools Division victory over Abington October 26.

Reidy's goal, his 27th of the season, also enabled tournament-bound Cohasset (13-2-1, 11-1-1 league) to clinch its fifth straight league title.

Joel Reidy, Jim's twin brother, made 14 saves for his 14th shutout of the season and 37th of his career. Meanwhile, Abington drops to 10-4.

Girls Soccer

Sue Cashman recorded three goals and two assists, powering the Abington High School girls soccer team to a 5-2, SSL victory over host Cohasset October 26.

Liz Rice and Noreen Murray also scored, and Allison Taylor and Nickie DiGiusto played solid defense for the Green Wave (13-1-1).

Michelle Massa and Madelynne MacDonald netted first-half goals, and Tonya Peterson stopped 13 shots for Cohasset (4-3-1 SSL).

CHS Skippers play with a lot of spirit

By Bill Modestino
Mariner correspondent

The football battle between South Shore League Small School rivals Hanover and Cohasset generally goes down to the wire.

Not this year.

Mark McKeever (102 yards, 20 carries) and Dave Baldyga (101 yards, 17 carries) powered the Hanover ground game as the Indians throttled undermanned Cohasset, 21-0, last Saturday at Milliken Field.

"The kids played with a lot of spirit. I'm proud of them," said Cohasset coach Phil Pisano, whose 23-player squad dropped to 1-6 overall and 1-4 league. "We make just one substitution on the change of possession so, on a hot day like today, we do tire."

On the game's first possession, Cohasset came out throwing on three straight offensive plays — the second one was caught by Curt Ludlow for a 13-yard gain. However, the Skippers were forced to punt when the drive stalled at their own 45. A bad snap sailed over the head of Ludlow, giving the Indians (2-5, 1-3 league) excellent field position at the Cohasset 40. McKeever and Baldyga alternated runs to the Cohasset seven, but Cohasset's defense, led by tackle Greg Thomas' back-to-back hits on Baldyga, held at the 10.

Some fine punting by Cohasset's only scoring opportunity of the day occurred when southpaw quarterback Noah Hill, his second straight varsity start after missing first five weeks with a leg injury, completed three passes to move his team to the Hanover 39. A pass-lateral from Hill to Mike Dockray to Ludlow was the big play that covered 19 yards. But the threat ended when Hanover's Aaron May intercepted a Hill pass at the goal line to close out the half, 0-0.

Hanover finally got on the scoreboard early in the third period when Baldyga busted 35 yards down the right sidelines to the Cohasset five-yard line and scored from the one two plays later, 7-0.

Another May interception set up an eight-play, 58-yard Hanover scoring march early in the final period. Carries by Baldyga, McKeever and Craig MacDonald paved the way for quarterback Peter Drummey (70 yards total offense), who high-stepped it into the end zone on the five-yard roll out.

Hanover put the game out of reach when Drummey sneaked in from the one-yard line after Greg Stone's diving interception at midfield.

Hanover finished the contest with 313 total yards (243 on the ground), while Cohasset was held to 167.

Hill, meanwhile, passed for 127 yards (nine completions in 28 attempts), but was picked off by Hanover four times. Ludlow was the leading rusher (9 carries, 43 yards) and receiver (3 catches, 68 yards) for Cohasset.

Former linemen-turned-tight end Sean McCarthy caught two passes for the Skippers.

Cohasset will host Abington (4-3) this Saturday afternoon (1:30 p.m.) at Milliken Field.

Field Hockey

The Cohasset High School field hockey team missed qualifying for the EMass. tournament by one victory when they lost to Hull, 1-0, on the final day of the regular season October 30.

Lisa Tramontana's goal, three minutes into the second half, proved to be the winner for the tournament-bound Hull Pirates (11-4-1).

As a result of the defeat, Cohasset (5-9-2) finished fourth in the South Shore League Small Schools Division behind East Bridgewater and Norwell, who became the other school to qualify for the playoffs with their second-place finish (the MIAA rules — that if a team comes in second in their division, they receive an automatic bid to the tournament).

"We outplayed the league champions from the start," said first-year CHS coach Debbie Bostwick. "We had more corner kicks than they had but we couldn't capitalize on ours."

Cohasset fired 9 shots on the Hull goalie. Meanwhile, Candi Jones of Cohasset kicked out six of the seven shots she faced.

"We just couldn't get the lucky breaks this season. We would always come out tails instead of heads," reasoned Bostwick, who was recently named the new girls varsity basketball coach replacing the departed Bill Fallon. "We lost to Hull, 2-1, in the first game of the season. But the team was still learning my new offense. I think the kids have improved 100 percent from that opening game.

"We have no luck against opponents. I had the halfbacks move up to generate some offense but she (Tramontana) beats everybody to the ball and scores on the breakaway. She definitely caught us off-guard. Overall, I am very proud of this team. Five out of our starting 11 players have never played this game before. We have a lot to look forward to next year," said Bostwick.

The top scorers for Cohasset this season were Barbara Lagrotteria (10 goals-5 assists, 15 points); Laura Smart (6-4-10 points); Bridget Corkery (3-1-4) and Liz Deveney (3-0-3).

Lagrotteria, Jones, Corkery and Michele Rourke were recently named to the SSL All-Star team. Senior Juliana Chrittick was the alternate member for the

Cohasset sports action

Basketball registration

The Cohasset Recreation Department/Booster's basketball registrations will be held for girls and boys in grades 1 through 9 at town hall Saturday, Nov. 4, from 9 to 10:30 a.m.

The fee for the program is $25 with a $5 discount offered to second and subsequent children registering from the same family. Checks should be made payable to: "Town of Cohasset." There will also be a $5 per participant, team shirt charge, and checks for shirts must be made payable to: "Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club."

Registration at the prescribed time is essential because evaluations will be held during November. If you are unable to register Nov. 4, an alternate date has been scheduled on Tuesday, Nov. 7 from 2:30 to 4 p.m. at the recreation office.

Sue Cashman recorded three goals and two assists, powering the Abington High School girls soccer team to a 5-2, SSL victory over host Cohasset October 26.

Liz Rice and Noreen Murray also scored, and Allison Taylor and Nickie DiGiusto played solid defense for the Green Wave (13-1-1).

Michelle Massa and Madelynne MacDonald netted first-half goals, and Tonya Peterson stopped 13 shots for Cohasset (4-3-1 SSL).

South Shore Hockey action

The fans were once again treated to some really close contests this past Sunday when three goals decided all three games.

Bay State Auto Spring beat Sullivan Tire 4-2 in an exciting match. Tom Chisolm scored two goals while Glen Peterson and Big Harry Riley scored one each. Marty King and Bo O'Shaughnessy scored for Sullivan Tire. Sullivan Tire played a very strong game, out skating Bay State for most of the game, but came up short.

Gulph Construction squeezed by the Varmints 5-1. Gulph scored first when free agent Joe Megnia put it past Mike Houlihan of the Varmints. Varmints pulled ahead when Jamie Young scored 2 of his 3 goals less than a minute apart. Gulph scored twice before the Varmints tied it up. Charlie Enwright got the winning goal in the last four seconds for Gulph. Charlie had 2 goals and 2 assists for the night. Larry Fell scored one and Joe Megnia had two.

Nick Page Song Fest!!

Join us in something new!! first Parish in Cohasset and the Old Ship Church in Hingham will be joining voices to co-sponsor an "exciting alternative to choral singing" on Saturday, Nov. 4, from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m., at the Old Ship Parish House, 107 Main St., Hingham. Singer Nick Page will lead us in a Power Singing Workshop, for people of all musical abilities and ages. Nick Page draws his music from many sources, and somehow, even given a very average group of voices, is able to "unite celebrants in resonant harmony." Anyone who has ever been moved by the power of music will find something wondrous in this event.

Tickets at $2/person or $5/family may be purchased from choir members, at coffee hour or at church school on Sunday, Oct. 29, or by calling the church office. Friends are welcome! Homemade cider (thanks to Ed's apples and the Tolman's press) and doughnuts will be served.

The Music and Worship Committee will meet Sunday, Nov. 5, at 8 p.m. in the Parish House.

Fall Circle Dinner

Sign up now for our first circle of the year to be held November 11!

Participants will be divided into Circles of 8-10 persons, sharing the tasks of the meal among them: host household, hors d'oeuvres, casserole, salad, and dessert. Make your reservations by calling the church office (383-1100) or Shelley Weier (383-1590), or sign the list at the Meeting House on Sunday.

Volunteers needed

I am looking for someone to help me with the Senior Citizen Luncheons on the fourth Tuesday of each month. It involves setting up tables and serving the meal, which is prepared at the high school, and takes only about two hours (from 11 a.m. - 1 p.m.). If you are free and would like to join me, please call me at 383-6577. Thanks.

The sound of pounding hammers and buzz saws filled the crisp fall air Saturday at a home in Marshfield where members of the South Shore Chapter of Habitat for Humanity started another rehabilitation project.

The work will take several months, with a completion date eyed sometime in the spring.

Volunteers from the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset were on hand last Saturday; a new work crew from St. Stephen's Church will donate their labor Nov. 4.

Habitat for Humanity was founded in Americus, Ga., about 12 years ago by Millard Fuller and Clarence Jordan as an ecumenical ministry to provide affordable housing.

While much of the Habitat work nationally involves new construction, in the Northeast, it has focused on rehabilitating existing housing.

Volunteers donate their labor while others contribute funds to make the various projects succeed.

The South Shore chapter was founded about five years ago.

During the past three years, Habitat for Humanity has rehabilitated homes in Randolph, Kingston, Carver and, most recently, in East Bridgewater.

A few years ago the group assisted in renovating the basement of MainSpring House in Brockton, a shelter for the homeless, according to John Galvin, former president of the South Shore chapter.

"The East Bridgewater house was a lot smaller, built in the 1930s or '40s," said Mark Newby of Norwell, a member of Habitat.

The house is an old farmhouse. One section was constructed in 1650 and another, built in 1710, was added on to the original house in 1848.

The third phase is to do some interior repairs, replace plumbing fixtures and install new sheetrock, said Newby.

"Right now, we want to get as much done outside as possible, before the weather sets in," he said.

Volunteers and tradesmen alike work side by side, doing whatever needs to be done.

"THE BEST OF TIMES, THE WORST OF TIMES"

At a recent meeting with elders at the Middleboro Council on Aging, Secretary of Elder Affairs, Paul J. Lanizikos, characterized the 1990 fiscal year budget cutbacks in elder services by the quote from Charles Dickens A Tale of Two Cities "the best of times, and the worst of times."

We are living in the best of times, Lanzikos said, because of the high technology and quality of life we enjoy: in the worst of times because budget cutbacks are forcing our Councils on Aging and Home Care Corp. to reduce services for the most vulnerable elders in our society. As of October, the total seniors served under the home care program will fall to 41,000 clients served per month from 45,000 clients served per month. This translates into the level of care has dropped considerably to the most needy elders in waning health.

Secretary Lanzikos cited his own staff cutbacks at the Executive Office of Elder Affairs. Since he took office two years ago, the Secretary reduced his staff from seventy-one (71) paid employees to its current fifty-one (51) only to be asked again last week to drop down to 39 by November 1. This is a reduction of 34%. There is now (1) one person responsible for the 351 Councils on Aging across the State. The figure of of 39 people relates back to 1979 with the department who had the same number of people working and the services and case loads were much smaller. His example could be taken under advisement by agencies and departments of government that are heavy with administration, through vetoes and withholdings, the total State Elder Service budget of $141 million will be cut by $8.65 million or approximately 6%: Home Care Corporations (27), which receive 90% of the Elder Affairs budget, will be cut by at least $3.8 million. (Reductions in services are already in place as are new "cost -sharing" or copayments for service regulations which are scheduled to go into effect as early as October 1, 1990.) Councils on Aging will lose $850,000 of competitive funds (a 27% cut, and $50,000 equalization fund for council experiencing inordinate growth. Added to this will be the loss of 35 Elder Service Corps. Volunteer positions through the same budget cutting process.

While Secretary Lanzikos is traveling across the State of Massachusetts preparing recipients, providers and contractors of elder services for the budget cutbacks, we in Cohasset are turning to our volunteers, churches, schools and the Social Service League, hoping they will help fill the gap made by this current fiscal loss in State government.

Considering what older people have gone through in the past, we are still in the "best of times." "The worst of times" is a challenge for us to put more dedication, more creativity and better planning into our problems. We will survive, and remember, we can all work together.

Please plan to join us November 16 at 7 p.m. when Secretary Paul J. Lanzikos and Executive Director Bobbie Kamen will be guest on "Pierson to Person" on Channel 3. Come and ask your questions to the Secretary regarding the future of elderly services and what is the State future projections. Rides will be provided by the Council On Aging. Call 383-9112.

OMBUDSMAN VOLUNTEERS NEEDED — The South Shore Elder Services Nursing Home Ombudsman Program is looking for volunteers to help ensure quality of life for nursing and rest home residents. Become an Ombudsman in this unique program!!! Weekend training is now availabe for persons who work full time. For further information, call Ms. Vonne Barnett at 848-3910 or 383-9790.

"KEEP MOVING"

"Keep Moving" was designed by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs to promote fitness, exercise, and socialization for adults 50 years and older. A statewide network of Walking Clubs has been initiated. Persons interested in starting a Walking Club in their community are trained and certified as leaders.

Wednesday, Nov. 29, Boston, Tufts Research Center on Aging, 711 Washington St., Boston, Ma. 02111. If you are interested in attending, please call Lillian Colavecchio at 727-7750 or 1-800-882-2003.

November Is Diabetes Awareness Month

According to the American Diabetes Association, 50% of the estimated 11 million Americans that have diabetes aren't even aware of it.

Colonial Pharmacy, in conjunction with local and national organizations, urges you to find out what your blood-sugar level is.

A few symptoms to look out for include: excessive urination, extreme thirst, constant hunger, rapid weight loss, weakness & fatigue.

If you have noticed any of these symptoms to an extreme, or if your family has a history of diabetes, you should consider being checked.

A simple blood-glucose test is all it takes. Colonial's registered pharmacists are available to answer any questions. Frequent testing is also offered. Please call today for further information.

HOLLY DAYS SHOPPING DECEMBER 1

Visit the Ashumet Holly Reservation in Falmouth on Cape Cod! Select freshly cut holly from Ashumet's collection of American, Oriental, and English holly trees. Also available for purchase are swags, wreathes, holly trees, and a selection of unusual gifts from the Potting Shed Herbary right at the Holly Reservation. The holly berries will be in full color for those interested in walking the footpaths to see the trees, some more than twenty feet high. Refreshments, including chowder and mulled cider will be available.

The trip will leave from the Super Stop and Shop parking lot on Route 3A in Cohasset at 9 a.m., and return about 5 p.m. Reservations and payment of $35 per person are due by Friday, Nov. 3.

After ample time to enjoy this beautiful sanctuary of the Massachusetts Audubon Society, it's a short ride to the Daniel Webster Inn in Sandwich where we'll enjoy their delicious Grand Buffet Luncheon. The Daniel Webster Inn will be beautifully decorated for the holiday season with Christmas trees, gingerbread houses, and a welcoming fire in the lobby's huge fireplace!

Following lunch, we'll head home, making a brief stop at the Christmas Tree shop and the Chocolate House!

Call Cohasset Council on Aging at 383-9112 for reservations.

Pack 38 Cub Scouts news

Boy Scouts from 10 troops and Cub Scout Webelos of the Old Colony district recreated the first camporee held in England 80 years ago.

Our Webelos cammped at Camp Child. They hiked to the Ellisville beach where they practiced formation signals for parade work, played a game called British bulldog and had a horseback relay. John Clarkson was the district chairman.

Pack 38 thanks: Bonnie Divito, Karen Laugelle, Earl and Carol Bestick, Linda Farrag, Elaine Smoot, Heidi Maitland, Mrs. Olney, Terry Carruth and parents who provided the Halloween goodies for our Halloween party and haunted kitchen. Den 1, Den 5, and Den 3 provided refreshments.

Congratulations to our new Bobcats: Den 1 — Ronald Nicynski, Den 4 — Stefan Vanderweil, Darius Amari, Ryan O'Hart, Mario Bruzzone, & Joseph Nicynski. Other scouts are still working towards the Bobcat.

Our Pack 38 Tiger Cubs are our invited Halloween guests.

The bowl-a-rama is rolling to a close. Thank you for participating. Each scout will be receiving a district patch and a ppie for his uniform for bowling and collecting the pledges. The pledge money is due one week after the scout bowled. It can be turned in to the den leader or chairmperson, Linda Farrag (383-9519). The prizes the scout earned will be in by the January pack meeting.

DATES TO REMEMBER

Nov. 26 — Commitee meeting (Sunday) at parish house 7 to 8 p.m. for den leaders and parents and cubmaster to set format for pack meeting.

Dec. 2 — Village Christmas Fair (10 to 3 p.m.) scouts make or bake contributions to the fair (at Cohasset Common).

Dec. 6 — Roundtable (Wednesday) 7:30 to 9 p.m. at S. Jr. High School in Hingham.

Students urge residents to recycle . . .

delighted with the artists.

"I'm so pleased with these signs, they're incredible and very professional," she said. "But I'm even more pleased with their enthusiasm."

Becker said the recycling center "was desperate" for signs to direct unsuspecting residents to the appropriate bin. When she travelled to the well-known Wellesley recycling center she was impressed with the entire operation, particularly the signs designating the specific areas.

"We really wanted to get some professional signs done for our recycling center," Becker said, "but we didn't have any money for it in our budget."

After talking with Buckley at the high school, the two decided their concerns could be combined into one successful project.

"We were looking to do some type of community project," Buckley recalled. "The idea was to get the students involved in what they were studying. After talking with Sharon, I realized this was a good opportunity to get these kids involved with their community about an issue they are becoming familiar with."

Mikki Finegan, an alternative school student, said recycling has become an important issue within his family. They are trying to change their lifestyle to accommodate the mandatory recycling, but he believes it will take more before recycling becomes an effective environmental tool.

"It has a lot more to do with politics than with lifestyles," he said. "The government needs to get more involved in making sure that everyone starts recycling."

There are natural obstacles to recyling, he said. People are so accustomed to automatic disposal, it is difficult to overcome that habit.

"You have to educate people," he said, realizing that children will grow accustomed to recycling much faster than adults who have formed lifelong habits.

Buckely hopes these students will serve as leaders within the school to begin serious recycling efforts throughout the system. Currently, Jason DuMoulin is responsible for collecting cans at the end of the day at Cohasset High School. They are brought to the Stop and Shop for money which will be used by the alternative school for special events and field trips.

One problem that continues at the school is the use of polystyrene trays and cups within the cafeteria. Buckley has talked with school administrators about the problem, and is confident the practice will be stopped.

"The administration is very interested in recycling at the school and they're very concerned with the use of styrofoam. I'm not sure what will be done, but I'd like the school to set an example for the rest of the community," he said.

As Jason noted, "I hope the work we've done does some good for the town. After all, if the alternative school students can do it, everyone can do it."

With that, the students laughed. But the teacher noted that environmental issues are evolving into timely topics in Cohasset and throughout the world. Recycling at the Cedar Street landfill is a start for these students, he said, but there's no telling how far they will go.

New tax rate is certified . . .

revenue number finally arrived in August, it was lower than anticipated.

"We got hit with a double whammy," Lagrotteria said.

To further complicate matters, the town could not hold a special town meeting to balance its own budget until the state revenue figures were known. Once the revenue numbers were submitted by the state, the town could hold its town meeting to reduce its own operating budget accordingly.

And once the budget was reduced, the assessors quickly calculated a new tax rate.

Lagrotteria explained that town meeting, combined with the successful override, set the spending limit at about $9 million for this fiscal year. That is the amount that has to be raised by taxation from Cohasset's 2,800 property owners.

"The figure divided by the valuations of all taxable property in town establishes the tax rate," he said. "It is not a number that we 'magically' create. It is in fact, the number that will appear in your 1990 town report."

The lower the valuations, the higher the tax rate needed to bring in that $9 million figure through taxation, he added. The higher the valuations, the lower the tax rate because we are limited to raising no more than $9 million - only two and a-half percent higher than last year's spending total, according to Lagrotteria.

Committee will present override information

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

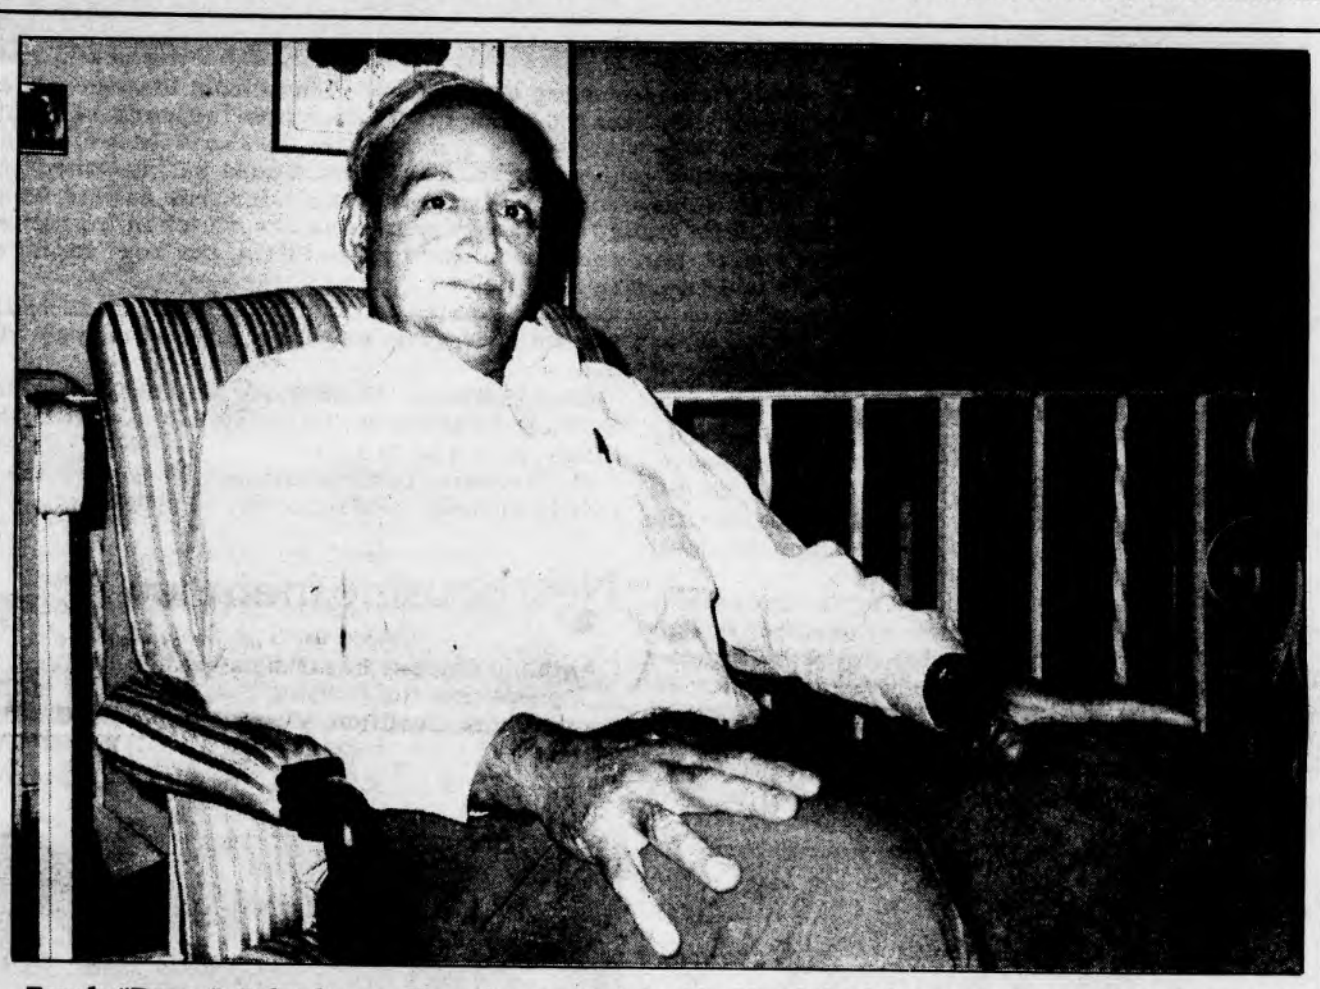
An override is just about guaranteed next year.

But town officials say the success or failure of an override will depend on how knowledgeable the public is with its fiscal 1991 municipal budget.

Education is the key, according to town officials. Therefore, a committee of local residents and town officials will be formed to enlighten the community on budget choices for next year.

At a meeting of town department heads and elected officials Tuesday night, it was the unanimous opinion that the town will be facing some type of Proposition 2 1/2 override in the spring. Most town officials, however, were reluctant to say at this point how much of an override the public may be willing to swallow.

Selectmen Chairman Burt Pratt was the first to offer his opinion. "My feeling is (an override of) $200,000 to $250,000 - up to $300,000 if the climate is right," he said.



Some people were not so optimistic. Ray Kasperowicz of the advisory committee said he recently talked to a group of senior citizens. They are not easily swayed in support of higher taxes, he said.

"They're a tough crowd," he said, adding that some townspeople want to see "some personal hurt" before they are convinced that town government is running a lean operation.

"But as town officials, we can't let that happen," school committee chairman Barbara Bliss answered. "There are people who will never feel bad about school department cuts or cuts in the police or fire departments. It's up to us as town officials to say we can't cut below a certain level - we can't be so selfish."

Under state law, town officials are not permitted to spend any amount of town money, or use facilities or equipment to promote a Proposition 2 1/2 override. At Tuesday night's meeting, they expressed knowledge of the law, but noted they

Frank "Bussy" Salvador reclines in comfort in his Marshfield home. Bussy retired from the Cohasset Post Office after almost 32 years there. A retirement party is planned in his honor.

Looking at life beyond Post Office

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

His memories of a childhood in Cohasset are of days spent in poverty, but, happily, he was unaware of financial trouble back then.

Francis "Bussy" Salvador says it is his family that brings back a flood of memories from those "wonderful" days on Stockbridge Street. But he does not dwell on the past.

Now, comfortably at home on Marshview Drive in Marshfield, he looks forward to a retirement that will include a return to the classroom and possibly, future employment.

Salvador, 57, retired Oct. 4 from the U.S. Postal Service after spending almost 32 years at the Cohasset Post Office. "I never worked anywhere else," he says, matter-of-factly. The truth is, Salvador says, he was offered a job at the local office on Ripley Road, and although he was tempted to quit in the beginning because of low wages, he decided to stay. Most of his fellow employees left the Postal Service, and Salvador became senior man on the staff after a little more than a year on the job.

He was single at the time, and decided he could manage with his hourly salary of $1.61 an hour. "Most of the other guys had to support a family, but they couldn't on that pay. There was

School officials to list budget items

by Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset school committee members were told to make their fiscal 1991 capital budget recommendations both realistic and comprehensive.

Joseph McElroy, liaison to the schools from the capital budget committee, attended the school committee meeting on Nov. 6 to go over the preliminary capital budget items.

The school committee has a list of 11 projects with a price tag of $700,000. Given the bleak economic climate, Superintendent Stephen Hart expects that some projects will be cut this year. He emphasized that all must be accomplished within the next five years.

High on the priority list is replacing the antiquated bathrooms at Osgood School. The lavatories aren't the only plumbing problem at the elementary school. Osgood has been experiencing chronic problems with the sewage system since the beginning of school. School officials hope that the problem is a correctable obstruction, but if the leaching field needs to be replaced it would rate a top priority rating as well.

Other top ranked items include window replacements at all three schools and heating system repairs or modifications at the high school and Osgood.

A computer writing lab at the high school is likely to be the most controversial item in the school's capital budget, but the administration rates it a top priority.

Students are unable to get sufficient time on the computer to make them useful. Currently, the English department has five computers parceled out

Old Colony report being prepared

A draft of the long-awaited Old Colony Railroad Rehabilitation Project environmental report, which should number 1,200 pages, will probably be ready by Christmas.

Members of the project's citizens advisory committee will be the first to review the environmental impact report. According to project director Stephen Polechronis, the CAC will have 30 days to review the document and make comments. The report will then be made public throughout the Old Colony region.

Three hundred copies will be supplied to town libraries and town halls throughout the region, he said, some including several pages of technical back-up information. The public will be invited to comment on the seven-chapter report for a 45-day period, and then their comments, along with the CACs, will be included in a final environmental report.

"It is a project that can't afford not to be done."
Stephen Polechronis, Project Director

During that time the MBTA will schedule a series of public hearings throughout the area during which citizens will be invited to share their comments and concerns.

That report will then be forwarded to the state Environmental Protection Agency and the Urban Mass Transit Authority (UMTA) for further comment.

A final environmental report will be developed, utilizing the solicited comments, and "final clearance will be given to design the preferred alterna-

Cohasset's week

Status of CHS football

Reports of the demise of football at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School are premature.

According to Superintendent Stephen Hart, discussions about the future of football are in the very preliminary stages. The school committee has final authority over the sports program. No plans have been made to put the subject on their agenda for discussion.

School officials are considering putting varsity football on hiatus for a year or two, but leaving the junior varsity program untouched.

The primary motivation is reportedly the difficulty in fielding a team. Whether any savings could be derived from such a move is unclear. Although the football program costs the most to operate, it also brings in income for the athletic budget. With the Thanksgiving game slated to be hosted by Cohasset in 1990, substantial revenue would be lost if Cohasset were to dump football.

Additionally, student athletes pay a user fee to participate.

New CHS student groups

Two new student groups have been started at Cohasset High School.

The first group is CVS -- or Community Volunteer Service. Student participants are engaged in a variety of volunteer projects. They collected canned goods for a local food bank earlier this month. Current activities include canvassing for Wellspring and participating in a five mile walk-a-thon to raise money for the meals on wheels program. Volunteer opportunities at varying levels of participation are planned because time can be a problem for busy students.

Student organizer Robin Hayes told the school committee at their Nov. 6 meeting that volunteering "not only helps us to grow as people, but helps in the community."

The group meets every Tuesday at the High School.

The second organization is the Peace and Social Justice Group.

The group was organized to promote political awareness. Eventually they hope to establish a local chapter of Amnesty International.

The group is sponsoring an overnight fast during Oxfam Hunger Project Week. The fast is slated to begin at 2 p.m. on Nov. 20.

Hobart Lane resident John Dwyer took this photo using a a telephoto lense from his vantage on shore. Cohasset lobsterman Kenn Silvia, 28, escaped from his 26-foot boat seconds before it exploded into flames Monday afternoon. Silvia swam for ten minutes in the cold waters off Minot's Light while fellow lobstermen rushed to his rescue. The Coast Guard extinguished the flames, but the three year-old boat is in ruins. Silvia believes the explosion was caused when he attempted to fix a gas line in the boat's stalled engine. A spark was set off when he turned on the ignition, causing a fire in the vessel. Minutes later, according to Silvia, the boat exploded into flames, but not before he jumped overboard to safety.

Tax payments due by Dec. 7

The first-half fiscal 1990 real estate tax bills were mailed on November 6. This payment must be received in the Collector's Office on or before Thursday, December 7. The office will be open until 7 p.m. on the due date. For any payments received after the due date, the interest will be computed at 14 percent from November 7.

Each year there are a number of tax bills returned to the treasurer/collector because of improper mailing addresses or change of ownership. Any property owner who has not received a tax bill should contact the Collector's Office at the Town Hall, 383-9900, extension 113.

Failure to receive a tax bill does not waive payment of the tax and does not excuse the homeowner from interest charges on payments received after the due date.

Town Hall hours: Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m., Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The treasurer/collector encourages early payments to help the town meet its weekly obligations.

New housing member

Anthony Finegan was designated by selectmen to be a member of the Housing Sub Committee of the South Shore Coalition. Finegan replaces Chartis Langmaid who recently resigned from the committee.

Veterans' Day Proclamation

WHEREAS, the United States, Great Britain, and France established a holiday known as Armistice Day to celebrate the ending of World War I on November 11, 1918, and following World War II recognized this holiday as a tribute to the dead of that war, and

WHEREAS in 1954, following the Korean War, the date was officially designated in the United States as Veterans' Day to honor servicemen and women of all wars up until that time and subsequently including The Vietnam War, and

WHEREAS, brave men and women of Cohasset joined the various military services and travelled across the face of the earth to defend the ideals on which this Nation was founded, many having sacrificed their lives in this defense,

NOW THEREFORE, the Board of Selectmen of the Town of Cohasset call upon the citizens of Cohasset, on Veterans' Day, November 11, 1989, to reflect on the sacrifices of these men and women, and to join together and participate in such ceremonies and observances as are appropriate to the occasion and to do all things necessary to a proper recognition of the sacrifices made in the defense of the liberty and freedom which we hold so dear.

GIVEN UNDER OUR HANDS AND THE SEAL OF THE TOWN OF COHASSET THIS THIRTIETH DAY OF OCTOBER IN THE YEAR NINETEEN HUNDERD AND EIGHTY NINE.

BOARD OF SELECTMEN
Burtram J. Pratt, Chairman
Rocco F. Laugelle, Vice Chairman
Martha K. Gjesteby
Diana D. Kornet

Light plan postponed

Selectmen's plan to shutoff 59 street lights has been temporarily extinguished.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon originally figured that disconnecting the lights would save the town about $4,000. But since he announced the plan, Doyon has learned that Eastern Edison will charge the town an amortized rate because of conversion to sodium vapor lights in 1984 and 1989.

The payments for the conversion are amortized over a five-year period for above ground lights, and over ten years for those lights wired underground. In all, Doyon said, the disconnection would cost the town $10,033.

"I do not feel this town is overlighted. There are no sidewalks with hills and winding roads. Given this (new information) I am not in favor (of disconnecting the lights)," Kornet stated.

Selectmen voted to table the proposal, with Selectman Rocco Laugelle, an Eastern Edison employee, abstaining from the vote.

Store to reorganize

James Hoban, owner of Cohasset Meat and Produce Centre, Inc., said his business has not failed, as indicated in an article published in last week's Cohasset Mariner.

He filed for Chapter 11 in the U. S. Bankruptcy Court on October 18 because he is reorganizing, Hoban said.

By Thursday, Nov. 9, Hoban said the store will become a Star Market agency store, but it will take several more days to change the store's inventory. The reason for the reorganization, Hoban said, is to "better serve the people, to offer better quality, to have more competitive grocery prices, and to participate in Star Market's sales.

"However, we will continue to carry our own meat," Hoban said

"The reason we are reorganizing is to have more competitive prices. The most popular 250 items in the store will be less expensive than the Super Stop and Shop," Hoban stated.
